form in her arms and kiss her. Presently Jack's footsteps are heard. Mrs. Arden steps into the next room. The door opens, and Jack exclaims: "Why, Alice, you look radiant! What is it, little girl? Good news?" "Jack, do I ever look unhappy?" "No, but you look extremely happy tonight."

"I guess happiness is in the air," replies Alice, with a roguish smile. "Perhaps you may inhale some of it. But be seated. Supper will be cold."

"Have you made a mistake, Alice?" asks Jack as he sees an extra plate laid. "For whom is the third plate?"

A hand is laid on his shoulder. A voice which causes him to start says, "For me." In less time than it takes to tell it Jack has exclaimed "Mother!" and clasps her so tightly she fears she will never be free, kissing her again and again.

When mother and son have recovered their composure, Mrs. Arden tells him how her conscience rebuked her after hearing the sermon, and when she sat looking at his picture and longed for the sound of his voice she determined to find him and bring him home.

Mr. Rymer enters at this point, and great is Alice's, or, as he calls her, "young Mrs. Arden's," dismay to find that "the persistent book agent" and the lawyer are one. Jack is delighted to see his old friend.

After greetings have been exchanged between smiles and tears Jack turns to the group, saying, "Well, you all formed a conspiracy against me, but if all plots ended as happily as mine this would be a good world."

Within a week they have gone to live with "mother," dispensing with their dot. Jack's mother is happier than she has been for years. "Young Mrs. Arden" has a staunch admirer in Mr. Rymer, who thinks she is charming. He and Jack are fast friends. Alice wonders why Jack should tell her his mother was stern. For her part she thinks there is no one—excepting Jack, of course—so nice as his mother.—Boston Post.

MEXICO'S GREAT DAY.

CITY OF MEXICO, Dec. 12.—Pilgrims footsore and weary from long trips from distant parts of the republic, and pilgrims surrounded with all the pomp and magnificence of palace cars and big automobiles. American millionaires and Mexican peasants, Spanish dons and blanketed Indians, as motley a crowd as ever gathered in any city in the world.

turned today toward Guadalupe with all the pious fervor of Moslems for Mecca. For today is set apart in honor of the Virgin of Guadalupe, the patron saint and protectress of Mexico, whom every loyal son of the church worships as a goddess.

Just as all roads lead to Rome, so did all roads lead to Guadalupe today and the slumbering village of last week which has been showing signs of life for several days was, overnight transformed into a seething metropolis.

Today—Guadalupe day—fully 100,000 people thronged the streets of Guadalupe Hidalgo, paying tribute to America's holiest shrine and worshipping Nuestra Senora de Guadalupe, the patron saint of Mexico.

Here in the city the day was generally observed as a holiday, the business streets being deserted save for the people leaving for the celebration at Guadalupe.

"Nuestra Senora de Guadalupe" dates back to 1531, ten years after the conquest of Mexico by the Spaniards, when, according to tradition, the Virgin Mary appeared to an Indian on the spot where the church now stands and made known to him that she wanted an edifice erected to her honor there.

HIS MOTHER.

Mrs. Arden sits in her luxuriant boudoir gazing intently on her son's picture, which rests on a table, wishing she could hear the sound of his voice echoing through the house again. She had cast him off because he had contracted a misalliance, refusing to hold any intercourse with him. In vain he pleaded. She remained immovable.

It is now two years since his marriage, and, though she has often longed for his presence, she has never acknowledged it until now. Perhaps she might have remained estranged had it not been owing to the sermon which the minister preached Sunday on "Mother Love," relating several touching incidents of sacrifice which mothers have made for their sons. What had she done? Disowned her son because he married a poor girl. What need of her being so bitter? If Jack loved the girl, why was she so obstinate? She resolved to search for him and bring him home.

Two months have passed. Mrs. Arden has left no stone unturned to find her son, but to no avail. She fears she will be unsuccessful. Perhaps years may elapse before any account of him may be obtained. She is pacing the room nervously when Mr. Rymer, her lawyer, is announced.

One glance is sufficient. She steps forward, exclaiming, "You have good news?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Rymer; "I have seen your son, but did not make my presence known. He lives in G. and is employed by Wright & Carter as bookkeeper. I obtained my information from Mr. Wright, confiding the story to him, knowing you will want him to come home with you. He is glad for Mr. Arden's sake, but sorry to lose such an earnest worker. I also called on Mrs. Arden, but as a book agent, and I admire his taste. While their home is not luxurious, everything is cozy, and I am sure she is an excellent wife."

"Oh, I am so glad! Mr. Rymer, if I start immediately I could reach the house before Jack, tell his wife who I am and surprise him when he comes to supper, could I not?"

"Yes; there is a train at noon. That is an excellent plan. You will call tonight. Jack will be pleased to see you, and—"

"I should like to see him. Yes, I shall call. Goodbye!"

Evening of the same day. Mrs. Arden has been at her son's home two hours, long enough for her to agree with Mr. Rymer by admiring his selection of a wife. Alice, Jack's wife, is unlike the Ardens, being small and fair, while they are tall and dark. Mrs. Arden and Alice have become the best of friends. They are awaiting Jack's arrival. When they hear his footsteps, Mrs. Arden will step into the next room and await an opportunity for her appearance.

"How the time drags!" exclaims Alice as she kneels beside Mrs. Arden, clasping her hand. "Dear mother, I am so happy! I long for Jack to come, knowing he but wished to be reunited to you to complete his happiness. Every moment seems an hour."

"What a cross woman I have been! But," smiling fondly into the upturned face, "I did not know I had such a lovely little daughter."

"I guess you thought I wanted Jack's money, but you know now, don't you?" Her answer is to take the slender

COUNTRY BOYS WANTED FOR BUSINESS POSITIONS

Business men of Oakland and San Francisco, and other large cities, want young men reared in the country to prepare for commercial positions. Experience has shown that the average boy from the farm has habits of industry and integrity that make for success.

The Polytechnic Business College of Oakland, Calif., has made a phenomenal record in training and placing young men and women in business positions and the College is so located as to provide homelike accommodations at very low rates.

It is said that every young man who has taken the complete course in business training at this College has received remunerative employment upon graduation.

An Illustrated Catalogue will be sent free to any one who will write to Prof. W. E. Gibson, 306 Tenth St., Oakland, Cal.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Blakeley returned this morning from a trip to Portland.

The young man who took the Turkey from J. F. Templin's yard Friday evening and carried it up Oak Street under his arm, is known. If he will return the same at once he will save himself a great deal of trouble.

A man believed to be one of the bandits who robbed the East Side Bank in Portland made his appearance at the local bawdy house a few nights ago. The visitor displayed a huge roll of bills of $100 denomination. He disappeared from the city the same night, and since that time the local authorities have tried to locate him, but so far have failed.
