MAY FACE A PERJURY CHARGE.

Witness Against Cusick Contradicts Himself Seriously.

PORTLAND, Or., Dec. 11.—Admitting on the stand in the United States circuit court this morning that he perjured himself in his testimony Wednesday, A. R. Jones, a government witness in the trial of Albert L. Cusick, who is said to have filed on four claims and filed false affidavits, may face a perjury trial himself. Judge Wolverton recommended that District Attorney McCourt investigate the matter.

Jones, who appeared as witness for the government, stated Wednesday, on being cross-examined, that he did not receive anything for his relinquishment of a homestead at Jump-Off-Joe, about 20 miles from Grants Pass. Cusick's attorney, James Cole, cross-examined Jones, and asked him several times whether he received any consideration for his relinquishment, to which the witness positively replied that he had not.

Wants Case Reopened.

United States District Attorney McCourt told the court that although he had closed the case for the government yesterday, he wished to have Jones on the stand again, as the latter told Deputy District Attorney Evans last night that his statement as to receiving anything for his relinquishment was not correct, as he did receive $150 which was, he claims, for the improvements on the land. Immediately upon Attorney McCourt's statement Cole sprang up and told the court that the defense knew all the time that the witness had received this money and that he had also filed on another claim, and in his cross-examination of Jones tried to extract from him the statement that he learned yesterday that Cusick's attorneys knew about the transaction and that Jones, to save himself from a charge of perjury, hastened to correct his statement.

May Now be Prosecuted.

In his request to the court to hear Jones, Attorney McCourt stated that Jones would have to take any consequences that his correction may cause, and it is probable that steps will be taken to prosecute. Jones. Not only does Jones face a charge of perjury, but also for a false affidavit, as he had also admitted that he had filed on another claim after he had sold his relinquishment. Attorneys differ whether Jones can be prosecuted on the last charge, as he may try to prove that the money was paid to him for improvements on the land, and not for the land itself, but the United States statutes, it is said, define the case clearly, and state that a person may not file on more than one homestead.

IN MEMORY OF CYRUS BURT.

Died, at his home on Deer Creek, near Roseburg, in Douglas county, Ore., Cyrus Burt, aged 76 years, 9 months and 21 days.

He was born in Green county, Ill., Feb. 11, 1832, living there with his parents till the fall of 1838. In the year 1839 they moved to Munro, Wis., residing there until in 1843, moving thence to Walworth county, Wis. They settled near the village of Whitewater, where they remained until the fall of 1852, when he, with his father's family, started for the long and perilous journey to the distant and almost wilderness of Oregon.

Wintering in Galesburg, Ill., they continued their journey in the spring of 1853, with slow ox teams, through hostile tribes of Indians and all the many trials and deprivations, such as the old pioneers can remember so well.

Among them was hunger, thirst and loss of sleep. So exhausted the men became that they dreamed on their feet as they plodded along the dusty way through the long, hot days, only snatching a few hours sleep at night when released from guarding the camp from stealthy Indians.

As provisions became short they divided with others until they were reduced to the necessity of living principally on meat, bought at exorbitant prices.

They arrived in Oregon in the fall of 1853 and early in the year 1854 settled on Deer Creek, in Douglas county, where he lived until the day of his death.

He was a man of sterling character, true and faithful, very appreciative of friendship and friends and intensely affectionate to those dearest to him. He was very tender to all dumb animals and birds and enjoyed the hills and solitudes of nature. Here, when age and disease had enfeebled him too much for ordinary labor, he sought the strength and comfort of their peaceful skies and purer air. But his greatest enjoyment was in his books, companions both of his waking and sleeping hours, by look and sign indicating that his interest was still with them; those precious books whose silent presence ever more shall speak of him.

He never recovered from the stroke of paralysis he received in the fall of 1906, but grew more feeble until another followed on Sept. 14, 1908, from which he lingered on until Dec. 4, 1908, when the weary struggle with disease and pain was ended.

Very precious is the memory of his seasons of rejoicing, when God's great love seemed flooding his soul with a strong trust and lifting his faith to higher worlds than this. Never on earth can he listen to the melody of the dear old hymns he loved so well. But sweetly has the poet sung:

"The sunshine of Heaven beamed bright on thy making
And the song that thou heardest was the seraphim's song."
He was the eighth in a family of twelve children, three of whom died at the advanced age of 74 years. Had he lived until the coming February he would have been 77 years old. His father's age at death was within ten days of 89 years. Three sisters survive him: Mrs. Chauncey Nye, of Prospect, Jackson county, Or.; Mrs. A. H. Brown, of Deer Creek; and Miss Sophronia Burt, of Deer Creek, Deer Creek, Or., Dec. 7, 1908. M.
