MAIL ORDER MENACE

Residents of a Community Should Patronize Local Merchants.

GET MORE FOR THEIR MONEY

Some Suggestions by a Drummer on Combating the Evil That Were Followed by an Eastern Merchant With Good Results.

"I hardly knew the old place at first," remarked the drummer who was in a small eastern town and had dropped in to see Brown, the merchant. "My, but you folks have slicked up the place since I was last here."

"Yes; we have organized an improvement society lately, and we've been busy, I can tell you," replied the merchant. "It takes the women folk to start the ball a-rolling in a thing of that kind, and it has opened our eyes to what can be done when all take an interest in the work. Business, however, isn't booming to any great extent."

"Mail order people cutting into your trade?" asked the drummer.

"That's about the size of it," sighed Brown.

"Well, it's a shame. You merchants pay taxes and contribute to the support of the community and are active in building up the town, but instead of appreciating this fact the residents send a great deal of their money to the big city stores."

"I wouldn't care so much if they saved anything to speak of by it or if they got any better goods, but they don't."

"Of course they don't," agreed the drummer. "I sell goods enough to know that. Somehow people in small towns think they can buy best through the mail order houses, and that is where they make a big mistake."

"You can't convince 'em of that," said the merchant.

"Well, it's as Barnum used to say—'The people love to be humbugged.' It stands to reason that the mail order houses cannot spend the millions they do on advertising and give as much for the money as you fellows at home can, and people in many localities are waking up to that fact. Let me give you a few friendly suggestions while we are on this subject," continued the drummer. "You ought to make a close study of just what people around here want from time to time. Never let them ask twice for an article if you can possibly help it. This doesn't mean that you must carry a million dollar stock. Simply carry what you are pretty sure will be wanted—what the mail order houses are putting out to a certain extent. And let the community know what you have in stock. When they read the out of town catalogues and see something they want they conclude you haven't got it, and away goes coin that should have been spent right here at home. You probably had the same article in stock, and for less money too. If you don't advertise, you might as well close up shop."

"Yes, I advertise occasionally," said Brown.

"Occasionally won't do. It is persistent advertising that wins out for the merchant. You want to spend every dollar you can afford to in advertising in your local paper and keep right at it. The mail order houses lay out thousands of dollars on pamphlets and circulars and catalogues, and you may be sure they are past masters in the art of making them attractive. That's how they get the trade they do. You can do the same thing in your local paper and in other ways on a smaller scale. It doesn't cost a fortune to get out a catalogue. It's of no use to go on advertising the fact that your name is Brown and that you are 'doing business on a certain street' that doesn't interest the general public. Give 'em prices. Tell 'em what 'you've got to sell. Make a certain day of the week always bargain day and give people some reason to come to your store. You may lose money in the venture at first, but you keep it up and you'll get big results before long. Let the residents here know that they are not only hurting you, but the town as well, by sending their money out of it."

"I'll consider your suggestions," said the merchant thoughtfully. "Guess I will advertise more and try the catalogues too."

"That's the game. Let people know how you feel about this matter. Put it to them fair and square and have the stock to back you up. The mail order houses are draining the country of money that should be spent at home, and it is about time the residents of small towns realized it. Thousands of dollars are sent away every week for goods that could have been purchased cheaper in the local stores. The first duty of every good citizen is home protection. Funny they cannot reason it out that the more they spend in their own town the more money they are going to keep in circulation there and the more prosperous it will make the community. Manufacturers looking for a site on which to erect a plant are not going to locate in a town where half the stores have 'To Let' signs on them. Why, if everybody traded out of town just to save a few pennies, there wouldn't be much left of it in a short time. Well, goodby, Brown. I'll be around this way soon."

It was two months later when the drummer visited the store again. This time the place was so crowded with customers, however, that he had no chance to bring up the mail order matter, but the grateful look and hearty handshake the busy merchant gave him told the story. A. B. LEWIS.

ELKS' CREED.

"Don't keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up 'til your friends are dead. Fill their lives with sweetness, speak approving, cheering words while their ears can hear them, and their hearts can be thrilled and made happier; the kind things you meant to say when they are gone, say before they go. The flowers you meant to send for their coffins, send to brighten and sweeten their homes before they leave them. If my friends have any alabaster boxes laid away, full of fragrant perfume of sympathy and affection which they intend to break over my body, I would rather they would bring them out in my weary, troubled hours and open them, that I may be refreshed and cheered while I need them."

"I would rather have a plain coffin without a flower, a funeral without an eulogy, than a life without the sweetness of love and sympathy. Post mortem kindness does not cheer the burdened spirit. Flowers on the coffin cast no fragrance back over the weary way."

"The faults of our brothers we write upon the sand; their virtues upon the tablets of love and memory."

FINE THREE-SHEET WALL CHART, 28 by 40 INCHES IN SIZE

Every Review subscriber, whether new or renewal, who pays up all arrearages and one year's subscription in advance, at any time before 1908, may have their choice of one of the two splendid premiums described below, absolutely free. Since January 1st, The Review has enjoyed the best year's business in its history, enabling us to largely increase our telegraphic news service and otherwise improve the paper. In order to further show our appreciation of this increased patronage, and to still further increase our present splendid circulation, we offer these unparalleled premiums, free.

We first mention our beautiful, three-sheet Library Wall Chart, each sheet 28x40 inches in size, printed on both sides of each sheet. On the first page of this chart is a large, up-to-date county map of Oregon, in colors, showing the new county of Hood River, congressional districts, cities, towns, postoffices, rivers, creeks, mountains, lakes, railroad lines, etc. Also pictures of the rulers of all the leading nations, with their flags in colors. The second sheet shows maps of the United States, Alaska and our nation's island possessions, together with a large amount of information concerning them, and state seals of each state in the union. The third sheet shows maps of the world, and outlined on the two hemispheres is the route of the U. S. battleship fleet now on the way around the globe. Other routes of travel are shown, with distances, etc. Portraits of all the presidents are given, and there are detailed maps of Canada, Mexico, Panama and the Canal Zone, all maps being in colors. There are population statistics and other valuable information. These charts retail at $1.50 each and are worthy of a place in every home and school. We will give one free to each subscriber who pays all arrearages and two dollars in advance for the Twice-a-week Review, or three dollars in advance for the Daily Review.

DO YOU WANT A PAIR OF SHEARS?

Every lady likes to have a good pair of shears. We have secured a limited number of pairs of fine tension shears, each pair eight inches in length, and accompanied by the maker's guarantee for five years. Such shears retail at $1.00 to $1.25 per pair. While they last we will give them away, absolutely free, to our subscribers, on the same conditions as we give the Wall Charts. You may have your choice of either of these fine premiums. These are doubtless the best FREE OFFERS ever made by any newspaper to its subscribers, and either will merit your admiration at sight. Send in your order before the supply is exhausted, as they are bound to go rapidly.

Should you desire to increase your supply of reading matter at small cost you will be interested in our clubbing rates with other publications. We can procure for you any American publication you want. Here are a few of our splendid
