FREE OREGON FROM FURTHER DOMINATION.

Of Wall Street That Blocks Development of the Great Central Portions of the State

Salem Journal, Friday: "Strike off the shackles from the great undeveloped interior of Oregon."

"Amend the Constitution and emancipate Oregon from the slavery of monopoly."

That was the cry of the united business interests of Portland before the Oregon legislature.

A railroad from Boise through central Oregon to Coos Bay was the slogan of those who control the commercial destinies of the metropolitan of the Northwest.

Chairman Campbell of the legislative delegation, invited the leaders to remain over, last night and help frame up the amendment to the constitution to be submitted to the people at the next election.

It is now up to the legislature to pass the McArthur bill under which a commission of nine of the strongest men of Oregon will go to work to unlock central Oregon and open a way across the state to the Pacific ocean.

Action by the legislature will be followed by four sessions of the Oregon and Idaho Development Congress, beginning at Boise, February 26-27, followed at Ontario, La Grande and Burns.

Delegation from Portland: William MacMaster, W. B. Ayer, Herman Wittenberg, A. H. Devers, C. E. S. Wood, J. N. Teal, Henry Hahn, M. G. Munly, C. F. Adams, Ed. Ehrman, J. A. Keating, William Hanly, E. S. Stanley, A. M. Drake, C. S. Jackson, C. W. Hodson.

The legislative hearing was held in room three, first floor of the State House and many legislators were present.

appeal to the Well-Informed in every walk of life and are essential to permanent success and creditable standing. Accordingly, it is not claimed that Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is the only remedy of known value, but one of many reasons why it is the best of personal and family laxatives is the fact that it cleanses, sweetens and relieves the internal organs on which it acts without any debilitating after effects and without having to increase the quantity from time to time.

It acts pleasantly and naturally and truly as a laxative, and its component parts are known to and approved by physicians, as it is free from all objectionable substances. stitution to enable the state to aid and encourage the construction of railroads.

Col. C. E. S. Wood pointed to a big wall map to show that Eastern Washington was criss-crossed with railroads, and filled with big cities, while eastern Oregon was vacant. Three-fourths of the state was practically undeveloped. Harriman would not build. Portland had not enough capital. The state alone could act. Portland capitalists, manufacturers and business men, the Grange and the farmers generally were back of this movement. He read from the book on railroads by Governor Laramie, of Iowa, to show that state-aided and state-controlled railroads were practical, were profitable and successful. It made a tremendous impression on the large audience. The people had the same credit and resources that Harriman had, and could use it with tremendous force if they wanted to, and that was what they were now up against.

Henry Wittenberg spoke for the manufacturers and business men of Portland. They wanted markets, and this battle was the battle for self-preservation. How many times had they been handed splendid promises. At the present rate of construction our children nor our children's children will see a railroad into Coos Bay. Any partnership with Harriman in central Oregon was hopeless of results. He proposed that the people of this state help themselves. Harriman's representatives pretended that they would hurt Portland trade if they built railroads where they were projected. Help us to help ourselves. Here is a country of 45,000 square miles, rich in every resource, but shut out of the markets of the world.

Henry Hahn, the wholesale grocer, spoke for the Chamber of Commerce. His traveling men go into every county of three states and report the need of railroads. More than 12 years ago the O. R. & N. began to promise railroad extensions, but not one had materialized. The only line—the Shaniko branch—was not built by Harriman, but bought by him after it was found to be profitable. Harriman had plenty of money to obstruct but none to construct. Keep out of my preserves, says Harriman. My preserves are eastern and central and southeastern Oregon. I spend nothing in Oregon. I only collect tolls. I am not on earth to give you transportation, but stagnation.

A. H. Devers dropped a few words in the scale as to the advisability of this resolution. He advocated the spending of five or six million dollars to break up the isolation of interior Oregon if we had to do it with the dynamic force of public opinion.

J. N. Teal thought the state had the right to help themselves. The port of Portland bonds were a lien on every dollar of property in that port district. In the same way a state-aided railroad, built on the pledged credit of a district or state, was a lien just as good.

The fundamental proposition underneath it all was the idea that the people could not be shackled and

PILES

"I have suffered with piles for thirty-six years. One year ago last April I began taking Cascarets for constipation. In the course of a week I noticed the piles began to disappear and as the end of six weeks they did not trouble me at all. Cascarets have done wonders for me. I am entirely cured and feel like a new man." George Krider, Napa, Cal.

prohibited from helping themselves. In the long run the people had profited from every effort to help themselves. Submit this to the people, and let them say shall we be shackled forever. There is a growing tendency to concentrate all railroads in a few hands. Shall the public control the transportation systems, or shall the few monopolists control the public. This was the poser Mr. Teal put to the committee. A large part of Oregon is paralyzed. The people have the power and the means to build their railroads and all they ask of the legislature is the right to exercise this power. The point has been reached where the individual could not undertake railroad building with any hope of success. It would pay Oregon to build roads, and give them to the people to operate free gratis. The building of highways had made all nations great and the railway was the modern highway.

Complete Program Outlined

At the close of the hearing before the legislative committee of the house and senate, the chairman invited as many of the Portland delegation as could remain over to stay and help perfect the amendment to the constitution, under which the work of the development will be undertaken. The committee remaining were Messrs. MacMaster, Ayer, Wood, Teal, Adams and Hodson, of Portland; Wm. Hanley, of Burns; W. S. U'Ren, of Oregon City and Col. E. Hofer, of the Oregon and Idaho Development congress. The joint resolution was perfected and reported to the legislature today. It was the unanimous desire of all present that both the amendment and the McArthur bill authorizing the governor to appoint the citizens' commission of nine Portland business men, be put through both houses without delay, so that immediate action can be had from the Idaho legislature, now in session, and then put the biggest men and all the power of both states behind the program for breaking up the blighting grasp of a system that will not do anything to develop Oregon, and keeps all others from doing anything to develop it.

Many Sleepless Nights.

Owing to a persistent cough, relief found at last.

"For several winters past my wife has been troubled with a most persistent and disagreeable cough, which invariably extended over a period of several weeks and caused her many sleepless nights," writes Will J. Hayner, editor of the Burley, Colo., Bulletin. "Various remedies were tried each year, with no beneficial results. In November last the cough again put in an appearance and my wife, acting on the suggestion of a friend, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The result was, indeed, marvellous. After three doses the cough entirely disappeared and has not manifested itself since." This remedy is for sale by Hamilton Drug Co.
