Alleging that his wife continually nagged him, called him vile names and accused him of adultery, not only to his face but to other parties, R. E. Veatch, a well known S. P. conductor, has sued Anna Veatch in the Circuit Court here for a divorce.

He also wants the custody of their 10-year-old daughter, Dorothy. They were married on July 26, 1896.

J. V. Brennan, manager of the Brookside Poultry Farm, has just received a pen of four-horns and a cockerel, of Black Orpingtons, from Fort Wayne, Ind. These birds are of the famous strain "Duke of Kent," originated by D. N. Foster.

The original Duke of Kent was brought to this country from England as a cockerel by Wm. Cook, originator of all Orpingtons, and has never yet been beaten in the show room. These black Orpingtons are different in coloring than any other black chicken, being so highly colored that the feathers have a bottle-green appearance that makes them very attractive. Mr. Brennan should raise some prize winners from this pen of fine birds.

ABOUT ROSEBURG AND ITS BOOSTER.

Medford Mail-Tribune: Roseburg, dismanned on the one side by Eugene and on the other by Medford, is making a supreme effort to get into the procession. To this end the Roseburg Commercial Club has employed Mr. Darby Richardson at $1000 a year salary as a professional booster to advise the city and county.

In a statement issued in the Roseburg Review, Mr. Richardson announces that "the keynote of the new advertising campaign will be the presentation of facts, in concise simple form, instead of glittering half-truths vivified by an immoral imagination."

This probably refers to the advertisements of Umpqua valley orchard lands, now being indiscriminately exploited in newspaper advertisements, and many of which are on the wild-cat order. Continues Mr. Richardson:

"Advertising of Douglas county lands heretofore has been vague and indefinite, and the language of hyperbole has been almost exhausted. Glittering generalizations and highly colored pictures have been disseminated, in many instances to the detriment of the community. Lack of information has been the real fault of such exaggeration."

"Douglas county, owing to the mass ignorance, indifference and petty differences and unintelligent advertising has not become known to investors and settlers nor advanced to the extent which have other less favored sections of Oregon. Douglas county and the city of Roseburg have been, until lately, notorious for backwardness in claiming the attention of the outside world. Many of its business men and mossback landowners seem to have passed into a stupor of torpor. The ordinary methods of middlemen at small salaries has been tried and found wanting. So it was decided to secure the services of an expert in industrial building, one whose experience and training along sound, economic, industrial and financial lines would insure the intruding of overdue capital and the highest grade of farmer and industrial worker. Such a man was found—Mr. Darby Richardson, who was for some years at the head of the Wall Street department of leading New York newspapers and recently staff member of a great magazine."

Medford wishes Roseburg progress and Mr. Richardson the fullest measure of success in winking up his catalytic land-owners" but he is a heart-breaking and soul-wounding job in straightening out the licks in the mossback mind - isolation and provincialism, the narrow view in the narrow rut, have done their work only too well and progress will be expensively slow.

The method of employing a paid booster, an expert in municipal publicity, is the usual way of galvanizing into life an Oregon community. It has been successful in Portland, Eugene, Albany and other towns that had peacefully vegetated for many years. It has never been attempted in Medford, which is unique among the fast-growing cities in that respect.

Instead of one paid booster, about whom the Commercial Club advises, we have many unpaid boosters, all devoting time and labor for the public good. The responsibility and duties rest on many shoulders, and the spirit of co-operation and patriotism thus generated has done more to unite the people and instill into them the spirit of progress than any paid booster could ever accomplish.

At the same time, Medford has reached a point where the right kind of a paid booster would be the most investment the community could make. Clerical and routine work has attained such a volume that it practically absorbs all the time of the secretary of the Commercial Club and it is hardly fair to ask these busy men at the head of large enterprises to continue indefinitely an avocation themselves for the community.

It is a dangerous thing to take a rough medicine containing opiates that merely stifle your cough instead of curing it. WAR ON BILLBOARDS Many Sections Waging Crusade Against Obnoxious Posters.

TOWN ADOPTS THE TAX PLAN Lynchburg, Va., Finds That a Good Means of Meeting Question of Disfigurement by Advertisements—Future of the Billboard.

Lynchburg, Va., Finds That a Good Means of Meeting Question of Disfigurement by Advertisements—Future of the Billboard.

The billboard as a means of advertising will soon be but a memory—a nightmare—if public sentiment against it continues to increase in volume and effectiveness as it has during the past few months. Never since the American Civic association opened its campaign for the abatement of the billboard nuisance has there been such an awakening to the fact that "the billboard is an eyesore, a nuisance and a disgrace and should be abolished altogether," as the Washington Herald aptly puts it.

From the east to the west organized effort to eliminate or regulate the billboard has been taking definite and effective form. Carefully prepared ordinances have been passed, and others are being drawn for passage. Cincinnati recently scored against the billboard by the adoption of a building code containing elaborate provisions regulating outdoor advertising. Under that code a large number of sign spreads have been ordered down.

Moreover, many advertising merchants are voluntarily abandoning the billboards. In the far west Portland, Ore., and Seattle, Wash., are grappling with the problem in an intelligent manner. In Cambridge, Mass., a woman's club secured the removal of many stands by appealing to the advertisers direct. Lynchburg, Va., has placed a most effective ban on the billboard by means of taxation.

This is an ingenious way of meeting the difficult question of the disfigurement of towns and cities by advertisements. So long as public opinion is dormant so long will glaring advertisements continue to make the street and the landscape ugly.

It is of course idle to blame the advertisers. They are simply looking after their interests. They have gone so far as to place the islands above Niagara and the august face of the sphinx. Fences, barns, sides of houses, publish the virtues of this nostrum or that in flaming posters.

If the aesthete says they are offensive the farmer replies that they pay, and so long as he prefers money to beauty it is hard to see where the remedy is to be found.

But in Lynchburg the city fathers have decreed that for every billboard the advertising firm shall pay a minimum tax of $2.50. For larger boards the tax is more. If people will make the locality hideous they must pay for the privilege. That is fair enough, and it would be a good thing if the idea could be introduced generally.

The American people believe in advertising, they read advertising, they patronize advertisers, but they are discriminating. They don't want the kind of advertising that mars scenery, that shuts out light, that depreciates adjoining property, that offers a rendezvous for neighborhood juvenile matherings of dangerous tendencies.

If the billboard must exist the day is not far distant when it will be a subject of municipal, state and federal regulation. It will be regarded as a revenue producing structure, assessed and taxed accordingly. It will not be permitted to exist as a menace to health. The property rights of the man who does not believe in billboards and refuses to grant space on his own lands for their erection will be regarded.

No amount of seductive offers of the billboard owners, such as free space for handable work like the exploitation of preventive measures against tuberculosis, as recently made to the National Association For the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, will stem the tide of popular disapproval of the billboard. The opposition is strong, and it is growing. It is a most laudable undertaking for the making of a "better and more beautiful America."

Correct mistakes of clerks or delivery wagon drivers promptly and cheerfully and customers will then forget to lose their temper. Wrangling over the matters is as bad as refusing to do anything at all.

HIGHWAYS IN THE WEST. Use of the Automobile by Farmers Aiding the Improvement Movement.

Road improvements in the west, already noticeable to a slight degree, are sure to follow when the farmers of that section awake to the realization of their condition as compared with some of those of the east. Nothing will arouse the farmers to this so much as the use of the automobile, and it will be the more general use of the car by the farmer that will result in better roads.

In sections where farmers are using cars to any extent road improvements are already noticed, but there is still room for more, and more there will be in the near future. Motoring is most enjoyed on good smooth roads. Farmers owning cars realize this as well as any, and not only are they bestirring themselves toward appropriations for good highways, but are in many cases furnishing the labor necessary for road betterments.

In some farming sections of the west automobile owners can be picked out by a glance at the roadway in their immediate neighborhood. Near their houses rough, uneven surfaces have been smoothed off and soft, slippery roadways resurfaced. Each farmer seems to take interest in the roads near his own home. When more farmers have cars, and they are buying them rapidly, there will be more short stretches of perfect roads, and at some future time, not far distant, the stretch will be unbroken.
