

GOVERNMENT AND GOOD ROADS.

There is just one really essential thing in which we Americans are far behind Europe, and that is our city paving and country highways. There you have to search for a poor road, while here, outside of a few states, one must buy guide books and hunt for the occasional good ones. Apparently this discrepancy against us is due to the fact that there national government has a controlling influence while here it has none, in regard to roads. We have donated nearly 200,000,000 acres of public lands to assist in building railroads, against whose excessive rate charges we now require an Interstate Commerce Commission. We have spent nearly $600,000,000 in river and harbor improvements and lighthouses to safeguard commerce. It is coming to be understood that drainage of large tracts should be done by the Federal Government and not by the states. The logical solution of National good roads is likewise under Government supervision and with Government aid.

The French government contributed $612,000,000 to good roads' construction and supervises their maintenance today, with the result that it has the best roads in the world.

Residents in agricultural districts naturally assume that good roads are for the city man with an automobile. This is anything but true. On the contrary, 45 per cent of the population of the United States live on farms or in towns of 2500 inhabitants or less. Of the billion dollars spent yearly to run our Government, rural free delivery and the Agricultural Department are the two things which are of immediate benefit to the farmer and these cost $40,000,000, or only 6 per cent. As to the constitutional right of Federal Government to do this work there appears to be no question; in fact, early in the 1890's it was done, but when railroads came into existence the building of highways was dropped. However, portions of these roads, now a century old, are still in use and bear witness to the excellence of their construction. The high character of the work of our Army engineers in irrigation, drainage, and on the Panama Canal, warrants confidence in a good-roads movement under Federal direction, which shall insure a permanent construction and what is quite as necessary—proper maintenance. One plan which seems to be generally improved is for a division of the costs into thirds; the Government, the state and the counties so improved, each paying an equal amount. As this cost would be spread out over a term of years, the increased value of farm land affected would be much more than the cost to the counties.—H. H. Windsor in the November Popular Mechanics Magazine.
