HYGIENE OF VIOLINS.

The Proper Kind of Care For These Sensitive Instruments.

The violin and violoncello are most sensitive to atmospheric conditions and suffer from atmospheric variations quite as much as the tender vocal cords of the singer. Those who have attempted to make the violin an accompaniment by hanging it upon the wall have had reason to regret taking such a liberty. The violin loses its varnish and gradually its pitch and timbre.
The artificial heat of rooms in winter makes its tone raucous when it does not obliterate it entirely. Metal cases, moreover covered, are equally unfit for it. A strong, well varnished wooden case, even though it be not especially attractive to the eye, suits the sus-ceptibilities of the violin much better.
Certain qualities, sometimes unexpected, in the wood play an important part in the fabrication of notes, causing progressive deterioration. There was a time when manufacturers applied to their product several coats of "paint"—i. e., a concentrated solution of bichromate of sodium potash in boiling water. The wood soon acquired a yellow tone, and under the action of light after drying the color darkened and took on the aspect of very old paint.

For commercial purposes this was all very well, but what happened to the purchaser was that as soon as he began to use his instrument exposed to the light the bichromate worked on the gelatin, which the manufacturers employed to color the wood and prevent the penetrating of the varnish, while some element in the bichromate of soda was converted into stone. The violin suffered petrification, which impeded its tone and rendered it useless.

JEWELS MADE OF ROSES.

How the Dainty Petals are Turned Into Fragrant Trinkets.

There could scarcely be a lovelier gift than a string of tiny beads, an annulet or a trinket to slip among your kerchiefs and laces to keep them sweet, made of roses and of the love and taste and patience that must go into the fashioning of such a gift.

The making of rose trinkets is an ancient custom revived, and roses made hundreds of years ago are fragrant today.

Gather the rose petals when the dew is on them and screen them clear of every foreign substance. Put the clean, dewy petals through a food chopper—the finer they are ground the better—and all the house will smell of roses. Spread the pulp on a china platter and set it in the sun for three days, stirring in a few drops of spring water now and again to keep it moist.
When the pulp "works" in the sun and reaches the consistency of a light foamy dough that can be pressed smooth without crumbling it is ready to mold.

Before they are quite dry run a good sized baton straight through the middle of the beads or annulets into a board and set the board in the sun for ten days, and they will grow hard and fragrant. Thread the beads on a strand of silk, the annulets on fine ribbon, and the order they grow the sweeter they will smell. — Christian Herald.

Plucky Birds.

Compared with mammals, parental love is stronger in birds. In protecting their nests and young, birds often show courage and strategy, more or less of which is doubtless inherited.
Even the so called dangerous mammals, the bears, mountain lions, wildcats and other mammals that are best able to protect themselves, seldom make a stand against domestic intrusion. Rarely do they attempt to entire an enemy from their home by strategic means, but at the first warning of danger they either hide or watch the intruder from a safe distance. But there are very few species of birds that do not attempt to defend their homes in some way, and even the most timid evince more intelligence than most mammals. — Callie's.
