WOOLWORTH BUILDING GREATEST IN WORLD.

5 Stories High, Required Two and a Half Years to Erect and Cost $24,000,000.

The Woolworth building, the highest habitable structure in the world, was completed and ready for occupancy on the first day of the present month. This huge structure, which occupies an entire city block of lower Broadway, New York, was begun about two and a half years ago.

This building is the most wonderful and marvelous piece of constructive engineering ever conceived or undertaken by man. Nearly 30,000 tons of steel were required in erecting the framework. It is said that not a single steel beam that went into this structure remained on the site of the building an hour after its arrival, before it was put in place. It was all brought to the building site practically on the minute, as it was impossible to store the material in the busy streets of lower New York.

Tower of Babel Not in It.

Seventeen million bricks were required in the walls. Over 80,000 electric bulbs were used in the lighting of this structure. Strung less than three feet apart, these bulbs would light the entire 40 miles of waterfront around Manhattan Island.

The building has a total weight of 206,000,000 pounds. The engineers figure that at times this weight is increased by wind pressure to 250,000,000 pounds. It is designed to withstand a wind pressure of about 250 miles an hour, a velocity which, if ever attained, would blow every building off Manhattan Island.

No other building since the creation of the earth has reached such a height as 910 feet, which is the height of the Woolworth building from its foundation, at bedrock to the top of the tower. The Woolworth tower is 76 feet square and 55 stories high. The roof of the main building is 386 feet above the street. This main structure is 29 stories in height and covers a plot of ground approximately 150 feet by 200 feet.

Has Twenty-Eight Elevators.

The building contains 27 acres of rentable office space, and about 13 acres more is taken up with elevators and corridors. There is a battery of 28 elevators, 12 of which serve the tower above the main building. Every safety device known is provided, including air cushions, so that there is absolutely no danger, even though the average tenant will be able to get to his office from the street within 20 seconds. It takes just about one minute to go from the ground floor to the top office floor in one of the express elevators.

Not One Inch of Wood.

The expression "absolutely fire-proof" is often used in connection with the modern office buildings, but is rarely true. In the case of the Woolworth building, however, it is true. There is not a particle of wood in its construction. The doors, partitions and trim are all of steel terra cotta and glass.

The grounds and buildings are said to have cost Frank Woolworth, the owner, about $24,000,000, and experts in New York office building profits affirm that he will never be able to get in excess of 3 per cent per annum on his investment.

The ladies of the South Methodist Church will hold a window sale of home cooking next Saturday at Marshall's Grocery store.

FEATHER EATING.

The habit of pulling and eating feathers is common among fowls confined. No cure of this habit, once acquired, is reported, and it is best to kill the fowls for table use at first sight, as they quickly teach others the same fault. The cause is doubtless a need of appetite for something contained in the feather. A mixture of dried flesh and bone, specially prepared for poultry with a small quantity of sulphur, will act as a preventive. Bits of fresh lean meat, or corals of finely powdered fresh bones, will answer. Another remedy is to give them a sheep liver to pick, hanging it within reach. Also feed wheat scattered in the earth or litter of their houses. This will give them food and work.
