GOOD ROADS RELATION TO THE RURAL SCHOOLS.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—The rural population is more willing to support better schools today than at any previous time. It is being realized that all educational activities or agencies must be more or less correlated, and, more than all else, that they must be made accessible to the children. In many counties where bad roads prevail, most of the schools are of the antiquated one-room variety. They are usually located along bad roads which, during the winter, when the schools are usually in session, become so nearly impassable as to make it difficult for the children to reach them. This condition causes irregular attendance and restricts the educational opportunities of the child. Not only this, but it often impedes the economic consolidation of these smaller schools into larger, stronger graded schools, with high school courses, directed by a competent principal and corps of teachers, according to the Office of Public Roads, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

On the other hand, in counties which have improved their roads, the schools are easily reached, the average attendance greater, the efficiency largely increased and economic consolidation made possible. Regular attendance at schools means consistent and regular growth of both school and pupil, and consolidation of schools means a maximum of efficiency at a minimum of cost. It is also noteworthy that there is a marked tendency for the consolidated school to become the social and intellectual center of the community. Most modern rural school houses are so constructed as to serve the community as gathering places for various kinds of public meetings, and where vans are used to convey the children to school during the day they are frequently pressed into service to haul the farmers and their wives to institute work, lectures, or entertainments at the school house. The consolidated school becomes a sort of community center to which all

NAPOLEON'S TRIBUTE TO WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON is dead. This great man struggled against tyranny. He has achieved the liberty of his country. His memory will be cherished forever by the French people, as by all freemen of the two hemispheres, and especially by the French soldiers, who, like Washington and the American soldiers, fought for equality and liberty. Therefore the First Consul directs that for ten days crape be hung on all the flags and guidons of the republic.—Napoleon (Order to the Army, Champs de Mars, 1800).

educational and social activities converge, and in order that it may properly perform that function all of the highways leading to it should be so improved as to render it readily accessible throughout the year.

WHAT THEY THOUGHT ABOUT WASHINGTON.

Few men who have earned for themselves a celebrated name in the history of the world exhibit such a harmony, such a concordant symmetry of all the qualities calculated to render himself and others happy, as Washington, and it has been very appropriately observed that, like the masterpieces of ancient art, he must be the more admired in the aggregate the more closely he is examined in detail.—George von Raumer (Holland).

Thou hast a name whose characters of light shall never depart.
"Thou standest upon the dustiest plain and warms the coldest heart.
A wary fit for any land where freedom's life is won.
"Land of the west! It stands alone—
—It is thy Washington."
—Ella Cook (England).

The talents and the great actions of General Washington have secured to him in the eyes of all Europe the truly sublime title of the "Liberator of America."—Count d'Estaing (France).

Washington's Unselfishness.
When I was first honored with a call into the service of my country my duty required that I should renounce every pecuniary compensation. From this resolution I have in no instance departed, and I must decline as incompatible to myself any share in the personal emoluments which may be indispensably included in a permanent provision for the executive department and must accordingly pray that the pecuniary estimates for the station in which I am placed may during my continuance in it be limited to such actual expenditures as the public good may be thought to require.—First Inaugural.

THEY WON PRIZES FROM WASHINGTON.

The Washington headquarters house, containing many relics of the Revolution, is now the chief feature of interest at Valley Forge. One of the relics is a pocketwatch. The history of which serves as evidence of the poverty of the army. During the winter the camp-laborer saved the house of the cattle he slaughtered. Many of the men needed pocketwatches. When he had thirty horses in his collection there were so many horridly rusty that a small civil war arose in camp over the distribution of the prizes. General Washington said:
"I shall write on this paper a certain number between 1,500 and 2,000. The thirty men guess for nearest to the number shall receive horses."
One long-headed patriot guessed 1776, the year of the Declaration. He hit the nail square on the head and got his pick of the horses.

Roseburg Oregon

A NEW BOOK ISSUED BY AN OREGON PIONEER.

This book just issued from The Review press, is from the pen of an old pioneer, who came to Oregon with the first wagons from "the states," that trooked west to the Columbia River. The book begins with "the twilight age" of Oregon, when the settler's cabin was on one side of the creek and the Indian village on the other—when the white man and the savage were "next door neighbors," and their children played together in the shade of the same tree. When the settlers' boys and girls were all "cowboys" and rode bucking bronchos on the rodeo and roundup with lasso trailing from the horns of their saddles. When men and women were patriotic and honest, and "the root of all evil" had not sprouted in this region. It was the "heroic age," before "the golden age" began.

A hundred and one scenes are depicted in this book in which you will see how people "lived and moved and had their being" in the "days of old, the days of gold, the days of '49."

There are one hundred printed pages and the paper, printing, binding and finish are first class. Copies of the book may be obtained of Jesse Applegate at the Soldiers' Home, Roseburg, Oregon. Price 75 cents.

JUDGE FOR YOURSELF Which is Better—Try an Experiment or Profit by a Roseburg Citizen's Experience.

Something new is an experiment. Must be proved to be as represented. The statement of a manufacturer is not convincing proof of merit. But the endorsement of friends is. Now supposing you had a bad back, A lame, weak, or aching one. Would you experiment on it? You will read of many so-called cures.

Endorsed by strangers from far-away places. It's different when the endorsement comes from home. Easy to prove local testimony. Read this Roseburg case: G. H. Poole, prop. blacksmith shop, 318 N. Rose street, Roseburg, Ore., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills on several occasions when my back and kidneys have bothered me and I have always found them a good remedy. I recommend them to anyone suffering from kidney complaint."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

MASQUERADE BALL.

There's a
J.I. CASE Plow for every soil.

A J. I. CASE is a "light draft" plow, and will do efficient work for a long time. It is easy to say that any plow is the best on earth, but that is what they all claim. But here's part of our claim: EVERY J. I. CASE plow is built on a SOLID STEEL FROG. Mold-board, share, landside and beam are all firmly bound to this one piece. This makes the strongest support yet devised and is typical of J. I. CASE goods.
