

MARCH 21, 1914.

SUTHERLIN VALLEY.

Fen S. Walte is making extensive improvements on the several cottages on Second avenue, near Umpqua street.

W. S. Brown, of the O. A. C. extension division, gave an interesting demonstration on pruning, Wednesday, in near Sutherland Valley orchards.

Strong & Son, of Spitzenberg farm, have bought of W. E. St. John, who is agent in this vicinity for the Hardie Manufacturing Co., one of the Hardie triplex power sprayers of 200 gallons capacity.

Cecil Carr, the popular city deliveryman, received a severe cut on the head one day last week by falling from his wagon to the pavement on Central avenue. Dr. Bennett fixed him up and Cecil continued to stay on the job.

Guy McReynolds became so enthused over Tom Ardway's new automobile that he went to Roseburg last Sunday and purchased a similar car. It is rumored that several more of our citizens contemplate purchasing cars in the near future, and as a result Frank Smith, smiles and is planning on enlarging his garage.

Citizens generally will be pleased to learn that the Sutherland Brick & Tile Manufacturing Co. is to operate its big plant north of town to its full capacity during the present season. Repairs and alterations are now being made, and it is expected to have the plant in full operation by the last of the present week. The capital stock of the company was recently increased from $50,000 to $100,000, and George A. Paton, who owns a majority of the stock, will give his personal attention to the management.

Spring Blood and System Cleanser.

During the winter months impurities accumulate, your blood becomes impure and thick, your kidneys, liver and bowels fail to work, causing so-called "Spring Fever." You feel tired, weak and lazy. Electric Bitters—the spring tonic and system cleanser—is what you need. A. H. Ridgeway, of Sutherland, and Thomas Ridgeway, a brother of Iowa. The estate is said to be valued at approximately one million dollars, and has an income of $50,000 per year, which will be paid annually to the two brothers. Thomas Ridgeway, of Iowa, contemplates taking up his permanent residence in Sutherland Valley in the near future.—The Sun.

A SINGER WITH TWO VOICES

Episode In the Life of an Opera Manager.

The manager had made rapid strides in his profession. He was only thirty, yet he was sole proprietor of a successful comic opera troupe. He was very businesslike with the members of his company, but they all liked him.

One morning he was receiving applications of candidates for the chorus. A girl with brown eyes and comely face and figure was admitted.

"You are"—he asked.
"Leonoreta Traver."
"You sing?"
"Soprano."
After a trial of her voice she was engaged.

Leonoreta sang so well that she was soon cast for one of the inferior parts. At the first rehearsal after the assignment she astonished the manager by singing a deep contralto. Few women could reach the notes she struck.

"What's the matter with your voice?" asked the manager astonished.
"Don't know, sir."
"You have been singing soprano for two weeks and now you have bloomed into a contralto."
"Sometimes my voice is much lower than at others."
"Your part isn't written for a contralto. I'll have to change it or change you. I don't want to do either."

"I may be able to sing soprano when I go on in costume."
The manager studied the matter, looking the while at the girl curiously. It was a very strange case.

Leonoreta sang contralto till the evening of the first performance, when she came to the theater looking pale and thin.
"By Jove," said the manager, "you look as if you'd been keeled! I hope there's no new voice to provide for."
"I've had a sick spell," replied the girl. "I think my natural voice has come back."
"What?"
"I shall sing soprano tonight."

The manager hurried off to attend to another matter, but his mind was on the girl and this remarkable change of voice. When Leonoreta went on she sang soprano like a bird and so delighted the audience that the manager was delighted also and cast her for a higher part at the next performance.

One morning Leonoreta was in the manager's private office drawing her salary, when he looked up at her and said:
"I'm going to put on a piece next week with a man's part in it that would just suit that contralto voice you took on not very long ago. Now, if you could only call it up at will, I'd cast you for the part and pay you $50 a week."

"When is the first rehearsal?"
"On the 15th."
"I may sing contralto by that time."
"What makes you think so?"
"Well, I'm liable to a relapse at any time and haven't had one for a long while. It's due now."

"Nonsense."
He engaged a baritone for the part, who deserted three hours before the performance. Leonoreta was with the manager when he received the unwelcome news.

"I'll take the part," she said.
"You? Has your voice relapsed?"
"Not yet, but I think it will before 8 o'clock this evening."

"Well, upon my word! Do you mean to say that?"
"I'll be here ready for the part."
At 8:40 o'clock she went on with one of the finest baritone voices that had been heard in that house during the season. She had been announced verbally as Signor Barilli to take the part of the man whose name was on the program. At the end of each act Signor Barilli was called before the curtain and at the end of the opera received a perfect ovation.

"Now, see here," said the manager after the performance. "You're a wonder. You're worth much more than I am paying you. A girl who can sing soprano or baritone at will is worth a fortune. We start on the road next week, and if you'll go with me and will guarantee to sing the different parts as I may require I'll give you a hundred a week and all expenses. You see, I save the salary and traveling expenses of one principal role. I'll make you another proposition." He dropped his businesslike tone and spoke fervently. "You know very well that you have long been my favorite in the company. Indeed, I may say that ever since I first saw you I've been dead gone on you. Will you marry me?"

The girl burst into a laugh.
"Come home with me," she said, "and talk it over."

The manager consented, and when they reached Leonoreta's lodgings she excused herself for a few moments. She soon returned hand in hand with a young fellow, the very counterpart of herself, her twin brother.

"I am Leonard Traver," said the boy, "and this is my sister, Leonoreta. When she fell ill some time ago I took her part, though I couldn't sing soprano. Tonight I sang the baritone part and received your proposition of marriage. My sister would answer it, but now that you know there would be two salaries and expenses to pay instead of one I presume it is withdrawn."

"You bet it isn't," said the manager, clasping Leonoreta in his arms.

MR. BRYAN'S PAPER.

THE COMMONER.

Through the columns of the Commoner Mr. Bryan meets the attacks of those who are opposed to Democratic reforms, as well as the clever misrepresentations made by the organs of the "special interests." As an exponent of the plans and purposes of the National Democratic administration, the Commoner is of unusual interest to all progressive citizens. Mr. Bryan's signed editorials give a timely discussion of public questions and are interesting and valuable to all students of governmental affairs. It is a big 32 page monthly. Besides supplying the best political and general matter, it has interesting home, fashion, farm, cartoon and other departments. A carefully prepared report of the work of the various members of the President's Cabinet is especially interesting to each taxpayer. The subscription price is $1.00 a year.

Many of our readers are already Commoner subscribers; many others may desire to be. To make it convenient as well as inexpensive for our readers to send subscriptions to the Commoner, we have arranged with Mr. Bryan to furnish his paper to our readers, at a special low rate. Only $2.50 pays for a full year's subscription to the Twice-a-week Review and a full year's subscription to the Commoner. If already a subscriber to either paper your expiration date will be extended one year.

If you have something to sell, to trade, to rent, or have lost something or found something, use a Want Ad. in the Review.

PATRIOTIC PENNANTS

Offered at Low Cost

The Review will enable its readers to get a valuable collection at slight expense.

Readers of The Review will be given an opportunity to make a handsome collection of pennants at a nominal cost. Through a wholesale contract with one of the largest pennant manufacturers in the world, this paper has been able to purchase a series of beautiful pennants at such a low rate that it will sell them to its readers for fifteen cents (15 cents) each.

The Tenth pennant to be offered in this series is Harvard, a picture of which appears in his ad. This pennant is of the best felt and is 36 inches long and 15 inches wide at the base.

Such a pennant ordinarily sells for 75cents. This Harvard pennant will be offered by The Review for one week only. After that time a new subject will be offered. Watch the papers each week for the announcement of the various subjects.

Persons who desire to make a collection of these magnificent pennants should clip the coupons from The Review and present them at the business office with 15 cents.

Those who reside out of town can get them by parcel post.

No one can afford to be without a collection of these pennants. The subjects will all be dignified and the pennants correct as to color and detail. These pennants are admirably adapted to the decoration of the den, library or parlor. They are also suitable for use in offices, and strongly appeal to the student. Many are made into table and lounge covers, wall blankets, portiers and home ornaments.

Come to The Review office and inspect one of the popular pennants now being offered. A glance will persuade you that no such bargain has previously been offered to home decorators. Clip the coupons, as they are valuable.

All you have to do is to clip the pennant coupon which appears in today's paper, and bring it to this office with 15 cents. Only one Pennant with each coupon. Send it to us with 20c, the extra 5c being to cover cost of mailing.
