THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

It is the consensus of opinion of some of the keenest and most far-sighted men that the United States is entering on an era of prosperity that will completely overshadow even the great periods of business prosperity that have already come to this country since the Civil War. They assign many sound reasons for this prediction.

The first—and the one which is the most significant to many of them—is that we have gone through a season of business depression for the first time in our history without a panic. The old-time speculators who could always scent a panic and make money out of it are completely confused. They have seen a financial state of affairs never before known. They have seen the banks full of money during a business depression and no particular call for the money on any side.

They have seen Europe throw back into this country from $250,000,000 to $300,000,000 worth of securities and have seen these securities absorbed and the gold sent to Europe without any particular fuss. That would have meant a panic in the stock market a few years ago.

They have seen a tariff enacted lower than the Wilson tariff, and yet they have seen raw wool, one of the best tariff barometers there is, sell higher than before.

They have seen a delicate railroad situation, that would have created a financial panic at any time in the past, studied and pondered over in a way that has simply taken the breath from speculators. The people have refused to become excited over it. They want it settled everywhere, but they want it settled right.

Why? Because the railroad industry is not the one dominating industry of the country any longer. While financiers have been juggling railroads the past 25 years business men have been building up other great industrial enterprises all over this land.

This is a bigger country than it ever was before. Its potential possibilities are being more and more realized in every direction. The farmers have become scientists, and the arid lands and the swamp lands are being reclaimed everywhere and being made to yield in such abundance as was never known before in the history of farming.

In the South malaria has been conquered and the rich swamp lands are no longer the terror they were. Irrigation and dry farming have brought new prosperity to the West and Southwest. Water power is being conducted over wires hundreds of miles where formerly it was all but wasted. The oil lands and the mineral wealth have burst the bounds of former monopolies and opened up vast possibilities that ever before, and the inventive genius of the American has never been idle. New miracles are daily being wrought by invention.

Why, then, have we had a business depression in the face of these things?

Simply because a great many people thought we ought to have it; we should have it; and must have it; it was due.

It was largely a mental state. There was no real need of it, or for it. Business men see that more clearly now. But many of them are more satisfied apparently because we have had it. And they have learned something.

They have learned that you cannot have panics unless there is "tight money"—unless the reserve is tied up, as it was for the past 50 years—tied up when it was most needed. This business depression we have been through has been valuable, then, in that it has demonstrated to all the people the wisdom of the present system of flexible currency. The old conditions have disappeared forever. Panics need not be feared.

As Mr. A. W. Douglas of St. Louis said at the Economic Club a few nights ago, there has been a curious psychological phenomenon during this business depression—the people of this country—people—have been optimistic through it all. They left their money in the banks. The common people had more confidence than the so-called financiers, and when the common people have confidence you can't have panics.

So now that the lesson has been learned, and that the greatest crisis in the history of the country are in sight, it is up to everybody to forget the mental depression, start in quickly and get aboard the prosperity train that has been simply standing still on the tracks waiting for the engineers to oil up for a long run.

Cape Cod Canal Opened July 4.
By far the most important event on Cape Cod, Mass., this summer will be the celebration of the opening of the Cape Cod canal on July 4. There will be a pageant showing the history of the Cape from hundreds of years ago up to the present time. The canal will not be wholly finished July 4, but will accommodate ships drawing not more than fifteen feet of water. By November it is expected that it will be practically completed and able to serve vessels having a draft of twenty-five feet of water. The canal cost $12,000,000.

BEAUTIFUL HAIR—A CLEAN, COOL SCALP.
Use Parisian Sage. It Makes the Hair Fluffy and Abundant.

It is needless for you to have hair that is anything short of perfect. If it is falling out, losing color, splitting or if the scalp burns and itches, immediately get from the Red Cross Pharmacy or any drug counter a 50-cent bottle of Parisian Sage—use it frequently—the first application removes dandruff, invigorates the scalp, and beautifies the hair until it is gloriously radiant.

Parisian Sage supplies hair needs—is perfectly harmless. It contains the exact elements required to make the hair soft, wavy, glossy, and make it grow thick and beautiful.

You will surely like Parisian Sage. It is one of the best and most delightful hair tonics known.

Have Arundel tune it.

PURSUED BY A BLACK NEMESIS
Guilty Brought to Justice In a Mysterious Way.

"If I swing for this in your place I will come back on earth to see that you get your own proper punishment." The words were spoken by David Nolan, a former boy, to one who had pointed him out as a murderer. David, while crossing a field, saw a man hurrying toward him. When he came up David noticed that he was very much excited. He asked David how he could reach the nearest railroad station and while the boy was telling him put his hand on his arm. Then, drawing a sheath knife, he told David that he would give it to him for his information. After that he darted away.

Half an hour afterward, while David was cutting wheat, some half dozen men and boys, among them the man who had given him the knife, came hurrying across the fields. They advanced straight toward David, and when they reached him their leader asked the one who had given the knife: "Is he the one?"

"Yes, I saw him draw a knife from the body and come in this direction." "Blood on his shirt sleeve!" exclaimed one.

"And here's the knife!" cried another, drawing it from David's pocket. "All right. Come along."

David was charged with having killed a man whose body had been found beside a road half a mile away. He saw the trick the murderer had played upon him. The man had meanwhile washed his hands in a pond and while trying to reach the railroad had been accosted by a party who had discovered the body. He told them that he had seen the murderer leave it and guided them to David. It was then that David said:

"If I swing for this in your place, I will come back on earth to see that you get your proper punishment."

David did not swing for the crime. He was electrocuted and mainly on the testimony of Newton Hawkins, the man who had left blood on his arm and given him the knife.

Some time after Nolan's execution Hawkins was approached by a negro who entered into a brief conversation with him. An hour later when Hawkins was entering the house in which he lived, he saw the negro looking at him. He made a dash for his shadow, but the negro slipped into an alley, and Hawkins lost him.

Hawkins saw no more of the negro, but heard of him. The negro was evidently making inquiries concerning him. Hawkins, who had guilt on his conscience, was intending to slip away when he was arrested on a charge made by the police of having committed the murder for which David Nolan had been executed. When his case came up he found the police in possession of a chain of evidence which had been sent to them anonymously. It was originally a clew, but they made it evidence.

During the trial the prisoner, while casting his eye over those sitting as spectators in the courtroom, saw the negro who had shadowed him. The negro was looking straight at him and continued his gaze. Then for the first time the threat of David Nolan occurred to him. He shuddered.

Hawkins was convicted of the murder and sentenced to death. When seated in the electric chair he cast his eyes over those standing about to witness his execution. There is a limited number of officials at such ceremonies, but in this case the doctored man saw some one else.

"The negro?" he gasped. "Take him away!"

At that moment the current was turned on, and the affair was ended. There has always been a double mystery in the matter of the Hawkins case. In the first place, the police never learned who had put them on the clew that resulted in obtaining the evidence on which Hawkins was convicted. In the second place, it has never been established whether Hawkins really saw a negro present the moment before he died or was so wrought upon by his approaching end as to see him in imagination. The officials declared that no permission to be present was given to any negro. All those who were there declared that there was no negro among them.

There is a possible explanation. About the time that Nolan was electrocuted it was asserted by physicians that such subjects do not die of electricity, but under the knife at the subsequent autopsy. This opinion was in a measure supported by the discovery that life is usually present in the body a long while after an appearance of it has vanished. These doctors made application to be permitted to experiment on an electrocuted body and were flatly refused by the sheriff. It is well known that Nolan's counsel was convinced of his innocence. It is also a fact that the lawyer was on intimate terms with the sheriff. It has been whispered that with the sheriff's connivance the doctors were permitted to steal Nolan's body and that they resuscitated it. This is the only theory that fits into all the conditions. If Nolan lived again he could not declare himself without bringing a swarm of hornets about the sheriff, who had saved him from a felon's death. It would be a case against his enemy. But did he witness the execution, and if so, how did he get it?

SHERIFF'S NOTICE OF SALE OF REAL PROPERTY.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of an execution and order of sale issued out of the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon for Douglas County, and bearing the date of June 22, 1914, and to me directed, commanding me to sell all of the right, title and interest of Grville L. Mellin, M. H. Evans and Hattie G. Evans, his wife, in and to the hereinafter described real property on the 20th day of December, 1913, or at any time since, or that they or any of them now have in and to said premises, to satisfy the judgment of J. P. Reinert for the sum of Eight Hundred Fifty-five and 50-100 Dollars, with interest from the 24th day of April, 1914, at the rate of 6 per cent per annum, and the further sum of Seventy-five Dollars attorney's fees and costs and disbursements in said suit taxed at Thirty Dollars; said execution having issued in that certain suit entitled in said Circuit Court wherein said J. P. Reinert is plaintiff and said Orville L. Mellin, M. H. Evans and Hattie G. Evans, his wife, are defendants;

Now, therefore, in obedience to said writ of execution and order of sale I will on Saturday, the 25th day of July, 1914, at the hour of one o'clock in the afternoon expose for sale at public auction at the main entrance to the courthouse of Douglas County, Oregon, in the city of Roseburg, and will sell to the highest bidder for cash, all the right, title and interest which the said defendants had and owned on the 20th day of December, 1913, or have had at any time since or that they now have in and to the Southwest quarter of the Southwest quarter of Section 35 in Township 27 South, Range 7 West of the Willamette Meridian in Douglas County, Oregon, containing forty acres, together with the improvements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereto belonging or in anywise appertaining; said sale will be made subject to redemption as prescribed by the laws of the State of Oregon, and I am commanded by said writ of execution and order of sale to place into the immediate possession of said premises the purchaser thereof at said sale.

Dated at Roseburg, Oregon, June 23, 1914. GEORGE K. QUINE, Sheriff.

Carloads of Flour

Flour is certainly moving at the Umpqua Valley Fruit Union's warehouse, across the tracks from the depot. People are buying their year's supply now, while the roads are good, AND AT ONE DOLLAR PER SACK. It helps the fruit growers to have you buy, whether a member of the Association or not.

GOLDEN HARVEST FLOUR (per 49 lb. sack) $1.00
This is our leader—a splendid Eastern Oregon high-grade flour. This is not a sale price. It is our regular price. We can do it for two reasons: First, this flour does not cost us what it would cost your dealer; and, second, we only need to make expenses, while he has to make expenses and his profit. When you buy from the Fruit Growers you get the profit.

RED, WHITE AND BLUE FLOUR (49 lb. sack) $1.30
The same grade of flour that you are paying $1.60 for now. Absolutely the finest high-grade hard wheat flour that is made in the Northwest.

MILL FEED PRICES:
Rolled Barley (70 lb. sack) ..... $1.00
Ground Barley (87 lb. sack) ..... $1.25
Ground barley for cows and hogs
Bran, ordinary (60 lb. sack) ..... 80c
Bran, extra (60 lb. sack) ..... 90c
This bran has high feeding value because it contains a large percent of shorts.
Shorts (50 lb. sack) ..... $1.45
Our mills make no middlings. This rich feed, which is usually sifted out of the bran and shorts and sold separately, is all in our bran and shorts. Compare the two before buying.

ALL FRUIT GROWERS SUPPLIES, such as Apple, pear and peach boxes (pine). All our boxes are PINE. Spruce boxes are cheaper but do not hold up well. The association advises against their use. All box papers, etc., at wholesale prices.
