

ELOQUENT PREACHER

Evangelist Taylor Delivers An Able Sermon

TENT WAS WELL CROWDED

Special Musical Program Much Enjoyed By All Present at Last Evening's Services

Monday night is usually considered a hard night to get a crowd together, and the fact that there was a good audience in the big tent at the street last night shows that the evangelistic meetings are taking a great hold on Roseburg. Again at the close of the meeting some fifteen people went to the front and either reconsecrated themselves or began the Christian life.

Musical Director Lane is getting the people used to some bright gospel songs which are proving popular and last night there was a special number by the chorus. Mrs. Taylor played a cornet solo which pleased the audience, and Paul Taylor sang with great effect Captain Stanley's song, "Serving the Lord in My Weak Way."

The sermon was strong and was preached from an Old Testament text, Lamentations 1:12, "Is it nothing to you all ye that pass by?" "Jeremiah lamented the down-fallen condition of the people of Israel, Solomon's temple in ruins and the best of the people carried by Nebuchadnezzar into captivity. The city was in mourning, her gates desolate, a mighty nation had fallen into desolation. Why? Because of grievous sin. Jeremiah, the old prophet, seemed to feel as if the calamity of the nation had been rolled upon his own heart, but did the crowd feel it? No, it was nothing to them. In the days of Moses a Jew would not step upon a piece of paper for fear the name of Jehovah might be written upon it, but now they would spit in God's face. There are men in Roseburg who would nail Jesus Christ to the cross if he were here. The same devil that has kept you out of the church for the last forty years is the same devil that nailed Jesus to the cross. My brother, is it nothing to you that people are going to hell daily in Roseburg, and you have not done your duty to stay the tide, to point them to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world? The purpose of the church is to evangelize the world, and if it does not do that it is a failure. I don't care how fine your churches may be, how luxurious your pews, how costly your carpet, how expensive your organ, how eloquent your preacher, unless the church is an evangelizing agency, leading men to Christ, it is a failure for the very thing for which Jesus called it into existence.

"The devil never takes a vacation, he is on the job all the time."

"The trouble is people don't want to do anything. God can't use a hitching-post or a tombstone in a cemetery."

"If anybody is willing to do anything, God can take that little and multiply it until it will fill the world."

"Thousands are going down hill around us every day, and never a sign nor a look nor a word nor a glad hand, nothing being done."

"There are people in Roseburg who would walk over the red-hot embers of hell to serve the devil, but who would not step over a straw to serve God."

"Can you look upon the tragic scene of Calvary, and say 'that is nothing to me'? Is it nothing to you that by your life you are trampling under foot your mother's love and prayers?"

"Is it nothing to you, my brother, that your example is on the wrong side and leading others astray? No man liveth unto himself and no man dieth unto himself. Is it nothing to you that you are wasting your golden hours and opportunities? They will never come again. Time and tide wait for no man. The mill will never wait with the water that is past. Jesus said, 'Now is the acceptable time, and today is the day of salvation.' If you would hear his voice, arden not your heart. You will hear the last sermon one of these days, you will hear the last prayer one of these days, you will hear the last invitation sung, you will hear the last call. You are taking a mighty long chance on a short life and a long eternity."

The closing appeal was strong and greatly affected the audience.

The subject tonight is, "What Must I Do to Be Saved?" Service at 7:45.

THE BATTLE OF MARATHON.

And the Mound Under Which the Old Grecian Heroes Rest.

A great Grecian landmark is the Soros, the mound erected over the graves of 102 Athenians who fell in the battle of Marathon, Aug. 12, 490 B. C. The mound is about forty feet high and 300 yards in circumference. Underneath the mound lie the heroes who died in this most decisive victory which prevented the Persians from invading Europe.

The battle had hardly begun when the Persians in immensely superior force, doubtless ten to one, pulled themselves together and by sheer mass broke through the Greek center. But this had been calculated upon beforehand. Miltiades employed strategy, making his line weak at the center, and allowed the Persians to break in. Then, with his heavy masses at the ends, he ground the Persian wings to pieces and fell upon their center. The most stubborn fighting, apart from the battle at the ships, was probably at this spot, half a mile from the shore. Six thousand four hundred Persians lay on this plain and along the shore, while 102 men of Marathon lay wrapped in glory on the field.

It was long suspected that the heroes of Marathon were buried under the mound, but Mr. Stals, one of the Greek ephori of antiquities, studying the plain, came to the conclusion that the surface of the soil had been raised by alluvial deposits eight to ten feet above the level of 490 B. C. In 1890 he drove a trench with a downward slant into the center of the mound and found the bones of the heroes with their weapons beside them.—Strand Magazine.

SINKING SHIPS.

If Completely Submerged They Must Go to the Bottom.

Answering a correspondent who writes: "I am very anxious to find out whether a ship will sink if the bottom of the ocean is at great depth or, at least, at such depth that the weight of the water would be greater than the weight of the ship. It is the opinion of many that at a certain depth the ship would remain suspended instead of sinking to the bottom. Please explain the exact truth of the matter." Edgar Lucien Larkin in the New York American says:

"Any mass that will entirely sink below the surface of the ocean will sink to the bottom of any sea or ocean on earth. This is because water is almost incompressible. "Enormous pressure in hydraulic presses has been made upon distilled and also upon sea water, and the diminution of volume—that is, increase of density—is only 0.00004 for ocean water for each atmosphere, i. e., each addition of fifteen pounds to each square inch. Then water soaked wood would be increased in density by very nearly the same amount.

"Hence if all of the wood in a wooden ship sinks below the surface it must go to the bottom. The question of reaching the bottom of the ocean is decided for any kind of matter of any ship or boat by its behavior at the surface. If all of the material of the boat sinks at all below the surface, then it will fall to the bottom of any sea, there being such a slight increase in density of water at the bottom of the deepest ocean."

Height of Waves.

Among the most trustworthy scientific measurements of ocean waves are those of Lieutenant Paris of the French navy. The highest waves measured by him were in the Indian ocean between the Cape of Good Hope and the island of St. Paul. Thirty waves measured during a northwest gale there averaged twenty-nine and one-half feet in height, and six of them, following one another with beautiful regularity, were thirty-seven and one-half feet in height. Some still higher waves were seen, but not measured. In a moderate breeze the length of a wave was found to be about twenty-five times its height, but in a gale only eighteen times.—London Globe.

A Kind Wish For Mother.

The five-year-old found his mother looking a bit unhappy.

"Have you a pain, mummy?" he asked sympathetically. When she nodded he thought a minute and then exclaimed:

"I wish a fairy would come and turn your pain into a piece of cake." Then the small boy asserted himself over the angel child, adding, "And I would eat it."—New York Sun.

One of the Family.

Stranger—I notice your name is De Marjory. Are you related to the wealthy De Marjories of Belgravia?

Poor but respectable De Marjory—I am a distant relative, sir.

"Indeed! How distant?"

"Well, sir, as distant as they can keep me!"

What Rules the World.

When Napoleon caused the names of his dead soldiers to be inscribed on the face of Pompey's pillar some one criticized the act as "a mere bit of imagination."

"That is true," replied Napoleon, "but imagination rules the world."

Lost Precaution.

"Your suit, my dear, isn't seasonable."

"That's odd, when I got a pepper and salt one too."—Baltimore American.
