A. HENRIKSEN, of Oakland, Oregon, Candidate for the Republican Nomination for the Office of Commissioner of Douglas County.

Inasmuch as Douglas County is entering upon an era in which much money must be raised by taxation it should be the aim of the people to see that this money is used with economy and effectiveness and believing that the taxpayers and voters of Douglas County should know how a candidate for commissioner stands on county affairs before the primaries, I herewith submit my platform:

First. The rule of publicity—let every one see how you are running the game. The spirit of service is to see to it that the thing you do for the public, and get money for is the best thing of a kind that can be done.

I believe in building and maintaining highways for the use and accommodation of the residents and the taxpayers of Douglas County. If I am nominated and elected I will not discriminate in road work between one community and another.

I believe that every road district should receive its proportion of road money, whether that community be large or small.

I further pledge that I will always bear in mind that it is the taxpayers money which is to be spent, and that I will use common sense and judgment in the distribution of the same. I enter the race for the nomination free from factional influence or ring obligation.

I further pledge that the taxpayers will always have my earnest attention and consideration in all questions involving the expenditure of their money.

I am not in this race for commissioner simply for politics, but for progress and development of Douglas County.

I will stand for strict economy in any and all matters, with efficiency first. I believe in less roads but better roads. A thorough knowledge of practical road building means better roads for Douglas County.

I believe in maintaining one main highway from one end of the county to the other, with lateral roads to each and every community. Building roads for tourists only with the taxpayers' money to please the whim of a chosen few will be discouraged.

I am a firm believer that the county should receive a dollar in value for every dollar of public money spent.

I believe in and will stand for strict enforcement of all laws upon the statute books.

Further that I will not stand for any boss rule, but will at all times recognize the sovereign rights of the taxpayers and citizens of Douglas County.

My past record is open to the citizens of Douglas County.

A. HENRIKSEN,
Oakland, Oregon.

Mr. Henriksen is the first one for that office, to come out and put his platform squarely before the voters of Douglas County. Mr. Henriksen in the years that he has been a resident of Douglas County, has proved himself to be a hard and tireless worker and a man of good business judgment. If nominated and elected he will bring to the office a wide business experience which will be of benefit to the county. (Pd. Adv.)

ROSEBURG MAN RIDE IN OVERLAND MACHINE BOUGHT BY COMMISSION

In yesterday's issue of the Oregonian there appeared a photograph of Carl D. Shoemaker, state game warden, together with the following article:

Allow us to present today one of Portland's most enthusiastic motorists, Carl D. Shoemaker, state game warden, who now hitches a new model 83 Overland in front of the State Game and Fish Commission offices on the ground floor of the Oregon building.

Mr. Shoemaker doesn't expect to catch every violator of the fish and game laws by hurdling logs and fording streams with his new car; that would be impossible, for, speedy tho his car is, it cannot be in all parts of the state at once. But during the coming months Mr. Shoemaker expects to drive down the coast as far as Gold Beach, at the mouth of the Rogue River, in Curry County, thru Josephine, Jackson and Klamath counties and thoroughly through the vast Central Oregon and Eastern Oregon districts.

Since purchasing his Overland a few weeks ago Mr. Shoemaker has covered more than 1000 miles along the banks of the Willamette, Columbia and Sandy rivers looking after problems connected with the administration of his office, and he is already an authority on road conditions in this section.

Before receiving appointment to his present position Mr. Shoemaker wielded an editorial pen on the Roseburg News and he also enjoyed the dignity of a duly examined and commissioned member of the Oregon State Bar. So if Mr. Shoemaker chances to come upon you along an Oregon stream when you are doing something the state fish and game laws forbid don't aggravate your case by arguing the matter with him, for he has supreme authority over his department and besides he knows every paragraph in the volumes of Lord's Oregon Laws.

A NEAT BOOKLET

Oregon Advertised By the Southern Pacific Company

The Southern Pacific Company has issued a booklet entitled "Oregon For the Settler," which is a very attractive piece of literature and which is designed for circulation throughout the country. It contains 64 pages and is just off the press. Each agent of the company will be supplied with a large number of the booklets for distribution in the East and Middle West.

The publication is a revision of similar booklets issued in former years by the Southern Pacific Company. It is brought down to date both in text and pictures and conveys a whole volume of first hand, accurate information concerning the resources of this state. Naturally its pages are devoted principally to an exploitation of the opportunities of the western part of Oregon.

SEE ROBERT HARRON AND NORMA TALMADGE STARS.

Sketches of These Attractive Young Players Who Will Be Seen in "The Missing Links."

Two interesting young stars appear in the new Fine Arts-Triangle play, "The Missing Links," coming to the Antler's Theater tomorrow. They are Robert Harron and Norma Talmadge. Harron plays the part of a banker's son, who gets suspended from college for a lively escapade. He returns to his home town and wins the affections of Norma Talmadge, a step daughter of the justice of the peace.

Robert Harron was born in New York, April 12, 1894. At the age of fifteen Robert left school to join the old Biograph studio as an office boy. D. W. Griffith, who was a director for the company, noticed [illegible] for parts in productions [illegible] an office boy. Among his [illegible] of this period were [illegible] with Mary Pickford; "The Mothering Heart" with Lillian Gish, and "Judith of Bethulia" with Blanche Sweet and Henry Walthall. Still under the Griffith direction, Harron appeared with the Reliance-Majestic-Mutual Companies in "The Great Leap," "Home Sweet Home," and "The Escape." Then he got a part as a soldier who is killed in battle in "The Birth of a Nation."

Miss Talmadge hails from Niagara Falls. She was born there nineteen years ago. Her first essay at pictures was when she was living in Brooklyn, N. Y. She was only 14 when she became connected with the Vitagraph. She was only a school girl at the time she donned long skirts to make herself look older when she appeared for a position. She has beautiful features, fine eyes and is able to convey a thought or an emotion by a slight movement of the head or the twitching of a finger.

YOUTHFUL AUTO THIEVES RETURNED TO SEATTLE

LeRoy Hess and Willard McDevitt, the Seattle youths who were arrested in Pass Creek canyon the first of last week as they were on their way south with an automobile stolen in Seattle a week ago Thursday, were taken to that city yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Campbell who arrived yesterday morning, says the Eugene Register.

Deputy Campbell says the boys on their way south left a long trail of robberies in their wake. After stealing the car, which they picked up on a prominent street corner, they entered a garage in that city and stole two tires. They robbed a store at Roy, Washington, entered a store in another town south of there and broke into several other buildings on the way to Portland. There is no report of their entering any stores the way to Portland. There is no revolver they carried when arrested somewhere in Washington and held up "Al" Emerson, a Cottage Grove farmer, with it a short time before they were stopped.

The deputy sheriff says these boys [illegible] of a gang of toughs [illegible] for a long time in Seattle. One of the members of the gang killed a man not long ago and [illegible] in the state reformatory.

Young Hess is 17 and McDevitt 11 years old, although the latter told the local officers he was 17.
