SAYS ROAD NEEDS REPAIRS.

Camas Valley, Ore., Sept. 18. The neglected road leading from Roseburg to Camas Valley will soon be impassable, as Mr. Weekly, Mr. Houser, Mr. Weekly's daughter and myself came over the road yesterday and we found one place where the planks were almost down off of the grade and very dangerous, besides other places where the boards were loose and would turn up on edge as we passed over them with the car. The bridge plank are very loose and as you drive over them they sound as if the bridge was falling. It is a cinch this road is not fit for auto traffic and wholly unfit for teams and wagons. They can be used with motor cars, but are not safe for teams. It has the real indication of a neglected road, and if you should ever travel across this Camas Valley road, say your prayers and bid farewell to hope, but should you get across you will go back via San Francisco, or take the steamer from Coos Bay to Portland and the train for Roseburg.

We seem to have plenty of pride when it comes to bragging about our state, but little when it comes to showing it by making roads and making our state look better.

In conclusion, we have a man in Camas Valley whom the county court appointed as road supervisor, a Mr. Lunan. When told of the condition of the road and that the planks were sliding off the grade and going down the hill, he said he hoped they all would slide off. Now as long as the county court has men as road supervisors who don't care how the road is, or hopes it will all slide down in the canyon, just so long will we have no roads.

D. C. JONES.

SOME FINE BERRIES.

S. J. Black today brought to The Review office several branches heavily loaded with ripe blackberries. In other twigs were green berries, which would probably have ripened had they not been plucked for show purposes. After being exhibited on the streets the berries were turned over to S. S. Josephson, of the Roseburg Commercial Club, and will probably be placed on display in the exhibit building near the depot.

BILLINGS MURDER CASE NEARING CLOSE TODAY; ARGUMENT IS BEGUN

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—The Billings prosecution today closed its rebuttal. Prosecutor Fickert began his argument this afternoon. During the rebuttal the state called several witnesses to corroborate John McDonald, who swore that he saw Billings leave a suitcase at the corner of Steuart and Market streets immediately before the explosion which killed nine persons.

PIONEER DOUGLAS MAN DIED AT SALEM AFTER A LINGERING ILLNESS

SALEM, Ore., Sept. 20.—Thomas Jennings, who died recently on his farm in the Spring Valley district in Polk County, for 41 years resided in Salem and vicinity, where he was numbered among the successful farmers of the Willamette Valley. Born in New Jersey, 45 years ago, Mr. Jennings came to Oregon in 1873 and located on a farm near Spring Valley, where he resided until his death, August 28. In 1879 he married Mary E. Earnest, who, with one son and two daughters, survives him.

The children are: Mrs. L. M. Wal-lace, Percy E. Jennings and Evangeline Jennings, all of Salem. Mr. Jennings' father was a pioneer resident of Douglas County, having come to Oregon in the early days with A. A. Engles, who now resides with his son at Peck. The deceased was well known to Sheriff George Quinn, of this city, as well as to other residents of Douglas County.

HARVESTING OF GREAT

PRUNE CROP IS MAKING

FAVORABLE PROGRESS

F. J. Norton, manager of the Ever-fresh plant at Sutherlin, was here today enroute to the southern part of the county where he expects to buy about 1000 bushels of prunes, to be handled by his plant. He has had a busy season so far with various products, at one time employing about 140 people. With the material at hand at present he now has only a few more days work and will then be in a position to handle a quantity of prunes.

In regard to the present situation of the prune harvest, many growers have found that their crop is larger than they have evaporator capacity to handle, although the harvesting has been going on most favorably so far. Several of the leading growers say that with another week of fair weather they will be practically "in the clear" so far as saving their crops is concerned.

It is reported, among others, that at the Caldwell orchards in Coles Valley, there will be a loss of nearly one-third of the present enormous crop unless some help can be secured from neighboring districts. A similar condition is said to exist at the Wollenberg orchards near Canyonville.

In the Winston neighborhood where several large new evaporators were erected this season, they are all overworked with an abundance of fruit. With another week of good weather, however, they feel that they will be in a position to save nearly the entire crop.

ENJOYED VISIT TOGETHER.

John Trent, secretary of the Nelson Lumber and Supply Co., of Grand Island, Neb., with his wife, arrived here yesterday and are visiting with J. P. Cole and family, in North Roseburg. The visit here was a great treat to both Mr. Trent and Mr. Cole, as the men were formerly playmates in Nebraska, and they enjoyed many a pleasant reminiscence after the separation of many years.

The first car of apples to be shipped from Roseburg this season left the local fruit union headquarters this afternoon to be shipped to John Nix & Co., at Chicago. The car contained Jonathans and this and one other car to be shipped next week will complete the shipment of this variety. Other apples will not leave here in large quantities until October. About 20 cars in all are expected to be handled by the local union.

R. G. Bounds, who died recently in Los Angeles, carried an insurance policy of $2500 in the Macabee lodge of this city. The climate at Calexico is very warm, and pests are numerous. At present, he says, the boys are very healthy.

The toupees are said to be the most modern constructed, and the owners have been congratulated quite generally here since the news of their arrival became public.
