LIFE AT BREMERTON NAVY YARD DESCRIBED BY ROSEBURG GIRL

Miss Agnes MacIver, who is stationed at the Bremerton navy yard, has written to friends here this week that her work is becoming more and more interesting. She writes:

"The navy yard is almost a little city of its own. Each one has his own certain part to do. There are sailors who act as postmen, and also railroads running through the yard and a number of queer looking trains. There are no trains running into Bremerton, so it is nice to see one over here once in a while. There are drydocks here and vessels of all kinds and descriptions. The large battleships, the submarines, and particularly the submarine chasers, are most interesting, as also are the vessels of the look-out.

"We were vaccinated for smallpox, but we still have to have the one for typhoid, and they say that is worse than the one we have had. Bremerton is quite an interesting place. You see more uniformed men than any others. I saw the laying of the keel for a submarine chaser here a few weeks ago, and was very interested in it. One of the Lieutenant's daughters, about three years old, drove in the gold spikes with a tiny gold hammer, and the naval band gave several delightful airs.

"There are all kinds of new recruits coming in for the submarines. It took me some time to get used to the air up here, as it is off the salt water and quite different and much colder than at Roseburg. There are lots of girls here from Oregon. We have not got our suits so far. Bremerton is only an hour's ride from Seattle. To obtain entrance into the navy yard, we have identification checks of brass, about the size of fifty cent pieces."

WEST ROSEBURG RESIDENTS WANT JOY RIDERS TO FIX BROKEN WALK

West Roseburg residents do not resent lending assistance to persons in distress, especially automobile distress, but in return they would like a little gratitude.

The complaint comes from persons who for some time have maintained a plank walk some distance beyond the Soldiers' Home, and according to the report the walk was torn up a few nights ago in order to assist an automobile from a ditch. The joy riders in addition to raising considerable disturbance appropriated the planks and after raising the overturned car, left portions of the walk along the roadway.

The complainants declare they have been to some expense to keep the walk in repair, and as they are now engaged in farm work, which is largely to the benefit of the whole community, it is their opinion that the joyriders would return and repair their damage or take warning for the future.

SEEKS TO OPEN DECREE.

A new phase in the litigation brought about to settle the affairs of the pioneer estate of S. Marks & Co., devolved today when L. B. Sandblast, administrator for the Mrs. Salomna Friedlander estate, made an answer to a former suit brought by E. L. Parrott. In the latter action, the plaintiff as administrator for S. Marks & Co., secured a decree which gave possession of certain property that had been claimed as the private holdings of Asher Marks. As Mr. Sandblast is interested in the Asher Marks estate because of a note given by Mr. Marks to Mrs. Friedlander, he asks to open the decree and re made a party to the defense. The decree was not been opened through default of Herman Marks, the administrator, to answer.

GRAVE STARTED; REFILLED.

Investigators Believe They Have Further Proof of Murder.

MARSHFIELD, Or., May 23.—New evidence in the Clay Burns murder at Empire indicates that the slayer of the youth intended digging a grave near the cabin occupied by the boy and his father Jimmie (Bob) Burns.

The investigators found a newly stirred plot of ground close behind the cabin, and on examining it found a grave had been started and dug to the depth of two shovel lengths and two feet wide by five feet long. The searching party also found a blood-stained towel hanging behind the kitchin door.

This evidence, in connection with the finding of blood covering the floor of the home, is considered by the officers almost conclusive proof the father was the murderer.

Dr. W. F. Kaiser, of Riddle, was a business visitor here today.

John W. Hogg, who left Sutherlin several weeks ago to take up a business proposition at Albany, returned here last Friday to look after some business matters.
