

TRANSPORTATION VITAL TO MODERN WARFARE

Record of Motor Cars in Great Conflict Proves Them Back-bone of Military System

When Pershing and his soldiers crossed the border into Mexico, the old pack train was the only way to get supplies to the front. But when the motor car came, it changed the whole picture. The pack train was slow and cumbersome, and it was not possible to move large quantities of supplies. The motor car, on the other hand, was fast and efficient, and it could carry much more than the pack train. This was the first opportunity that the Government had to test the utility of the motor car. The results were so convincing that the motor car was adopted as the main mode of transport for the American Expeditionary Forces. The record of motor cars in the great conflict proves that they are the backbone of the modern military system.

Following closely came our entry into the great war, and Pershing called for France. Thousands of cars were needed, quickly by the American Expeditionary Forces. Transportation, the backbone of the army, was the Government's first thought. Within a short time Dodge Brothers Motor Cars were officially selected as the only car to be used for all our military operations. Fighting camps and outposts all over the country had their Dodge Brothers cars in active service. Thousands went to Pershing's army in France. Other thousands were put to every possible transportation use in the United States. Cantonments had their fire trucks, police patrols, hospital ambulances, and other special bodies mounted on Dodge Brothers chassis.

Have you tried one lately?

HAVANA implies richness—smoothness—and sometimes, heaviness! All hint of heaviness, however, is overcome in Robert Burns.

The Havana in Robert Burns' filler is of particularly mild selection. Special care in curing and mellowing gives this Havana a rare quality of mildness.

You will say, when you smoke your first Robert Burns, "This is what I have been looking for—true Havana taste plus true mildness!"

Make that welcome discovery this very day!
