WHEN AN ATTORNEY MEETS AN ATTORNEY IN TWO FAST FURIOUS ROUNDS
 Two well known local attorneys staged a one reel thriller yesterday afternoon that for a time rivaled anything that has occurred within the confines of the city for many moons. One barrister on meeting the other deliberator of Lord's Oregon Laws informed him in the parlance of legalities that he held a bill for collection in the sum of $55. "Why that bill is outlawed; you don't know what you are talking about," exploded one of the jury spell binders, growing red. "I know this much, you are a dead beat," came the second explosion. "You lie," is the alleged retort, as he walked over and slapped the other attorney a stinging blow in the face. The recipient of the open handed slap squared off and "covered" with the distance of an old rig expert. He must have left an opening somewhere, however, because his antagonist resorted to up-purcuting and left a few telling marks in the region of his eyes. Staggering about the room as though he was cognized in a "smoke cloud," the attorney who forgot he was invited to some one, crashed through the glass door of a bookstore. Then a fresh argument ensued. Who was going to pay for the damage wrought? The heavy-hitting attorney refused to be concerned with the payment of damages and it now appears as though attorney number three in whose office the fracas happened, is the largest loser of all.

One of the numbers on the program is Al Sweet's White Huskies, a magnificent singing band who have appeared as headliners at the leading showhouses of the country. Lieutenant J. Quinlan, of the First Canadian Mounted Rifles, brings one of the greatest stories of the war, and the Victory Artists will give two splendid concerts on the second day. Lecturers, humorists and a pageant for the children complete the program, which stands as high in the musical and entertainment world.
Ascended Mt. Ashland—
 A party of school girls made the ascent to Mount Ashland Saturday, in company with Mrs. F. H. Johnson and Miss Colby, one of the city school teachers. The company left Ashland Friday afternoon and spent the night in camp at Logan's cabin. Saturday morning saw them on the trail at an early hour plunkly making the ascent to the mountain top. This they accomplished in spite of the deep snow which they encountered on the way. On returning to the camp they again passed the night and came home Sunday morning. Those in the party besides the chaperones were Lucile Perrett, Margaret Campbell, Caroline Tilton, Margaret Johnson, Margaret McCoy, Joyce and Beth Johnson, Myra Tallmadge and Virginia Summers. Ashland Tidings. Miss Colby is the daughter of Hon. and Mrs. G. P. Colby, of this city. She has been teaching in Ashland for the past year, and has only recently returned to Roseburg to spend the summer vacation at her home here.
