SCAB SPRAY FOR APPLES AND PEARS

The fact that the weather continues damp and cool makes it important that every precaution be taken in order to grow apples and pears free from scab. It is impossible to tell from this office just when each person should apply the delayed dormant, or the pink spray, for the scab, as the time to apply these sprays depends on the condition of the trees. And this varies with the different varieties. So it is important that the grower watch the developing buds and spray the different varieties when the buds are in the proper condition.

The pink, or pre-blossom spray is very important, especially if the delayed dormant spray has been omitted. Apply this spray when the blossom buds are well separated in the cluster, and before they open. Use lime-sulfur solution, 1 to 40, thorough application is necessary.

Sanitary conditions in and around the orchards is important in the control of scab. The fallen leaves of last year's growth should be plowed under, as they contain many winter spores, that are carried in the air to

AD RATES INCREASED.

ALBANY, April 6.—Because of the abnormally high cost of print paper and rapidly increasing cost of production, both the Albany Democrat and the Albany Herald have announced that their advertising rates will be increased. Continued increases in cost of paper, labor and materials made the action necessary.

The new buds about the time they are opening. All brush and decaying wood should be burned, and the surroundings kept as clean as possible.

The next scab spray will be the calyx spray, to be applied just as the last petals are falling. This will also include the first codlin moth spray.

Signs Will Guide Patrol Aviators

By their roofs shall pilots and observers in the air service planes know the towns over which they pass in patrolling Oregon forests this summer. Upon the roof of some prominent building in each town is to be placed in large letters the initials or other designation for the town.

Aerial maps are now being prepared by Forest Examiners U. E. Osborne, Jr., the inventor of the Osborne fire finder, and C. W. Boyce who made a name for himself in aerial photography during the war, when he was in the air service.

The maps will show types of forest cover as they appear from the air, old burns, heavy timber stands, second growth, mountain, meadows and emergency landing fields. A method of detecting smoke from logging camps and mills will also be devised.

April Showers Bring Tourists

April showers may bring May flowers, but they also bring summer tourists. If the increasing number to be seen each day is a criterion by which to judge, several large enclosed cars of the "millionaire" class have passed through here in the past few days, some spending the night at a local hotel. The automobilists are mostly from Oregon, Washington and California, with several bearing Montana license plates. Those who carry their "hotels" with them are also in evidence, and scarcely a night passes that one or more does not occupy the local camp ground. Last night four cars spent the night in the camp ground, all four remaining here today to wait for better weather before continuing their journey. A tent almost as large as a house was pitched by one family, who have all the appearance of permanent stayers.

Marks Building is Sold Today

W. S. Powell, proprietor of the second hand store on North Jackson street, today purchased the H. Marks building just south of his present location. The building is to be thoroughly remodeled and a new front added. As Mr. Powell is being forced to move in order to occupy his present location, he has not time to build an entirely new structure, but intends soon to erect a fine, modern building completely for his business. Workmen will start at once to construct a new front, build a roof and remodel the interior of the building bought by Mr. Powell.

Trail Work To Be Done This Year

Considerable work is to be done on the trails of the Umpqua national forest this year, according to W. F. Ramsdell, local forest supervisor, who today received word from headquarters that the sum of $5000 has been appropriated for trail work this season. One of the first improvements will be made at the North Umpqua suspension bridge. This bridge, which has a span of 150 feet, has been in position for over 10 years and during that time has had practically no attention. It will be thoroughly overhauled and one of its towers replaced. Mr. Ramsdell states. In addition, work will be done on the North Umpqua, Red Butte and Layng creek trails. Instead of putting out fire-fighting crews this year, Mr. Ramsdell intends to scatter small groups of trail men to various places throughout the forest. These men will be available for fire fighting also and will be kept scattered so that they can quickly reach any given locality. By this method Mr. Ramsdell hopes to solve the financial difficulties in which the department finds itself. By combining the trail and fire-fighting work it is hoped to make improvements and at the same time

Air Patrol in West Cut to 1 Squadron

WASHINGTON, April 6.—After withdrawing its objection to the Arnold project for an air patrol of all the forests of the Pacific coast and northwest states, the general staff of the army appears to have changed its attitude once more.

The excuse for the reversal of its position was that the air service is short almost 200 officers in its enlisted personnel. For this reason it was said that there must be a vast curtailment of the Arnold project, which called for six squadrons of 18 planes, each squadron manned by 192 officers and 792 enlisted men.

The general staff has accordingly issued an order providing for only one squadron of 21 planes, or enough to patrol only the forests of California and Oregon, with the main base at Mather Field, Sacramento.

The war department contended that it is impossible to enlist the needed officers to make a complete air patrol possible because of a regulation which bars the reinstatement of discharged officers, except in case of an emergency.

Senator Nugent of Idaho took the position that the situation due to the heavy forest losses in Idaho and Montana last year is sufficiently grave for the secretary of war to declare an emergency and open the way for the reinstatement of many discharged officers who are eager to return to the air service. He will urge such a course upon the war department tomorrow as the means of carrying out the Arnold project in all its details.
