Some Big Eggs—Ed. Bryant of Edenbowler has some Golden Campines and Black Spanish hens that are notorious for laying big eggs, and noting a story in a Willamette valley paper of a poultryman who had a Rhode Island Red which laid an egg five inches in circumference the long way and 3 inches the other, brought two Golden Campine eggs and 1 Black Spanish egg to town last night and had the "poultry" editor measure them. These eggs were not double yolkers, but just eggs, and they happen along regularly, Ed says. The Spanish egg was 6 x 7 3-8 inches and the Golden Campines measured each 6 x 7 1-4 inches in circumference.
