NEWS SNAP SHOTS

Will Hold Meeting—

The regular meeting of the Looking Glass Parent-Teachers' association will be held at the schoolhouse, Tuesday, April 13, at 7:30 p. m.

Registration Brisk—

County Clerk E. H. Lenox reports that registration outside of the city is quite brisk. Deputies established in localities in outside districts are reporting in a large number of registrants each day but in the city there has been very few take advantage of the opportunity afforded to register for the coming primary election.

Are Returning Home—

F. M. and D. E. Goodman, of Fairbank, Minn., who have been visiting at the R. L. Richter home for several months, start home today. They returned to Roseburg last October and have spent the winter here. Mrs. D. E. Goodman left this morning by train, while the two men will drive the car back over the southern route. They are greatly pleased with Roseburg and will probably return soon.

First Pollination Here—

"The storm did not do as much damage to the fruit trees as was feared at first, and there will be a pretty good crop," predicts W. F. Drager, the veteran chief clerk of the house of representatives, who between sessions of the legislature is a fruit buyer, says the Portland Oregonian. "There will not be a large amount of drier loam berries on the market this year," says Mr. Drager. "For the reason that they would cost the consumer about a dollar a pound. From five and a half to six pounds of fresh berries are needed for a pound of dried berries, and the price of the fresh berries will be about 12 cents a pound this year."

The first pollination weather thus far around Roseburg was Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, says Mr. Drager.

Abraham in Portland—

The following is from today's Oregonian: There is talk of establishing a municipal power plant at Roseburg, according to Albert Abraham, former state senator from that county, who was in Portland yesterday. The suggestion is to use as a power site, Wheeler's bend, which is 10 miles from Roseburg, where the river makes a sweep in a horseshoe formation and at the narrowest point the land is only about 600 feet wide. There would be a fall of about 40 feet, if a 15-foot dam were built. Roseburg already has a privately owned power plant, which was not permitted to raise its rates. Mr. Abraham is the county manager for Senator Hiram W. Johnson in Douglas county and is in the city to attend a conference.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idaho McGlone Gibson

THE CALL OF CHILDREN.

One often hears nowadays that with the telegraph and the telephone letter writing has become a lost art. But if you wish to test this oft repeated sentiment allow a rumor to spread that you have some into a little fortune.

My mail at present is voluminous. It seems as though every man and woman I ever know and many I don't know have heard that I have recently inherited money. Each of the strangers is determined that he shall get some of it. I suppose this is what we call business.

After reading over the advertising literature describing minor and odd wells and other business propositions, I had a new feeling about John. I was not so angry with him as I was at first, when he insisted that he must be the one to take care of my oil properties. I could see now that he was only following out what every successful man has had to learn early in the name of life.

My mail this morning is stupendous, but I have become accustomed to shifting the chaff from the wheat and after running through it I laid a very small part of it in a neat pile to read at my leisure while I merely tore open the envelopes of the remainder only to fling their contents into a yawning waste basket.

Not Business Letters. The superscription on one or two of the envelopes I did not recognize, but I knew instinctively that they were not business letters.

One of them I opened casually and was surprised that it was signed by Bobby Gaylord.

"What can he be writing me about?" I said to myself rather stupidly as I turned the letter over in my mind. A name, however, caught my eyes and I started quickly to read.

"My dear Katherine: I am quite sure you will be surprised to receive a letter from me, but I have been informed that Ruth and the children are spending the spring months in your town and I am going to make a request of you with which I am sure you will comply, although you will think it a strange one. "Will you go and see Ruth and the children? I am particularly anxious to know how the babies are looking and you will not think I am over-sentimental when I say I would like to know if they still remember me. Strange, isn't it, that while I had them always with me I thought very little about them? In fact, Ruth's constant care of them, to the exclusion of everything else, made me regard them almost as a nuisance; but now I hear their childish voices calling 'Daddy' and I find myself remembering their foolish little questions with a smile—questions which used to annoy me but today which I would gladly answer.

The One Woman. "Do you think, Katherine, that I love Helen any the less. She is to me still the one woman in all the world and I would give all I possess if these children, who are tugging at my heart-strings, were hers as well as mine.

"I do not talk to her about it for I know it makes her unhappy. She feels that she is keeping me away from them, for you see I know that Ruth will never let them come to us. "She told me when I left her to go with Helen that she was glad that the children would be here alone. But, oh, Katherine, they are mine quite as much. I am their father and nature will not be denied.

"You see I am opening up my heart to you for you have always been such an understanding sort of a woman, and you have also been so sweet and dear to Helen that I have loved you next to her.

"But will you try if you can to persuade Ruth to let little Bobbie come to me for a week or so?"

"Unless you feel sure she will do this, do not mention it to her, but you can see the children and write me how they are; what they say, if they still remember their father."

Congratulations on Inheritance. "Will you let me congratulate you on the fine inheritance which is now yours?"

"While money can not blot out grief, yet it will always help to console a little. I hope that Helen and I will see you soon. I cannot tell you in words the great love she has for you, but I am quite sure, my dear Katherine, you know that because of my dear wife, I am also, for your own sake, always.

"Sincerely and devotedly yours, "ROBERT GAYLORD."
