LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idah McGlone Gilson

DISTURBING NEWS.

The next thing I heard was a voice that seemed to float to my ears from a great distance. It said: "Well, she will be all right now," and then I opened my eyes. I never knew that eyelids could be so heavy; it seemed to me that mine weighed pounds—and I looked up into the face of my kind old doctor.

I knew, of course, the moment that I saw him that I must have been unconscious a long while, long enough to send for him, and long enough for them to stretch me out on the bed and remove my clothing. I was lying there in my night dress, and for all that I knew, I might have been ill for weeks.

"Alice came forward and said, 'Don't talk, Katherine, just lie still.' "But I don't understand. The last thing I remember, you asked me to go with you to see Ruth. Was that hours or days ago?"

"It was about two hours ago, Katherine, when you fainted." "I have fainted so many times lately. What is the matter with me, doctor?"

The old doctor looked at me curiously. "Don't you know what is the matter with you, my dear child?" he asked.

Never Fainted Before. "I haven't the slightest idea. My heart has always been strong enough until now. I never fainted before in my life until within the last few months. First, just before the automobile accident, when I was expecting—a rush of realization came over me.

"Was it possible—Oh, it couldn't be." But even as my thoughts formed again the sentence, "it couldn't be," I knew instinctively that the doctor was right.

"Oh, doctor, I can't, I don't want a baby now," I said.

"Why, Katherine, I thought you would be delighted," he said soothingly.

"I'm not. I don't want one," I said hysterically. "I wanted my other baby, only God knows how I wanted it, and that awful automobile came and took it from me. And I grieved and it seemed to me as though I could not bear it, because John, my husband, was not as sympathetic as he should have been. It seemed to me that an unborn child meant nothing to him. But, now, now, I don't want a baby and I can not understand why I must have one now."

I was crying hysterically and Alice was trying to calm me. The doctor mixed a sedative and insisted upon my taking it.

"She will be better in a little while," he said.

Never Will be Better. "No, I won't," I answered. "I will never be better. I shall be quite as unhappy about this baby's coming as I was about losing the other." It seemed to me, as I lay there, that no woman had ever been so unhappy over the knowledge that a child was coming as I. I tried to tell myself that I was wicked and selfish but all the while that insistent thought was flashing thru my brain that when a child comes the marriage bond is tightened.

As Alice said just before I fainted, "When children come, the marriage is cemented in such a way that whatever one's personal feelings and inclinations are, one's duty is imperative." I told myself these things over and over, but it meant nothing, literally nothing. Beside them in my brain was written all John's neglect of me, and his utter selfishness where I was concerned. I think perhaps, what crystallized this in my mind was the fact that since I had inherited money John had been so kind and thoughtful of me. He could never do anything nice for me in the future, never give me a caress, or even a smile that I would not think was inspired, not by me, his wife but by a Texas oil well that was pouring money, money into his wife's pocket.

Wanted to be Free. I do not think that ever before had I wanted to leave him so much as this moment. Never had I wanted, with such great intensity, to be free. Perhaps this was because I realized that I was bound, bound forever to John and the baby that was coming.

Oh, I wonder how many, many women, in the ages that have come and gone, had these thoughts that were wracking my soul. I wonder if any other expectant mother ever fairly hated the little life that was budding, because she knew that when that life bloomed she would ever after be bound by the great duty of motherhood.

Tomorrow—Things That Make a Difference. Turned. So I kept right on taking the medicine and in only a few weeks time my troubles had all left me and I found I had gained fifteen pounds in weight. From that day to this I have positively been in the best health I ever enjoyed in all my life. I never have an ache or pain. I eat anything I want and don't suffer any bad after effects at all; in fact I feel just like a new man and have plenty of strength and energy. My nerves are steady and strong, I never have a dizzy spell and my sleep is restful and refreshing.

Four Legged Duck Hatched Saturday

A four-legged duck possessing equal facilities with the more usual biped member of its tribe, is somewhat considerable of a freak, but such a fowl is the possession of Ralph Church, son of H. B. Church, local mail carrier, the duck having been hatched from a setting of wild Mallard eggs Saturday. A person witnessing the antics of the duck is carried back to the days when that which is now technically obsolete was prevalent, for the first impression is that one's eyes are playing false.

Not only is the duckling considerably alive, but as soon as it had discovered its distinction it began to lord over the remainder of the brood and in a series of thrilling battles had asserted its leadership and is now in full control and command with none to dispute its power.

The quartette of pedal extremities can be manipulated perfectly and in order. Either one, two or three of the four feet can be called into use singly, in pairs. This fact was plainly demonstrated when the said duckling became disgusted with the proceedings of an obstreperous cootie behind its left ear and began scratching first with its left hind foot, then its left fore foot and when said cootie changed sides, the right hind foot was hoisted into position and put in operation in full accord and co-operation with the other two which still retained their intermittent motion, until said saucy cootie at last desisted in its efforts.

The duckling is able to walk swim and quack the same as the remainder of the outfit and appears to be perfectly normal and healthy in all other regards.

SALVATION ARMY MAKES MEN OF SOCIAL OUTCASTS

Following a well known rule the Salvation Army, in its industrial homes, is taking the class of man who early finds his way to the poor house and rehabilitates him, makes him over, gives him confidence in himself and turns him over to employment that enables him to sustain himself.

The County Government makes its "down and out" habitual indigents. It makes them a monthly allowance of money or goods for which it requires no service.

The Salvation Army takes the same man and gives him, not money, but work.

It pays him money for his work, and renews in him the knowledge that conscious and directed effort is entitled to and will bring him commensurate return.

It bathes him and wins him again, to clean habit and thought.

It builds up his strength and his morale until he is fit again for the fight with the world.

Then it finds him employment and sends him forth to work that he is fitted to do.

Here in a nut shell is the story of the Salvation Army's Industrial Homes and the story of the Industrial Home in Portland, where scores of men from all over the state have found themselves.

HARRY McAVOY, well-known Los Angeles hotel man who says he spent a small fortune and tried every treatment money could buy without getting relief, until he tried Taniae. Says suffered for twenty years.

"In 1909 I suffered a general breakdown and during those twenty years I spent a small fortune searching for health," said Harry McAvoy, with the Alexandria Hotel of Los Angeles, one of the largest and finest hotels in southern California.

"I went to the best specialists in New York, Chicago, New Orleans and Seattle. I tried every medicine and treatment money could buy, but the best I could do was to get a little temporary relief. Finally I gave out completely under the strain and had to quit work altogether. I was terribly discouraged over my condition and felt that I would be an invalid for the rest of my days."

"I had indigestion in its very worst form. In fact, I was a confirmed dyspeptic; nothing agreed with me and I suffered from the terrible symptoms of indigestion. My heart palpitated so badly I thought I had heart trouble and I would get so weak and faint at times I would stagger and several times I fell in my tracks before I could support myself."

"I was absolutely afraid to eat, for it meant nothing but suffering afterward and I would have awful pains and burnings in the stomach and chest. Sleep? Why, I didn't know what it was to get a night's sleep! I would lie in bed a while and then get so restless I would have to get up and walk the floor. I was almost a nervous wreck and couldn't even sit still and write a letter. I lost so much weight and strength I was almost too weak to walk, and I honestly believe no man in this world suffered any more than I did."

"Last September I realized I could hold out no longer, and as I had made up my mind to give it a trial, well, sir, it was the greatest and happiest surprise of my life, for I began to feel better right away. My appetite improved, I began to sleep better and my strength gradually returned. So I kept right on taking the medicine and in only a few weeks time my troubles had all left me and I found I had gained fifteen pounds in weight.
