LOVE and MARRIED LIFE

by the noted author

Idah McGlone Gibson

JOHN MUST CHOOSE.

I knew that Alice was talking women in politics to get my mind away from my own affairs. Alice is much older than I.

I am still young enough to want all the joys that life can give me.

I am not at all reconciled to the thought of becoming a mother, but perhaps I will feel differently about it after John comes. If John should act as he did when I told him my first baby was coming I could not stand it. I think I would just try to end it all. I don't just quite understand why this idea of suicide so fascinates me. Is it because I am a coward that I dare not look life and its duties and responsibilities in the face? I believe that I will go and talk to my mother's old minister. Perhaps he can help me, for just now life and its burdens are almost more than I can bear.

Note and Telegrams Reread.

I have read John's note and his telegram over and over and each time they give me more courage. Perhaps everything will be all right now. If John would only be to me what he was before we were married nothing would matter.

Charles left as soon as he knew that John was coming. I do not think that he at all relishes being my representative and caring for the inheritance mother left me. I presume I have put him in a false position, but oh! he must have known that I could not allow John to take over my business affairs. That would leave me precisely in the place I was before I inherited it. Even Alice sees that I am right in this.

As I read over what I have written of my married life I understand fully that I am no heroine. I expect, however, if I could show up all my virtues and put my faults in the background, everyone who read, even John, perhaps, might love me.

Hannah Just brought me in a special delivery letter. It is another one of those awful anonymous missives, which I am sure Elizabeth Moreland is writing me.

How that woman hates me.

Mistake From the Start.

This letter says: "Do you realize that your husband loves someone else? Do you realize that he is only coming to you because you have become a rich woman? Why do you not set him free? Why do you not understand that neither of you can ever be happy together? It was a mistake from first to last."

No one can know what is written in this letter except Elizabeth Moreland and I. She might just as well have signed her name to it. I think when John comes I will show it to him. I am rather surprised to find that this missive did not hurt me as the other did. It seems rather futile and I smile to myself to think how nearly I had carried out Elizabeth Moreland's wishes, because I had almost decided this morning to leave John to her.

Now, John will have to decide. I will tell him the truth and ask him to decide between us.

When I had come to this conclusion I began to feel much better, much stronger. I think it is a good thing in this life to decide upon things, even if you decide in the wrong. That is Alice's strong point. She decides quickly and then if it is wrong, she makes the best of it.

I arose and dressed and started out for a little walk, thinking if I were not too tired, I would go to the train to meet John.

Meets Ruth's Children.

On the way downtown I came across Ruth Gaylord's three adorable children. Bobbie knew me immediately and said to his little brother and sister: "Come quick! Come quick! Here is the candy lady."

I had forgotten that I had, much to Ruth's annoyance, always filled her children quantities of candy, but now I said: "Yes, here comes the candy lady," and taking the little girl's hand and putting the two boys in front of me, we strolled down the street in a hunt for a candy shop. It was thus that John found me. I had not realized that it was train time. I had become so absorbed in the children.

"You remind me of the old lady who lived in a shoe," he said as he kissed me right there on the street.

Tomorrow—The Letter.

Noted Doctor Will Hold Clinic

Considerable interest is being manifested by local physicians in the visit of Dr. E. M. Downing, of York, Pa., who will meet with the Willamette Valley Osteopathic society on Monday, April 26, at the office of Dr. R. M. Roberts, of Corvallis. There will also be an evening banquet. Dr. Downing, who is a member of the official board of the Osteopathic Research Institute of Chicago, and who has make extended investigations of the cause and treatment of neuralgia of the face and the neuralgic and paralytic conditions of the spine, will conduct a clinic during the afternoon session. He will conduct similar clinics in Portland and other western cities on a tour scheduled by the Western Osteopathic association. Dr. Allen P. Howells, of Albany, president of the Willamette Valley Osteopathic society, will call the meeting to order promptly at 2 p. m. Dr. John Simons, of Eugene, has been appointed committee chairman to take charge of the clinic.

Districts Pass Relief Quotas

Thirty-four district schools have reported up to date. In all cases their contributions have far exceeded the quota assigned them. Reports have come in that other districts have voted contributions which have not been turned in at headquarters. Public schools at Riddle, Dillard, Elkton and Reedsport have sent in generous contributions. Friday a long distance call was received from S. S. Bruce, field secretary, stating that Yoncalla had already raised her quota and expected to exceed the allotted amount. We are very proud of the fine record made by Wilbur. The following contributions were received at headquarters: Maccabee lodge, $5; Baptist Missionary society, $10; and city council (conscience fund), $10.

1920 Looks Like Aviation Season

By Associated Press

NEW YORK, April 24.—Air vents planned for 1920, promise to make it a big aviation sport year, according to the American Flying club. The first event of importance will be the flying field day of the Intercollegiate Flying association at Mineola field, (N. Y.) May 7. Eleven colleges and universities will be represented in a varied program of flying stunts, which will be concluded with a cross country flight. In this race each will be permitted to enter two airplanes, and a cup will be awarded to the winner. The start will be made at Mineola field where the race also will end after a circuit that probably will include Philadelphia and Princeton.

Arrangements also are being made by the club for a seaplane race around Long Island. This probably will be held early in the summer. The club is co-operating with the training and operating group of the United States Army air service in planning for a trans-continental air race between New York and Alaska, a distance of 4879 miles. In the tentative plans the course is mapped out from Mineola across United States territory to Minot, N. D., crossing to Saskatchewan, Can., and across the Dominion to Fort Egbert on the Alaskan border. In Alaska the route runs to Circle, Fort Yukon, Fairbanks by way of Fort Gibbon, thence to Nulato and Nome. Compulsory stops at an average of 150 miles will be arranged.

Flying events of a sporting nature will not be confined, however, to the United States in 1920. In France a flying meet is scheduled to be held at Juvisy, near Paris, May 22 and 23. The British aircraft exhibition will be held at London in July. In addition the British government has offered several millions in pounds as prizes for various airplane sporting events to be held during the year. The Cape to Cairo route is being blazed. Between the two points the distance by rail, steamship or ground transport is approximately 6222 miles. The aerial line is about 5200 miles.
