

THEY GROW IN OREGON

Oregon is as famous for her apples as California is for oranges.

Oregon apples are sold from Maine to California--in Mexico City and the Philippines.

BOOST 'em and BUY 'em and help our growers further extend their markets.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

FAVORS SOLDIER AID.

Canyonville, Ore., April 29, 1926. Roseburg News-Review:

Much has been said, and yet so little about helping the returned soldier, your boy and mine. As yet, the preferred right to these grant lands are about all that has been done.

I would like to see Oregon, the state that's first in everything, donate to our boys that takes one of these homesteads ten head of cows or 100 head of sheep, two brood sows, a team, dozen chickens and all necessary tools for working these claims.

Scatter them out over these vacant lands. Get where rent, wood, water, vegetables, fruit and a great part of the other expenses are had for the work of raising. These things are growing and producing something while the owner is improving his land for a crop.

'A CLEAR COMPLEXION'

Ruddy Checks—Sparkling Eyes—Most Women Can Have.

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system. If you have a pale face, yellow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep them fit, 10c and 25c.

ROSEBURG STEAM LAUNDRY

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idaho McGlone Gibson

A WOMAN'S HAPPINESS.

"Do you know, John," I said suddenly, "that I think you and I could be very good friends and very happy, though married (John made little grimace of this), if we only saw each other semioccasionally."

"But I am going to stay down here for some months. Don't you think that it is best?" "I certainly do not. I would like to have you come up and see the new house. We can take possession at once. It will give you something to think about beside yourself."

"Why, you are talking just like Alice."

"Oh, I am talking sense. I don't believe in all that talk that Alice sports. But I do believe that most men are too indulgent with their wives."

"Meaning you," I said. John had the grace to blush.

"Oh, I am throwing bouquets at myself," he said.

"Has Goodwin gone down south to look after your oil property?" he asked abruptly, as he wandered about the room and apparently caught sight of a card on which Charlie had scribbled good-bye to me.

"Yes, he went day before yesterday. He is probably there now," I said.

"I saw an account in the papers yesterday where some of the wells were a 'tip.' It places you on an equal with a real servant. And thank God for this grand old flag that these boys have carried farther and higher than it was ever carried before, we have no servants in America."

"We are all wage earners, by our heads, hands or investment, but servants, 'never.' The man that works the road, builds bridges, cuts wood; the man or woman who sits in the office or tills the soil in America is a wage earner. He or she are paid for their service, and they have the same feeling of liberty and freedom that our president has."

"Don't let us forget our duty to these boys. What did they answer when Uncle Sam called? What were the reports from 'over there'?" Did they do their duty? Don't offer a 'tip' for blood; give them a chance.

In that region are going dry," he remarked.

"I didn't see it," I answered. Goodwin Old-Foggyish.

"I almost wish I had gone with Charlie," was his next remark. "Even if you didn't care for me to butt in, I believe I have the up-to-date way of doing business and Goodwin is rather old-foggyish; at least I think he is."

"Please let's don't talk about it, John. You are going to be here such a short time, that I only want to think of happy things."

"Good Lord! Katherine, isn't the knowledge that you are worth a half million dollars something to make you happy?"

"Do you know, John, I whispered softly, "that the knowledge that I was worth a half million dollars did not make me half as happy as when I saw the light in your eyes a little while ago as you said that sometimes you thought I was the most beautiful woman you knew."

"Foolish child."

"Yes, I know, dear, but a woman's heaven is made of such little things. We build up our happiness as children do their queer little outdoor playhouses. There are little things of bits of compliments that have been given to us in all sincerity."

Messages of Love.

"There are faded flowers which once were fresh, and brough messages of love. There are tiny notes, on which perhaps the ink is fading, but we still read the love that was written there, because it is engraved upon our hearts. There are eyes in which we see the light of love sparkling and caresses which mean much."

There are no great palatial rooms in a woman's house of happiness. There are no silks and say "brocades. All of these she may have had, but they are not the things that she treasures above all others—the things which she keeps to glaze over. No, a woman builds her house of happiness as children build their playhouses—of little things that others, perhaps, might call trawdry."
