...of old age is constipation. The bowels become weak and unable to perform their functions without aid. For this purpose only the mildest and gentlest laxative should be used. The use of harsh cathartics aggravates the trouble and makes the constipation worse. Chamberlain's Tablets are a favorite with people of middle age and older on account of their gentle action.

SALVATION ARMY TO SERVE ALL OREGON

Business Men of Every County
Join With Corps Officers to Extend Helping Hand.

A service born of service by men and women whose lives are dedicated to that service, a service not for gain, for it pays its workers poorly, is to be placed at the disposal of even the smallest community in Oregon through the expansion of the Salvation Army Home Service Program for 1920. Since its splendid service among the American troops abroad brought to the attention of the home folks the kind of work the army has been doing quietly in the slums of the larger cities, demands from all quarters have flooded in upon the army until it has been forced to double and triple its efforts. It has been compelled to expand beyond city lines and extend its service to the remotest districts of the state. And in these out of the way places the army is solving one of the greatest economic problems, handling at their

...and preventing many of the ills that result from poverty and wrong teaching.

In every county of Oregon one and sometimes two advisory boards have been formed of business men and citizens of those counties. These men are constantly in touch with their communities and judge when and how best the Salvation Army can be utilized to serve the citizens of that community. A word to headquarters brings the Salvation Army worker to take care of the man or woman, boy or girl whose misfortunes have overwhelmed them.

In the rescue and maternity home in Portland the unfortunate girl mothers of Oregon find a refuge and sanctuary.

In the boys and girls homes to be established at Yamhill the ill of the neglected child is shaped and the boy or girl prepared to go out into the world and win his or her own way.

In the industrial home in Portland every derelict is made over into self-supporting men and women, who are no longer a charge upon their county but an asset to their community.

In the relief branches of the work done by the army many cases of poverty and sickness are handled annually. When the call for help comes there is no investigation of the worthiness of the subject. Help is given and investigation made afterwards.

Free employment bureaus which exact no membership fee, find work for hundreds of idle hands and while work is being found use to it that deserving men seeking honest employment is not starve.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idah McGlone Gibson

JOHN'S THOUGHTLESSNESS.

I turned to John appealingly. "Please," I said, "don't let us begin to quarrel before we arrive at the house."

"I don't want to quarrel with you, Katherine," was his impatient answer, "but you seem to always rub me the wrong way."

He turned to me suddenly and looked at me closely. "Goodness," he said, "isn't there a beauty shop around here anywhere? I've never seen a woman who has gone off on her looks as you have during the last few weeks. Your complexion is something terrible. To see you now no one would ever think that I had married the prettiest girl in this town."

I felt my lip tremble. "A woman in my condition is not supposed to be a thing of beauty," I answered.

"Well, you needn't be so hurt about it, especially as your ugliness is not permanent," he said in a tone of voice which made me realize he was a little bit ashamed of himself. And then, "but I could never understand, anyway, just why a woman is so afraid of the truth."

Why Not Before Marriage?

"Didn't you tell me the truth before we were married, John? I don't remember that you ever remarked in those days that my complexion was looking muddy or that my hair was not in curl."

"Your complexion never was muddy," he answered.

"Would you have told me if it had been?"

"No," he answered, "because I should have left you quite alone. I never could stand a girl that didn't have a good complexion, and you must realize that just at present you are not very easy to look at."

"When are you returning to the city?"

"Why, I just got here! In your letter you were anxious to have me come this way and now you are asking me when I shall leave. Aren't you rather capricious?"

"Not at all. I have tried to tell you many times, John, that when you are away from me I always think of you as you were in the wonderful three weeks before our marriage, and I think the surprise of finding you always so utterly different now is one of the things that makes me seem amused and capricious to you."

"I really never could understand," said John, as we went up to our room, it is that a woman always wants to be flattered. The more I see of them the more it seems to me a woman would rather you would lie to her, if you lie prettily, than to have you tell her the truth if it rattles her vanity."

For the Good of the Soul.

"I don't think that's true, John," I said. "Most women do like to be told that they are charming by the men they care for. And I do not believe that what most people call truth need be as unpleasant as it usually is, but I do think that we women do need something for the good of our souls."

"Just a little while ago you asked me why I didn't go to a beauty parlor and have my complexion improved. Did it ever occur to you that we have all of these things done for our bodies, but when we ask for something which will make our souls beautiful because when a woman is happy her soul is beautiful most people consider that we are begging for sin to our vanity?"

"All right. Let's don't talk about it any more. Do you realize that I'm awfully tired. I've been two nights on a train. I think I'll go and take a bath and after that a little snooze. Then I'll talk business."

John left me unceremoniously and I heard him whistling as he turned the water on in the bathroom and I knew he had forgotten everything that he had been talking about that was disagreeable to him in any way.

I went to the mirror and looked myself carefully over. I was not beautiful, but it seemed to me my husband should be the last one to tell me of it under the circumstances. Charles had said nothing of the kind to me.

Would be Half-Conscious.

He had not allowed me to feel uncomfortable in his presence, and now, after what John had said, I would be very self-conscious when I met Charles again—a feeling I had never had before with Charles.

I was very sorry that this incident had happened, for besides the unhappiness it had made for me personally, I realized that I should be quite dependent upon Charles during the next month or two after John had gone away.

"Perhaps," I said to myself, "I should not see Charles any more until after the baby comes." Then I thought, "How silly." It seemed to me that one of the things the modern woman was getting beyond was the fact that there was anything disgraceful in motherhood. However, now my own husband had called attention to the fact that I must be more or less a target for speculative thought, I never would feel put out about it again.

May be Candidate For School Director

T. A. Huetty, of North Roseburg, is being urged by his many friends to become a candidate for school director at the coming school election to be held in June. Dr. K. L. Miller and A. J. Geddes retire at that time and at the present time only one candidate has announced himself, Dr. B. R. Shoemaker having consented to become a candidate. Mr. Huetty has had nine years of experience in school work, having been for nine years associated with school affairs in Kansas where he was director of the school board for several years. He has four children in school and consequently has a deep interest in the school matters in this city. He is at present instructing one of the industrial clubs of the Benson school in poultry raising and is also connected with other affairs in conjunction with that school. Should he consent to become a candidate for the position there is no doubt but that he would receive strong support.

Have a base on which to work, a groundwork on which to build the citizen of the future. The ministers endorsed the measure unanimously.

OREGON IS BACKWARD IN STATE SCHOOLS

Washington Pays $30 a Year
For Education of Each Child; Oregon $11.85.

"It is the question of the undermost as against the uppermost, property values, over human values," said M. H. Marvin, a member of the Washington State Industrial Welfare Commission, who made a plea at the Portland hotel recently before the Portland Ministerial association for the state two-year elementary school measure, which is to be voted upon May 21 at the primary. He continued:

"The church has made mistakes, but this is one place where the church must not err. You must get behind this measure so that the child of the poor man can have his or her deserved opportunity in life. Oregon is face to face with a crisis in its educational system, that, if not met, will put it back toward the dark ages instead of in the light of the twentieth century which it should hold. It is one of seven states which still holds to the antiquated idea of district school taxation plan. It must get out of the rut in which it finds itself today and place herself alongside the other 39 or forty states and make the tax for its schools equal throughout the state.

"Washington today pays per year $30 for the education of each child within its boundaries. I am told you in Oregon pay toward this great work for the voter of the future only $11.85. It is time for a change and I, from your sister state, urge you to announce from your pulpits, from the housesteps if you please, the benefits of this measure, and I hope it will be voted in by a big majority."

Rev. W. T. McElven of the First Congregational church of Portland, also made a strong plea for the measure and declared that it was not only a problem for Oregon to solve, but a national one, to handle this situation which Oregon now faces, namely—the education of the illiterate, of which there are today in the United States, 24 millions," said Dr. McElven.

"Labor counts on the church in this crisis," said the speaker. "Oregon is behind the times in her educational system and every 'highway' citizen in Oregon is to blame for this situation which we now must face at the polls on May 21."

"Do you know how Boston Tech breeds her students? They have one teacher to every six students. Oregon has one teacher to every 41. How's that for a contrast? Isn't it about time you and I went to the polls and voted for something new in this state? I think so."

Mrs. Alexander Thompson and Mrs. S. M. Hummer also made striking addresses to the ministers on this measure, being followed by President Campbell of the University of Oregon, who pointed out the necessity of solving the elementary schools, that the higher educational institutions would
