COOK SHORTAGE IS NOT RELIEVED

Immigrants Turn Up Their Nose at the Thought of Menial Labor.

PROHIBITION PREVENTS

Scarcity of Alcoholic Beverages is no Inducement to Foreigners and Immigration is Only One-Third of Normal Size.

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, June 1.—Though the tide of immigration has begun to flow again into the United States from Europe so that incoming ships have their lower decks crowded with homeseekers from other lands, there is little prospect that relief is in sight for the American housewife who has been promising herself a cook or maid-of-all service to be recruited from the newcomers. At least that is the opinion of Superintendent P. A. Baker of the United States immigration station on Ellis island.

"Immigration has been increasing by leaps and bounds," Mr. Baker said, "and it is a hopeful sign that the aliens arriving in this port during the last few weeks have exceeded the number going back to their native lands by many thousands. Last week six times as many came as qualified to leave the country.

"People who think the servant girl problem is going to be solved soon will be disappointed if they are depending on the women immigrants from Ireland and the Scandinavian countries. Plenty of these are arriving on every boat, but they turn up their noses at the thought of menial labor. They have their minds set on getting work in the better factories, principally those manufacturing luxuries such as candy and women's finery. They want to get into places where employes are well treated and into localities where housing facilities are best so that they can live on the scale justified by the high wages paid them. If employers want to attract these classes of women immigrants they had better look to the reputations of their factories for pleasant working conditions."

Mr. Baker scouted the idea that prohibition was one reason why immigration was not gaining more rapidly. He said the foreigners were coming in at about one-third the rate of the year immediately preceding the European war. The principal reason why more were not coming was that the men were urgently needed in their own countries, some of which, notably Poland, are supporting huge armies which use up a large part of their man power, with the result that those who are free to do civilian work command wages comparable to those paid in this country.

The present wave of immigration originates in about the same countries as before the war, with the exception of Germany and Austria-Hungary. Italy furnishes by far the greatest number. These are largely unskilled laborers who find their way into the big cities all over the country where they go into the big industries and mines. Only in the case of one country is the outgoing population greater than that coming in. This is Poland, which consulates daily in great numbers making passports. About 8000 of these passports were issued last month and nearly as many in each of the months preceding since the first of the year. They are going back. It is generally believed, because of homesickness and anxiety over the welfare of relatives in the war zones.

Platform Committee Makes Their Report

NEW YORK, May 31.—The need of making agricultural wages competitive with city wages and the necessity of the government to find a means of importing fertilizer at a price that American farmers will pay for it, were emphasized today in reports made public by subcommittee of the republican national committee's advisory committee on policies and platform.

It is planned to submit the suggestions to the platform committee of the republican national convention at Chicago.

The sub-committee reporting on agriculture, of which United States Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas, was chairman, urged that a national commission be appointed to coordinate all rail, water and motor transport with adequate facilities for receiving, handling and transporting food between cities. This commission, it was said, would render a great national good at this time. The international trade and credits committee headed by F. A. Vandenberg as chairman, urged the inauguration of an efficient co-operation at home and abroad between government officials who exercise authority in America's foreign trade relations. This co-operation, it was stated, was needed to replace what was described as a loose and overlapping foreign trade service, rife with inconsistencies and inter-departmental controversies.

In describing the shift of the United States international position from a debtor nation to a creditor nation, the committee's reports stated that the ultimate outcome of this shift will mean an excess of imports over exports.

MODERN BUSINESS PLANS MOVE SURPLUS PRODUCE

CORVALLIS, June 1.—A name for the farm, a trade name for the produce offered for sale, a signboard placed in a conspicuous place adjacent to a public highway, newspaper advertising, letter-head stationery, and use of the typewriter are advocates as a means of putting Oregon farms on a business basis by Frank L. Snow, professor of industrial journalism at O. A. C.

"It is taken for granted," he says, "that up-to-date farmers are now using farm account books which make it possible for them to know definitely at the end of the year whether the farm is run at a profit or loss."

"The farm name, together with trade name for the products, should stand for high quality. The farmer, of course, must deliver the goods. Whatever he offers for sale must be as represented.

"People like to purchase clothing or hardware, or even farm products from those who are business men in their dealings. Use of the typewriter and letterhead stationery gives a good impression, and the farmer who adopts this means of showing his business ability is more likely to close deals than one who uses any kind of writing paper, or is careless in respect to hand writing.

"Newspaper advertising is proving just as practical for the average farmer as for any business man. Scores of Oregon farmers are getting good results from use of both display and classified advertising. The farm bulletin board is an effective supplementary force."

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idaho McGlone Gibson

KATHERINE TELEGRAPHS JOHN.

The whole trouble with most of us modern women is that we do not take nature into consideration as we should.

Men do this unconsciously. They consider the material side of life first; we try to ignore it, and that is the reason why we never quite understand each other. With a man physical emotions come first, as perhaps they should, while a woman tries to put aside this inalienable law and fool herself into thinking that her spirit or perhaps her mind is the greatest influence of her life.

We must be a trinity—we women—if we would be happy. We must be soul, mind and body, well rounded. If we have too much soul we will always be very much hurt by the world's hard knocks. If we have too many material emotions we are apt to be unhappy unless someone is always flattering us. If we make ourselves all mind we lose the very joy of life which is the childlike enjoyment of little things.

Of course, I did not think of all these things while I was talking with Charles. At that time we were only living over our childish pranks.

Only After He Had Gone. It was only after he left me and I realized how far I had gone alone the way from childhood's irresponsibility that the thoughts I have just written came into my mind. I knew that when my mind was in the ascendant I was not particularly happy if I were not physically comfortable and spiritually well fed. I realized that if my spirit was soaring in a rarified atmosphere I was not happy unless my material being was also well cared for. Physical comfort has a greater effect upon the mind and the spirit than the mind and the spirit have upon physical comfort. Show me a person with a mind at ease and I will show you a human being that is also perfectly healthy.

I was very glad that I had gotten all this frame of mind and forgotten all about myself except in an impersonal way. After Charles' visit I determined to have strawberry short cake very often.

Now isn't that silly and childish? It is just another way of saying I was going to enjoy what came to me and forget all unhappy events that were past. I have learned to analyze the cause of my well being, and after Charles went away I no longer thought of John or Karl. I just undressed and went to sleep.

Remains in Bed. It was, however, a long time before I had strawberry short cake again, for when I awakened the next morning I was suffering greatly, and Hannah insisted that I remain in bed. In the afternoon the old doctor came to see me and said, "If I were you, my child, I would telegraph for John."

"I am sure," I answered, "it isn't necessary yet." And then I thought how foolish of me to controvert the opinion of a physician. I was timid about telegraphing John, however, for I felt he would think that I should have kept him with me when I was here. He would not realize that my illness would at last come so suddenly. However, I wired him: "Am not well at all today. Think you had better come to me," and signed it "Katherine."

I did not know for days afterward that John had answered my telegram saying that unless I was absolutely sure that it was necessary for him to come he felt it impossible to break away from business, that it seemed to him I might have known when he was with me. Now, however, he had found his work piling up so fast that he could not be taken away from it for foolish fears or any womanly desires of reconciliation.

Opened by Charles. The telegram was opened by Charles, and I learned from Hannah that he was so incensed that he would not keep it, but put it in a sealed envelope and handed it to her, saying, "When Mr. Gordon does come give this back to him. Do not under any consideration allow Katherine to see it."

In the meantime they tell me I was going down, down, down into the very shadows of death. But to me it was only a world of intolerable agony and pain. I forgot everything, even the wonderful reward that was to be mine; even the great joy that would crown my womanhood.

Antwerp Cafes Resound With Jazz

(By Associated Press.)

ANTWERP, May 14.—(By Mail).—The cafes of Antwerp, where American "jazz" music resounds nightly until the early morning hours and champagne corks pop continuously at 50 to 100 francs a pop, are so crowded even now with tourists and sailors in for a shore celebration, and local spendthrifts that their proprietors are wondering what more can happen when Antwerp is crowded with visitors to the Olympic games.

There are no spirits sold—except surreptitiously—but the wine flows so continuously in the gilded cabarets, and the beer so continuously in the sailors' "estaminets" down near the docks, that the noise and dancing know no bounds.

Some of the dock saloons have been especially rechristened since Antwerp became the chief American port of the continent, to catch the trade of the American sailors and make them feel as if they were down by the docks at home in the anti-prohibition days.

One finds American sailors reaching out their unpracticed feet for the bar rails in "Dirty Dick's Place," or "Sailor Jim's" down by the docks, consuming huge schooners of beer that look like the pictures on the frosted windows of "the biggest beer in town."

There are just as many merchant sailors in the expensive cafes, spending money freely and dancing hard. American consular and other Antwerp authorities are awake to the necessity of establishing some kind of recreation halls for the merchant sailors here, to take the place of the cafes, but, they told the correspondent, there seems as yet no way of doing it.

"Big recreation halls, with plenty of music and light beer would serve the purpose splendid," one consular official said. "Jack is bound to spend his money when ashore."
