ENLIGHTENING THE WORLD.

Advertising enlightens the world. It is educational. It can't help being. Its job is to tell the public things it pays to know.

Take talking machines, for instance. They didn't mean much in our lives until advertising took hold and showed how they brought new entertainment into the home.

Take automobiles. More than half the average man's knowledge of them and what they'll do for him comes straight from the ads.

Take kitchen cabinets. Take adding machines. Take ready made clothing. Take alarm clocks. Take health foods. Take floor varnishes. Take any modern improvement of a standard utility.

Advertising introduced them. Advertising educated us to them. And the man who didn't know about talking machines and autos and the rest wouldn't be an educated man.

Sometimes advertising is frankly educational, without trying to sell anything. In industrial disputes both sides are finding that advertising is the surest and wisest method of informing the public in many matters of conduct through advertising.

Lots of applied patriotism has been taught by the advertising route.

Old Professor Advertising is one of the most learned members of the world's faculty. And he has what some professors don't have—the happy knack of putting his ideas across.

He is at his best when he turns to a practical question of pointing out the merits of an article that people can serve themselves by buying.

People are always interested in themselves. Professor Advertising turns this to good account by showing them how his wares will benefit them.

Some lessons that advertising can teach are big and nation-wide. Nobody can spread them broadcast so quickly as the Professor.

Some are smaller and strictly local.

The size makes no difference. Advertising automatically adjusts itself to the size of the job.

If you have goods or service that the public ought to know about, let advertising tell the public what it is and why it is.

That's practical education.

Nowadays, when there is no question about the right and wrong of a controversy, a big conference is held so that a compromise may be arranged with the wrong.

If you find it impossible to live on ten dollars a day, it's a sign that some day you're going to have to live on one dollar.

Sometimes we almost long for the days when nobody was organized and the devil was busy trying to grab the hindmost.

Who remembers the old-fashioned boy who wanted a bicycle instead of an automobile?

The man who is always talking about his rights never seems to have time to care for other men's wrongs.

"Nature abhors a vacuum," which may be the reason that the pictures of bolsheviks look the way they do.

TEN MILE AND OLALLA NEWS.

The late frost has done a great deal of damage in this locality.

Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Bushnell and daughter, Edith, of Latham, are visiting relatives at Ten Mile.

Mrs. E. A. Hinkle, of Roseburg, visited her mother, Mrs. D. T. McGuire, a few days last week.

The Olalla Busy Steppers met with Mrs. McGuire Thursday and spent a very pleasant afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Bushnell visited at the M. L. Bushnell home Tuesday.

Mrs. Merle Carter and Misses Isabel and May Ireland, of Marshfield, are visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Ireland, of Olalla.

W. L. Short was a Roseburg visitor Friday.

People in this vicinity are smiling. We are receiving the first installment of that million dollar rain.

Mrs. Jack Smith and grand daughter, Marie Meachen, have returned from a visit to Saranaw.

W. L. Short had the good luck to kill a coyote a short time ago. The sheep men are very glad to get rid of these varmints.

Memorial Day was appropriately observed at Ten Mile. The program by the Olalla and Ten Mile schools was well rendered. Master James Fevon carried a large flag in a flag drill that had been carried in at Roseburg 21 years ago. It was purchased by the Olalla school at that time for the memorial parade at Roseburg.

WHISKEY GOES UP.

(By Associated Press.) MANILA, P. I., May 10.—The price of whiskey has gone up from 20 to 40 per cent in the last two weeks in Manila, due partly to the increase in the local internal revenue license and partly to the dwindling supply of American liquor.

Brands of American whiskey which sold in the United States at $1.25 a quart before war-time prohibition sent prices soaring there, may be had here still at $2 a quart, which is about 50 cents higher than the price a few weeks ago.

The popular brands of Scotch whiskeys bring from $2.50 to $3 a quart.

CHAIRMAN RESIGNS.

(By Associated Press.) STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Calif., June 10.—Vernon Kellogg, Stanford professor, who has for some time been chairman of the section of education of the National Research a young man who practiced medicine in a rural district became famous and was called in consultation in many towns and cities because of his success in the treatment of disease. This was Dr. Pierce who afterward moved to Buffalo, N. Y. He made up his mind to place some of his medicines before the public, and he put up what he called his "Favorite Prescription" and placed it with the druggists in every state in the Union.

For fifty years Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has sold more largely throughout the United States than any other medicine of its character. It is the testimony of thousands of women that it has benefited or entirely eradicated such distressing ailments as women are prone to. It is now sold by druggists in tablet form as well as liquid.

Astoria, Oregon.—"I saw Doctor Pierce's advertisement and as I had tried so many things for woman's trouble without getting any help, I decided to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and I did so with good results. I think it is just great."—Mrs. D. Reno.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idah McGlone Gibson

KARL'S SURPRISING LETTER.

The letter dropped from my nervous fingers.

I wondered why Karl Shepard should write these things to me.

"Did ever any woman have just this kind of experience," I asked myself and then my lips curled in derision as I remembered that probably no woman of today could call up an emotion or live through an experience that was not old when Athens was young.

It was really a novel situation. When Karl Shepard had been where he could talk to me, where he could see me every day, he had never opened his heart to me in the way he is doing now. And his peculiar psychic experiences, which have seemed to have been duplicated in my case, although not to such a great extent, are most interesting.

"I wonder if he knows about little Mary," I said to myself as I took up the letter again. I read over the last paragraph, where Karl said he knew that writing to me was utter madness and acknowledged to myself that there was method in it.

Satisfaction in Writing.

He seemed to get quite enough satisfaction in just writing me these letters without expecting an answer from me. As if to tell me that he was only writing these poetic impassioned notes he continued, after acknowledging the madness of his effort, to tell me that:

"Verily, I believe that all humanity has this longing in some degree—this longing for which it can not—will not—ever experience. After all, it is only a matter of will. It is easy to follow the beaten track when once the barriers are down. The rosy flights of our imagination are much more beautiful, much more satisfying than the dullest heights ever reached by our more material being.

"I did not know when I started on what my friends called a wild goose chase that it was this longing that I wanted to satisfy, but I have come to know this, and as I sit here in the thick purple, and as I believe I have more nearly realized my notions of the great and wonderful things for which all humanity craves and few if any ever attain than any other being in the whole wide world.

"I let myself down easily into this moody chasm—gently as a spider on its filmy web, for so vivid is this imaginary life with you I can hardly trust myself to describe it. You sit beside me, your hand within my clasp—our thoughts are one—our very souls commune. Whence springs this fount of thought? No such intimacy ever really existed between us. I was afraid—afraid to be myself; afraid to tell you the thoughts I have written here for fear that you might not understand. No one—even my nearest friends—has ever seen this side of my nature. No one has ever suspected me to be other than the average business man with no nerves and less emotion. No one has ever known that deep in my heart there was a longing for the unreal—the ideal—no one, except perhaps you.

Fate Has Been Kind.

"Fate has been kind to me, Katherine, away off here, thousands of miles away from you, I am reveling in the joy of a nearness to your very soul that is indescribable.

"Last night I had a more peculiar illusion than usual about you. I seemed to be looking into the future—I saw you reading my letter. You were white and thin and were lying in bed. My heart almost stopped beating until I realized that never before had I seen such joy, such radiance on your face.

"Then from out of a misty atmosphere which turned from gray to gold, I saw lying on your breast a child. Oh, Katherine, I hope it is true. I hope this crowning glory has come to you—and I am sure that it has.

"Some day, my dear, when you and I have grown old, and all these wild letters and wilder impulses have been forgotten, I will come back and pay my homage to that daughter of yours, who will look upon me probably as a stupid old man.

"Oh, yes, I know it is your daughter, my dear, and I know that you have already named her Mary.

"Tomorrow I am going out into the old city and send her some kind of an amulet that will bring her happiness. I did not need to wish her beauty for she is your child, Katherine. If you wish, my dear, you can show this whole mad letter to John. He will at least know that for his sake as much as for my own, I fled from you, and fleeing I found you, found some part of you that I am sure he has never known, for I have found the woman that is all soul—all sweetness—all light.

"Good morning, little Madonna. It is now that dark hour just before dawn—the hour that means the coming of another day—another day which I know means happiness for you—and that is enough for KARL."

Tomorrow—Just About the Baby.

RAILROAD QUITS BUSINESS.

(By Associated Press.) COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., June 10.—Famed the world over for the scenic wonders along its mountainous route, the Cripple Creek Short Line for years drew tourists to this state, but now the last train has turned into the roundhouse and the road has ceased functioning. A portion of it may be opened July 1 to run tourist specials, however, if plans of the receiver materialize.

The last train in the regular service completed its run early in the evening of May 17. Permission to cancel service was granted by a United States district court and the only possibility of an order to resume rests with the utilities commission of the state. However, that body has shown no inclination in that direction, despite the fact that an action has been started to do away with the order from the federal court. If that is accomplished, it is said a similar order will be given by the utilities board.

This short line ceased two years during the war because of a bridge which had been destroyed. After a receiver was appointed a little more than a year ago, repairs were made and business resumed. The line was successful for a time.

One shipment shave always provided much of the financial support of the road, but these have dwindled lately. Minters say that the cost of production has reduced the output.

LONDON BUYERS ABROAD.

(By Associated Press.) MANILA, P. I., May 10.—Buyers for the London trade have entered the Manila hemp market and it was announced today that one lot of 60,000 bales of United Kingdom grades had been sold to a representative of British concerns.

According to the purchaser the hemp is for cordage manufacturers of England and the price paid for the product is said to have been around $26.50 a bale.

BECOMES A CITIZEN.

(By Associated Press.) James Davis, Civil War veteran, recently was granted citizenship because he is the United States district court here. For 54 years he had lived and performed duties of a citizen although he was born in Ireland. He believed himself a citizen because of his service in the Union army and his father's naturalization.

THIRTY DAY WORM SPRAY.

From all reports available it seems to be time to apply the 30 days worm spray. This should be done as soon as the present showers are over and settled weather comes again. The object of this spray is to get the first brood of worms. It is very important and should not be neglected or put off if you expect to grow apples or pears free from worms. Remember, you can't kill the worms after they get inside the fruit. Thorough application is necessary.

Apply to apples and pears. The fruit, not the tree, should be thoroughly coated. Use arsenate of lead, one pound (dry) to 50 gallons of water. Add lime sulfur 1 to 50 as a final spray for scab.

TO WEAR OLD CLOTHES.

By Associated Press. DES MOINES, Ia., June 10.—The wearing of old clothes by the delegates to the fifteenth biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which opens here June 16 for a week's session, is urged by Mrs. Jostah Evans Cowles, president of the federation.

"War-time thrift must prevail if we are to help right conditions. There is no need for a denim or gingham dress rage which would simply make it harder for the women who really need such things. Make over what you have. Come to the convention with a story of thrift that will thrill other women into doing likewise," said Mrs. Cowles' appeal.

AUTO THEFTS INCREASE.

That the gasoline shortage over the state is greatly improved is shown by the resumption of auto thefts, Sheriff Quine states. For the past two weeks there have been scarcely any thefts reported and because of the inability to secure gasoline for a get-away. However, the past three days have shown a great increase in the number of circulars and telegrams sent out by officials of various cities in an effort to capture stolen machines and this leads to the conclusion that the gasoline situation is generally improved. The contention is sustained by the fact that tourists are again moving and a large number of cars passed through the city today.
