A. E. Street, county club leader.

Installation of officers will conclude the program, following which there will be a social hour, with light refreshments, consisting of strawberries and wafers.

A cordial invitation is extended to all adults and to members of the Boys' and Girls' Industrial clubs.

Location Not Found—

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Pearce, who have been spending the past two weeks in Roseburg, looking for a location, departed this morning for Portland. They were formerly residents of El Paso, Texas, and were attracted to this city because of the low average of wind velocity. They had expected to go into business but not finding what they desired will visit other portions of Oregon. They are greatly pleased with Roseburg.

Goes to Eugene—

Mrs. C. L. Stoddard went to Eugene this morning to spend a short time attending to business matters.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE
by the noted author

JUST ABOUT THE BABY.

"I think you should try and sleep a little, Mrs. Gordon," said my nurse. I looked up quickly. I had been so absorbed in my letter that I had not heard her come in.

"I am not at all sleepy," I protested.

"No, you don't look sleepy," she observed.

"I have never known anyone to recover as quickly as you have from such a serious illness. If you will try to sleep or at least rest quietly for a while, I think you may sit up for a little, while I prepare your bed for the night."

"That will be fine, and I will try and be good enough to deserve it, for I am very tired of lying in bed."

"Mr. Gordon just called up again on the long distance telephone and told me to tell you that he would be here tonight, but that he would not disturb you until morning. He just wanted you to know that he would be in the house to call when you awakened."

Darkening the Room.

As the nurse was saying this she was deftly straightening my bed and darkening my room, although I thought I could not sleep at all when she first suggested it, I did not know when she left the room.

It was late in the afternoon when I awoke to find my baby at my breast and Ruth at the door with her arms full of roses.

"How well you look, Katherine," she exclaimed in surprise.

"Do you think so? It seemed to me as I looked in the glass that I was very white and thin."

"Oh, of course your face is a little thin, but you have a faint color which is very becoming."

"Ruth I want to tell you that you are right. There is no thrill like that of being able to look down upon your baby as I am looking on mine."

Ruth smiled, "Let me see how you look, Miss Gordon," she said, bending over my baby. "Open your eyes and stop wrinkling up that foolish little nose of yours just as your mother does when she is happy."

"Why, Ruth, I never knew I wrinkled up my nose," I said in surprise. "I am sure I never saw it wrinkled in the glass—and I always smile at myself in the glass, as every one else does."

"Yes," commented Ruth, "that is one reason I approve of mirrors. One never looks in a mirror without trying to look his best."

"And 'best' of course is smiling."

Ruth Takes Mary.

Ruth had taken Mary in her arms. "My, isn't she lovely?" she exclaimed. "I think she has the good points of both John and you, my dear. I was so afraid she was not going to have your wonderful hair."

"Well, she has not gotten it yet," was my response.

"Why, Katherine, she has a lot of hair."

"Do you call that fuzzy silk on the top of her head hair?"

"Yes, don't you?"

"I don't call it anything, but since both you and Charles proclaim it hair that is just like mine, I suppose I will have to be satisfied."

Ruth in tones which showed she thought I was disappointed in mine.

"Oh, no they do not," was my quick assertion.

"This baby is the loveliest thing that was ever born into this world."

"Of course," answered Ruth. "That is what I thought of every one of my three babies."

"Ruth," I said solemnly, "does the same ecstacy come with the birth of other children, or it a part of it the newness of the sensation?"

"Do you remember, Katherine, that silly little song from some forgotten musical comedy about the joy when you first kiss the last girl you love. I always thought that a bit of cynical smartness until the first time I kissed my second and third baby. Nature, my dear Katherine, is a pretty good friend to all of us if we let her alone to let her work out her will with us in her own way."

"Then you think it is nature that sends us love, either romantic or maternal."

Does Not Miss the Father.

"Honestly, Katherine, I do not know from whom or what comes love. I do not even know what love is; when I think I have surely known it I find that what I called love was in some cases pride, in others a poetical illusion. Truly, since little Bob is back and I find him still devoted to me I do not particularly miss his father any more."

"So Bobby, Jr., is back, is he?" I asked.

"Yes; he came the next day after his nurse got my letter saying I did not wish him to overstay the time agreed upon."

"Is he looking fine?"

"Yes, and he speaks often of Helen. At first it gave me a distinct shock, but after I found how unconscious the child was about it and how lovely Helen had been to him I began to see how foolish I was. Little Bob was really glad to get home," continued Ruth, unconsciously answering the question I had been wanting to ask. "I think it was because he missed his little brother and sister. You see, over there, there were no children. The other day I heard him talking to them when he did not know I was around. 'Ruthie,' he said, 'I've got twelve soldiers,' a real one and a kind of make-believe one. My real 'movver' is yours and Buddy's, but my make-believe one is just for me.'

"'Where is she?' asked Buddy, 'and does she want us, too?'

Can Not Have Any.

"'I don't know, but she can not have any of us. Our daddy said so the other night when I was there.'

"She said, 'I do not see why we can not have Bobby here with us all the time,' and daddy said: 'Helen, I would not take Bob away from his 'movver' for a the word.' And my make-believe 'movver' just said, 'Oh,' but I saw a great big tear on her cheek, and I climbed up into her lap and kissed it away, and Ruthie it was just as salty as it could be.'

"'I do not like salt,' said Ruth primly.

"'And she can keep her old tears.'

"I do not believe she likes 'em, either, for this one made a big red spot on her face, and when I kissed it away she said, 'You blessed child and cried some more.'"

POLITICAL AIMS SCOUTED.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—General Pershing declared emphatically on Tuesday that his contemplated retirement from active service was without political significance. He said he would enter private business, the nature of which had not yet been determined.

A schedule of General Pershing's engagements for the remainder of the month was made public Tuesday, disproving rumors that he planned to visit Chicago during the republican convention.

A number of offers of business connections have been received by the general, it was learned Tuesday, announcement of his imminent retirement having given impetus to the communications on this subject. Those close to the general, however, said today that he had not yet given serious consideration to any of them.

SINGULAR HUMAN SOUGHT.

NEW YORK, June .—Scores of reformed criminals, including several murderers and gangsters, aided the police today in a search for "the only man who ever failed to make good" after being befriended by George R. Ellis, social worker, known as "the Bowery Caruso," who has helped more than 5000 "down-and-outers" to return to honest living.

Lillian, the 12-year-old daughter of the slum missionary, sustained serious injuries in a desperate struggle with this unnamed man, who beat her into unconsciousness and fled.

Recently Mr. Ellis bought a new suit of clothes and obtained a position for the man, who had just been relieved from prison and received into the Ellis home.

SCHOOL EXECUTIVE QUITS.

EUGENE, Or., June 9.—W. R. Rutherford, city superintendent of schools, tonight tendered his resignation to the board of education, announcing that he had been offered the position of assistant director of educational activities of the United States navy at Washington, D. C. The board took the resignation under consideration.

The present school fight in Eugene has centered around Mr. Rutherford. Most of the grade teachers signed an agreement several months ago not to teach in the local schools if Mr. Rutherford were retained, but the board engaged him for another year. The school fight resulted in a recall election against E. R. Bryson, member of the board, which will take place June 21.

MOTOR RECEIPTS $90,696.

SALEM, Or., June 9.—Receipts at the motor vehicle department of the state government for the month of May, 1920, totalled $90,696, according to a financial statement prepared by the secretary of state today.

Various transactions which made up the fees for the month included 4277 automobile registrations, 231 motorcycle registrations, 17 dealers' licenses, 193 chauffeurs' licenses, 1,803 automobile transfers, 71 motorcycle transfers, 102 automobile license plates, 14 dealers plates, four chauffeur badges and 36 dealers' additional sets of license plates.

Antlers Theatre Reopens Tonight

After working for over 24 hours without stop, workmen succeeded this morning in completing the installation of the two new machines for the Antler's theater, the old ones having been destroyed in the recent fire. The damage done to the operating room has been thoroughly repaired and as the new machines are the most modern obtainable the picture projection will be as perfect as possible. The management is greatly pleased over the demonstrated safety of the building, the fire proving that any fire igniting in the operating in the operating room can be handled successfully and without danger to the audience. The theater will reopen tonight with William Farnum, the eminent William Fox star, in his latest photodrama, "Wings of the Morning," a picturization of the well known novel written by Louis Tracy. This is a stirring sea story with all the elements necessary for a superior screen entertainment.

The romance opens in faraway Singapore, at a British army post. Mr. Farnum, as the hero, is cashiered out of the service on a false charge, and later is found as a sailor on board a passenger steamer crossing the China sea. The boat is wrecked on an uncharted island during a typhoon, and he rescues the daughter of the owner of the line. Their vicissitudes and adventures on the island and the final denouement are said to be developed along extremely dramatic lines.

The picture was directed by J. Gordon Edwards.

OBITUARY.

Miss Mary A. Parker was born in Knoxville, Ohio, August 27, 1855. She was married to S. M. Parker on April 25, 1881. To this union were born two children, Otto A. Parker of Brockway, Oregon, and Mrs. Effie Stubblefield of Dillard.

She leaves to mourn her loss, her mother, Mrs. Mary Bishop of Aptos, Calif.; one sister, Mrs. Hester Douz of Pomona, Calif., and five brothers, Allen, Schooler, Omen, James and Jonathan Bishop, besides other relatives and a host of friends.

She united with the Methodist Episcopal church when but a youth. She has ever remained in the faith of the fathers. She passed away Monday, June 7th, at 11.30 p. m., at her home in Dillard, Oregon. The funeral service was conducted at the home by the Rev. R. S. Bishop on Wednesday, June 9th, and interment was at the Brockway cemetery.

Starts For Chicago—

F. H. Smith left this morning for Chicago, where he expects to spend a couple of weeks attending to business matters. He will go on to eastern Ohio where he has relatives with whom he expects to visit. He will be gone from Roseburg for three or four months.

THIRTY DAY WORM SPRAY.

From all reports available it seems to be time to apply the 30 days worm spray. This should be done as soon as the present showers are over and settled weather comes again. The object of this spray is to get the first brood of worms. It is very important and should not be neglected or put off if you expect to grow apples or pears free from worms. Remember, you can't kill the worms after they get inside the fruit. Thorough application is necessary.

Apply to apples and pears. The fruit, not the tree, should be thoroughly coated. Use arsenate of lead, one pound (dry) to 50 gallons of water. Add lime sulfur 1 to 50 as a final spray for scab.

June 7, 1920.
E. C. ARMSTRONG,
County Fruit Inspector.
