

LAXATIVE for Aged People

THE BANE of old age is constipation. The bowels become weak and unable to perform their functions without aid. For this purpose only the mildest and gentlest laxative should be used. The use of harsh cathartics aggravates the trouble and makes the constipation worse. Chamberlain's Tablets are a favorite with people of middle age and older on account of their gentle action.

State Dealers Get Gasoline

PORTLAND, June 12.—Forty carloads of gasoline monthly, with a total of approximately 200,000 gallons, has been contracted for by the Oregon State Automobile Dealers Association to be allocated to automobile dealers in various parts of the state. Although the source of supply was announced at a meeting of the 22-olime conservation committee yesterday, it was learned that the company independent of the four oil companies has accepted the contract.

try in Oregon and that as quickly as the present shortage has been relieved, they will be glad to step out of the gasoline business. No effort will be made by the dealers to enter into a competitive gasoline sales business. Nothing will restrict the dealer from selling gasoline, if he so desires, but the very fact that the gasoline which has been contracted for by the dealers will cost 27 1/2 cents a gallon laid down in Oregon, a price 2 cents in excess of the present market price, will naturally prohibit the dealers from active competition with the oil companies.

WEST SUPPLIES CEDAR SHINGLES

Report Given Out by District Forester Shows Shingles Go to Many Parts.

THE DEMAND IS STRONG

Production in Oregon Has Not Been Materially Changed During Past Several Years—Production in Washington Less.

The district forester has just given out the results of a study which show that western red cedar shingles from Oregon and Washington are shipped to every state in the union. The report shows that Minnesota is the largest single purchaser of Washington shingles, while California is the biggest buyer of Oregon shingles. The middle western states are very heavy buyers, while about eight per cent of the total sales go to southern states. Oregon and Washington produced 6 1/2 billion shingles in 1919, or two billion more than in 1918. The cut for 1919 was less than that for 1918 or 1917, and far below that for 1909.

Western red cedar is the leading shingle wood in the United States. Shingles manufactured from this wood in Oregon, Washington and British Columbia represent 85 per cent of the total production of the country. Shingles are also made from cypress, white cedar, redwood and yellow pine. Douglas fir shingles were manufactured commercially in 1919, largely because of the scarcity and high cost of western red cedar logs.

Shingle production in 1919, like that of 1918, was not normal. The first quarter, following closely after the armistice, was quiet. Toward the close of the second quarter the demand for shingles became strong. This, however, was closely followed by a car shortage that was felt during the remainder of the year. Meantime, the price of shingles advanced, more than doubling by the end of the year. The cost of shingle logs, labor and supplies advanced. This taken in connection with the other adverse conditions being unfavorable for normal production, forest officers say. The effect of the depletion of the supply of western red cedar is noticeable. Washington produced nine billion shingles in 1909 as against six billion in 1919. This decline is apparently due, the report shows, to the fact that the supply of cedar at the higher elevations is not so large as along the river bottoms and lowlands. The report is authority for the statement that in British Columbia, where fewer shingles have been cut, production has increased 300 per cent in the last ten years. Production in Oregon, amounting to about 1/2 billion a year, has not changed materially for several years.

Boy Scouts Give New Camp Name

By John Black. SCOUT CREEK CAMP, June 14.—After our camp was moved from Lone Rock to across from the fish hatchery, we settled down in earnest for a happy, eventful two weeks. We have such a good location that it is possible we shall return next year and see what we don't see this time, so we have named our camp "Scout Creek Camp." Our camp is pitched near a small stream and as it had no name we call it "Scout Creek."

Tribute Is Paid To Overseas' Dead

John C. Hurd, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Hurd, of this city, and Marion, Fennington, both boys of the 65th artillery, were buried in Eugene on Sunday afternoon, July 5th. Both of the boys were quite well known to the Roseburg boys who served overseas with the 65th regiment of coast artillery. The boys were comrades in the same battery of the regiment and met their death at the same place and on the same day. They contracted pneumonia at Camp Woodley, England, just prior to the sailing of the regiment for France, and were taken to base hospital 35, where they later died. Their burial took place at the Magdalen Hill cemetery near Winchester, England. On February 26, 1918, the young men left with their battery, March 1st saw the soldiers board the transport Northern Pacific bound for an eastern coast by way of the Panama Canal, arriving at Portsmouth, Virginia, March 15th, leaving the same day for Camp Merritt, N. J. When the young men boarded the Mauretania in New York they little realized they would never see the shores of France, to whom they offered their lives. The transport arrived in Liverpool, England, on April 2, and on the following day they were sent to Camp Woodley, an English rest camp at Ramsey. It was here they contracted the fatal disease.

The entire services in Eugene Sunday were conducted by the American Legion, the funeral itself being military without a military burial. The pallbearers consisted of boys of the same battery of which the deceased were members. Decorations on the caskets were missing, a flag being draped over each, though the platform was a mass of flowers, banked high on each side. Mr. Hurd was 19 years of age at the time of his enlistment and visited with his parents in this city just prior to his departure with the 65th artillery. He was greeted by his father and mother at the time he passed through here enroute to San Francisco to board the transport.

Can You Answer These Questions

Just now the magazines are coming out with a lot of trick lists of questions, says the American Legion Weekly. The highbrows call them Psychological Self Analysis Intelligence Examinations, but the lads who only wash down to the collar line refer to them as the Dumb-bell Handicap. In other words, if you cannot answer the questions in a certain definite time—say forty-five minutes or a couple of days for each one—you are a certified old can. If you can answer them in that time, you probably are, just the same. Either way it doesn't prove any particular point, but it helps to kill time now that Jerry's Joint is closed, and it takes the strain off the ouija board.

So here is a flock of the same dope, collected by the master minds who edit this list weekly. If you can answer the questions before General March takes his next trick at stable police you will be awarded a pair of Indian clubs to beat out your brains with for having wasted time on anything so foolish. If you can't see the light, you win a half-peek of birdseed to feed to the cuckoo clock in idle moments. Shoot.
