LOVE and MARRIED LIFE

by the noted author
Idah McGlone Gibson

THE ANTICS OF A WIFE.
"I am awfully sorry that you are going away," said Ruth again as we entered my room. "Somehow I had a feeling you were going to live here a long time," then Ruth stopped and blushed.
"I don't know why you should have thought that," I said.
"Forgive me, dear, for thinking that perhaps you were happier here than anywhere else."
"I am."
"Then why do you leave?"
"Because it has come to me lately that my husband needs me more than ever before, and that perhaps I need my husband."
"But you have your child," said Ruth rather wonderingly.
"It is because I have my child that I realize, dear Ruth, that my husband and I should be together, and should divide our responsibilities."
"But the children's responsibilities, really are the mother's cares. Fathers have very little to do with them until they are ready to go out into the world."
"The Great Mistake."
"That is just where you are wrong Ruth. That is where you have made your mistake—your great mistake. If you had allowed Bobby to have some of the responsibilities of the children, if you had considered him as a part of your family life after your children had come, I believe you would have been ideally happy, and he would have been perhaps happier with you than with Helen."
"Do you think so?" asked Ruth with pitiable eagerness.
"Oh, of course, one cannot tell," I remarked hastily, "for I did not want her to feel, as if she were entirely to blame. I knew that she was not wholly to blame. However, someone always begins a quarrel or an estrangement, and usually the one that begins it can't finish it. Circumstances arrive which take the entire episode out of their hands."
"When do you expect to go?" asked Ruth.
"It will depend greatly upon John. I shall try to persuade him to stay here until the last of the week and then I am sure that even the doctor and the nurse will think I am able to go. I am going to take my nurse with me. She has agreed to stay on with the baby until a trained nurse will be no longer necessary."
"Do you think a trained nurse is necessary now?" asked Ruth. "I always took care of my babies as soon as I was able to get around. I that they needed a mother's care and I simply gave up my life to them."
"Ruth, dear, I do not intend to give my life up to Mary. I intend to see that she has all the attention necessary for her physical and mental development. But you will forgive me when I say that I do not think that your children are any healthier, cleverer, or better managed than many of the children of your friends who have turned them over to competent nursemaids, governesses and tutors."
"Just Couldn't Help It."
"Oh, I suppose I have been a poor fool. But somehow I just couldn't help it. It seemed to me that when my first baby came I just had to give my life up to it, and the others made quite as much trouble."
"Of course, you understand, Ruth, that I believe that every mother should see that her children have adequate care either by herself or by someone especially trained for the work, but I cannot see why a woman in your or my position need spend her life in the nursery, when there are so many people that can take care of children better than we can. I am going to fit up a nice set of rooms in the new house for my baby and then I am going to turn my attention to making the other parts of the house a home for my husband. Turning a home into a home, Ruth, is oftentimes a rather bigger business, and I think it is I know many mothers who lived in houses that their husbands declined to even think of as a home."
"Did you always think things out in this way?" asked Ruth curiously.
"Not consciously, but I think that every woman after she marries and enters into her new life is asking the question 'WHY?' with almost the same insistence that a child asks it."
All Must Learn
"We must learn you know. Unfortunately, we girls are educated for everything in the world but the one thing that we all expect to enter—marriage. Some of us never learn and we make a great sorrow for not only ourselves but for others. Those of us who do not go through the whole curriculum are usually graduated into a world called 'contentment.'"
"Are you a graduate?" softly asked Ruth.
"No my dear, but I really think that I am through with my freshman year. I have come to some knowledge of what is required of me."

ALASKA DUO SECOND DAY

Two Unusually Gifted Musicians Coming.

Coming to the Chautauqua on the second day of the Chautauqua week is the Alaska Duo, presenting two striking musical programs of real beauty and charm.

Miss Lona Laska is a native Alaskan girl whose remarkable voice has captivated critics everywhere—both here and abroad. An extract from the Tacoma Ledger says: "Miss Laska's voice is a beautiful operatic soprano. She was a revelation, with her exquisite tones and surprising dramatic abilities, her finished technique and charming, unaffected appearance." Hulda Voelisch, the other member of the Alaska Duo, has proven herself a sincere artist as shown by this extract from Saginaw Daily News: "Hulda Voelisch, soprano, appeared Wednesday night at the Academy. Her singing is delightful. Her voice is sweet, sympathetic and clear. Her piano numbers were played artistically and she displayed a musical versatility which was surprising."

CONFUCIUS' TOMB A SHRINE

Graveyard in Which Great Teacher is Buried Held Sacred to Him and His Descendants.

The graveyard of Shantung, China, lying one mile from the city gate, is noble expression of the dignity and mystery of death, says Nathaniel Peffer in Scribner's Magazine. Leading to it from the gate is a broad avenue of trees spanned half way by a stone arch of exquisite carving and majestic lines. The graveyard proper, which is really a park, is enclosed in a pink wall.

Within the graveyard any member of K'ung clan, descendants of Confucius, may be buried, whether the person be a scholar or a coolie. At the further end of the park is another wall, behind which are the tombs of Confucius, his son and his grandson. These consist of a piling up of earth, before which are a stone altar, a tablet inscribed with six Chinese characters, a stone urn flanked by two bronze candlesticks, and along its sides a few trees with shrubbery around it. The K'ung family has enormous holdings of valuable property, the government remitting the taxes on much of the property and appropriating periodically for the maintenance and repair of the cemetery.

An Apostle of Americanism

Here is a Man From the Labor Ranks Hitting Hard at the "Reds" and Radicals

Straight from the labor ranks comes E. B. Fish, the two-fisted fighter for true Americanism, who is to address Chautauqua audiences the third afternoon of Chautauqua, on "The Cause and Cure of Industrial Unrest." Less than a year ago he was a machinist in an Everett, Washington, shipbuilding plant. The spread of radicalism threatened labor conditions in the Northwest, and Fish left his job as machinist on marine engine beds, and went out to preach Americanism to his fellow laborers. In less than a year he has probably done more than any other man in the Northwest to oust the "reds" out of that country.
