Gasoline Supply Is On Increase

Gasoline supplies are increasing. The latest bureau of Mines report shows that reserve stocks on hand at the refineries in March totalled over 626,000,000 gallons, and serves to offset some of the startling statements that have been made regarding the gasoline supply.

In fact, this gasoline scare has been largely psychological, in the opinion of the federal trade commission. The failure in certain north Texas fields upset some of the oil men a little and made an immediate shortage seem possible.

1920 has begun fortunately, however, and there are a good many factors which point to increased production.

Refiners can get twice the amount of gasoline from oil by using the new "cracking" processes. The big mid-west companies using the modern methods are getting a thirty-five per cent yield from crude, but refiners to twenty-two per cent. The cost of installing the new processes will make the change slow but if any absolute shortage should confront the market, oil men say they will take this means to meet it. This would mean an increase of sixty per cent in our present supply.

Mexico is another source of future supply which has been almost doubling its shipments to the American market every year. In 1919 the Mexican market shipped 62,662,000 barrels of crude oil to the United States, most of it to the Atlantic coast.

David White, of the United States geological survey sees infinite possibilities in oil obtained from shale although this supply will not be tapped in great quantities until more machinery has been developed.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS.

MISSOULA, Mont., July 2.—More than 25 years ago and up to about ten years ago all roads in western Montana led direct to the Gem state, then in the heart of the most fertile of "red-light" districts in the new country. On west Front street Missoula, this spring is seeing here the final passing of this last remnant of those days. The theatre is being entirely remodelled and will be reconstructed to serve as a dairy.

In the old days "tired business men" lumber jacks, miners and stock men there wined the goddess of chance. Even as workmen are engaged on the building today may be seen in letters whose paint is dimmed by time, across the wall of the structure:

"Who loves not wine, woman and song,
Remains a fool his whole life long."
And, if that were true, old timers say there were very few fools in the good old days.

AUTO LAW HITS TOURISTS.

SALEM, Or., June 30.—Under the provisions of the so-called motor vehicle operator's license law passed at the special session of the legislature last January, there is nothing to prevent over-zealous police officers of Oregon from arresting all non-resident automobile tourists passing through the state unless they comply with the act and obtain the required driver's permit.

This was made known here today by John Cochran, assistant secretary of state, following a conference at which the operator's license law was gone into thoroughly by Attorney-General Brown. The law is specific in its wording, according to Mr. Cochran, and provides that all persons over 16 years of age who drive motor vehicles within the state of Oregon shall first provide themselves with a driver's license. The only exceptions are chauffeurs and

The Bigger the Bank Account —the Bigger the Opportunity.

That has always held true, but is even more so just now when the buying power of the dollar has become so small.

If you can hold on to your dollars until normal conditions return, think what an advantage you will have. But holding on requires having a safe and accessible place to keep the dollars, and we think the Umpqua Valley Bank will serve that purpose to your satisfaction.

motor cars licensed in other states. Although it is not expected that police officers will go so far as to arrest non-residents of the state for violation of the operator's license law, it was stated today that steps will be taken to have the act amended at the next session of the legislature. The amendment probably will so change the present law that only residents of Oregon will be required to take out these licenses.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idah McGlone Gibson

PLANS OF HOME

"What in the world did John mean by saying 'I'll telegraph Elizabeth Moreland, as he went out the door?'" asked Ruth.

"I am sure I don't know except that Elizabeth is going to live with his mother when we go into the new house, and he said something to me the other night to the effect that she was going to move in directly. Perhaps he was afraid she would be there when we arrived."

"Would it matter much?" asked Ruth. "She certainly would not be in your rooms."

"That is exactly where she would be," I thought, but I did not voice the thought. Instead I said, "Well I suppose that John thinks if we swoop down with a nurse and a baby on Madame Gordon, it would be just as well not to have Elizabeth Moreland there to see the fireworks."

Ruth kissed me good-bye soon after and I sat down to work out for myself what John did mean by sending the telegram to Elizabeth Moreland. Poor old blundering John, he hasn't the slightest bit of finesse. Any other man might have sent the telegram, but any other man would not have blurted out the fact that he was going to send it.

Determines to Keep Temper.

However, I was determined not to be angry. "Miss Parker," I called to the nurse, "I wonder if you, Hannah and I might get the Gordon family ready to go home day after tomorrow night."

Miss Parker looked at me for a moment and then said, "I'm sure we could Mrs. Gordon if you think you are able to go."

"I am surely not able to stay. My husband and I have been more or less separated for the last nine months, and I think it is time for us to be together again, and besides, I have a wonderful new house and want to see it. I am anxious to get back and furnish it."

"Well, of course I can not say Mrs. Gordon, what the doctor will think but I imagine he will allow you to go under the circumstances."

"Of course he will let her go," said John who came in at that moment. "Just a minute ago he said he thought it would do my wife good, this change, and I know it will girl, he whispered as he came over to the window where I stood, 'and believe me, it is going to be some change. I am going to try and get your point of view, dear, and I have something here, and he began fumbling around through his pockets "which may possibly make you understand mine better. Now where do you suppose I put the darn thing?" he asked going through his pockets again.

"Which word poem in the picture describes me, John," I asked demurely.

"Why, why, why, where did you see it," he stammered.

"I picked it up off the floor where you must have dropped it when you pulled out your handkerchief."

"You know very well which one describes you girl," he said decisively as he pulled me over to him.

Who is The Other One?
"But the thing that interests me is who is the other girl."

"There ain't no other lady," he remarked sardoniously.

"Of course, I didn't keep the clipping for the other woman. It was because I know and have always known Katherine that you are the only woman in the world to bring out the best of me that I kept that clipping."

"Thank you, John," I whispered. "Oh, I am so glad that the baby has come to us. We seem to be so much nearer to each other. I seem to understand you better and you seem to be more appreciative on my point of view."

"Don't be too sure of me Katherine dear, I shall probably spill the beans many times again as I have done in the past," and having said this he proceeded to spill them all over the place.

"Do you think it is necessary to take Miss Parker with us," he asked. "It seems to me that a trained nurse is an expensive proposition for such a wee bit of humanity as Mary."

"I think that it is absolutely necessary to take Miss Parker with us and keep her with us for some time. You want to know that your child is being given the proper care."

"Why, of course I do, but most women who have nothing more to do than you have taken care of their own children."

"I will be very glad to do it John if you will stay home with me at night when we have no one to leave the baby with and if you will do your part, but I am not going to stay at home all alone until you get used to going around by yourself. You know, John dear, you get into all sorts of trouble when you go out by yourself. As for Miss Parker's salary, if you think you cannot afford it, I will pay it out of my own income."

Only $50 to Dress On.
"Well, but that will leave you only about $50 to dress on."

"I don't expect to dress on it, John. I expect you to pay my bills as you have always done. Fifty dollars a month I shall keep for that little spending money. I have never had until dear mother died and left me this income."

"What are you going to do about 'his house?'"

"Why, I am going to shut up the most of it and let Hannah take care of the rest of it. It will make a home for her."

"And do you expect to make a home for that old woman as long as she lives?" was his nasty question. Tomorrow—I Tell John About Karl.
