Roseburg, Oregon, July 3, 1920.

THE VILLAGE AGITATOR.

Most every live community has a thing called the "village agitator." He is the kind of individual that is seemingly working for the best interests of the town, he is loud in his praises of the city and county's resources to fatten his own wallet...

Just as soon as the democrats get their standard bearer called to the post the public will have earned a good, long, substantial rest from national politics.

When the parents of a girl of the tender age of fourteen years give their consent to entering the matrimonial arena it is certainly a God-send that we have a state law that does not permit "traffic in children."

Both the republicans and democrats have "passed the buck" on the soldiers' bonus bill. The big interests seem to be in the saddle, always, when it comes to distributing money...

Vacations are supposed to make you eager for work, but they don't—instead they give you the idea you should never work again.

Oratory proves nothing, but so long as the masses believe it does, voice will be at a premium over brains.

There's no use wasting all this warm weather in one spot. Better save a little for August, Mr. Bell.

No man is perfect and whenever he gets caught he seems to take a good deal of pride in the fact.

A woman with a household of babies has plenty of soul-mates without leaving home.

Let the eagle scream and the cannon roar. It's all over but the shouting until November.

William Jennings was right on the job—at the democratic national convention.

The other man's dog is always vicious.

HAVE WORDY BATTLE.

A wordy battle nearly ending in blows occurred this morning in front of Rapp's restaurant on Sheridan street, the argument fortunately ceasing before it waxed too hot.

No fruit will be received at Cannery Monday, July 5th, 1920, account holiday.

TREES ARE REGISTERED.

LODI, Cal., Mrs. May Crocker of the Lodi Woman's Club announced today that the American Forestry Association has registered the memorial trees planted by the club, on its national honor roll.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idaho McGlone Gibson

I TELL JOHN ABOUT KARL.

"Oh, John, John, please don't let's begin to quarrel over the money. You told me the other day you were never making so much in your life, and now you are quibbling over $25 a week, which I want to give to an expert to care for our child."

"Well, you know, Katherine, he said, 'I haven't told you that I have been dabbling in stocks a good deal lately, and I haven't had the best of luck. Until I recoup, we will have to go a little slow.'"

"Now look here, Katherine, I have told you I was going to change, but I want it distinctly understood right here that I am not going to change so far that I will allow you to run my business for me. I never lose any more than I can afford on the stock market."

"All right; that being the case, don't ask me to be forever practicing petty economies, for if you do, I will show you you are losing more than I can afford."

"You can afford. What do you mean YOU can afford?"

"I mean just this John, that as long as I know you are playing the stock market and taking money out of the legitimate channels to gamble—for that is all it is—I shall have everything to make myself comfortable and shall indulge in as many of my luxurious desires, besides."

"Good Lord, Katherine, when you say such things as these, I want to spank you. As he said this he seemed to get more angry, and I, seeing his anger, became furious."

"Well, why don't you?" I asked. "Hush, you know that I would not go as far as that."

"There are worse things in this world."

"But Katherine, why aren't you womanly. Even if you do think I am wrong in this, why aren't you diplomatic?"

"Simply because I can't be hypocritical. If I could I would probably be saying, 'Oh, you poor dear, I am so sorry you made these losses. I will be just as economical as I can and will help you make it up,' and all the while John, in my heart I would be seething and furious at your selfishness."

"I have been hearing a lot about him since you have been away."

"It isn't necessary for me to tell you."

"No, it isn't. But I fear you have gathered a wrong impression from your friend. I am going to tell you something."

John grabbed me by the shoulders and with his face next to mine, he said: "What are you going to tell me?"

"Just this. That since Karl Shepard went away, since he took my part, and fought with me because of your dangerous actions with Elizabeth Moreland, I have received a number of letters from him."

"Which you answered."

"Letters a Great Solace."

"Which I might have answered had you friend, given the chance. These letters have been a great solace to me John. When you have been cruel—don't shake your head you have been cruel—these letters have given me a feeling that somewhere in this world there was one who was thinking tender thoughts of me instead of unkind ones that 'no have voiced.'"

"Demn him, I wish that I had 'em here."

"He told here John, and I don't know where he is, but I shall hear from him soon. I saw him writing me a letter last night."

"What do you mean?"

"Here is the explanation." I handed him Karl Shepard's letters and left the room.
