COAL REGULATION.

A prominent eastern coal operator warns his brethren that unless they play fair with the public and do their utmost to remedy present unsatisfactory coal conditions, they may expect to have the government take the coal business out of their hands. The fact is recognized that the crippled condition of the railroads has led to many operators who are not doing all they can to co-operate with the railroads. The warning is also timely in view of the stand taken by the anthracite operators against opening their books in connection with their wage controversy. They insist that their profits, as indicated by their income tax returns, have nothing to do with what wages the miners ought to get, and seem to imply that those profits should not be considered, either in connection with the prices charged for their product. This is an astonishing position to take. The miners feel that if the operators are making an abnormal profit out of the business, they themselves ought to share that profit in the form of liberal wages, on the ground that labor is just as important to the industry as capital, and deserve as well for it. The miners, however, do not appear to be aiming at a mutual arrangement for big profits and big wages at the expense of the general consumer. They insist that they want to make coal as cheap as possible for all consumers, including themselves, and to that end they want capital to have a fair living profit, but no more, just as they ask for themselves a fair living wage but no more.

If the anthracite operators persist in holding that their profits are none of the public's business, they are certainly inviting trouble for themselves. Such an attitude strengthens whatever demand there is for government control of the coal industry, and makes the proposal seem less radical. If federal control is to be extended at all, the coal mines after the railroads, may be next in line, since on them depends the very life of the railroads, and in slightly less degree, of nearly all other industries.

The whole country rejoices in the surrender and incarceration of Erwin Berendell. The sooner Grover Cleveland Berendell follows his brother's example, comes out of his cowardly hiding and goes where he belongs, the better. The whole affair has been a disgrace to the country, an insult to the splendid young men who went without question to defend America in her hour of need, an insult to the memory of the great men whose name one of the brothers needs a lesson in how to bring to her sons, she has it in this contemptible instance.

Don't get so excited shouting for the Shamrock and the Resolute that you forget to watch the progress of the Alaska flyers.

It looks as if the third party will be fourth, when the socialist vote is recorded.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idah McGlone Gibson

IS JOHN BEGINNING TO UNDERSTAND?

"I am quite sure," said Elizabeth as we went down to the car, "that you won't be back in time to tell the men where you want the goods placed. Shall I do it for you?" "Just tell them to put them anywhere," John called back without turning his head. "I haven't the slightest idea what Katherine wants to do with any of it, and we will have plenty of help to put them in place."

"It is necessary for you to come, John," I said as we got into the car. "Surely you must have some business this morning that needs your attention."

"I have nothing that is so pressing except to get that house in shape so that we can sleep there tomorrow night if possible."

"I smiled a little to myself, as I thought of how John was writing under the amount of money that must be paid out for us every day at the hotel, and I confess I was a bit happy to think that for once in all the time we had been married I had bested him in money matters. Alas and alack! I did not know what was in store for me then in the future and it is well that I did not."

"I don't understand, Katherine, why Elizabeth told you that she had not been in the house before."

"Well, my dear, you didn't really tell me that she had been."

"No, of course, I didn't. But I knew that you knew that she had been from the way that you looked when she plumped out that story of not having been over. She must have forgotten about it."

"No, my dear John, she is too clever a woman for that. She knew of course just how I would feel about crossing the threshold with you, and she played up the idea, forgetting John, just how stupid a man can be in circumstances like these."

"Then you really think I am stupid, Katherine," he asked.

"Not more so than any other man," I answered.

THE FURNITURE PUT.

Although I was very tired, I decided that I would not let John know anything about it, and started out immediately.

"When we arrived I found that Elizabeth had made the mistake of staying. Alice was there but Tom evidently had to go about his business. Elizabeth had an annoyed look on her face and for the first time I saw her when she was in repose, she looked absolutely cruel. There are many, many women whom we think are always happy, always charming, whom we never see without smiles upon their faces, and we are quite surprised sometimes when we catch them unawares, to find that their faces express something very different from anything we had dreamed of them. Elizabeth Moreland did not see John coming up the stairway because she did not feel it necessary to compose her face into one of her radiant smiles, therefore, I was sure that John caught the glimpse of absolute discontent upon her face. The sight of this moved me to pity, but it evidently surprised and annoyed him."

"Are you still here, Elizabeth?" he asked briskly.

"She gave a start and turned her face. 'Why, yes,' she said, 'didn't you expect to find me?'"

"I didn't think anything about it," he answered gruffly.

"Well, I was going to remain as Alice was going to," she ventured timidly, "but now that you and Katherine have come I think I shall be going."

"Tell my chauffeur to take you home in the car, Elizabeth," I said for I really pitied her.

"I can walk," she answered. "I think that I need the exercise."

"That is the first time that I ever knew Elizabeth to walk if she might ride," said John as she went out of the door.

"I don't think she would have objected, John, had it been you who offered the motor," said Alice.

ONE WOMAN'S EXPERIENCE

Of Interest to Expectant Mothers

Goshen, Ind.—I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound with good results after I had suffered for some time with female trouble. Some years ago I had twin boys and took your Vegetable Compound before they came; also before my four year old boy was born, and afterwards, and think it fine for such cases. I tell others what it did for me and you may publish my testimonial.

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not every woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong and this good-fashioned root and herb remedy contains no narcotics or harmful drugs.

Drake Wanted on Forgery Charge

PORTLAND, July 27.—Russell Drake, who with George Moore is held in the Multnomah county jail charged with the murder of Harry Dubinsky, Portland chauffeur, is wanted in Buchanan, Upshur county, W. Va., on a charge of issuing forged checks, according to a telegram received this morning by Sheriff J. H. Ashworth, of Buchanan county.

Brake this morning refused to confirm or deny the charge that he is the same man.

"They've got to show me. They've got to show me," was Brake's only statement today, when told of the charge which is said to be held against him in the Eastern state.

He later admitted that his home is in Upshur county, West Virginia, but would not discuss the forgery charge referred to in Sheriff Ashworth's message.

Body Sheriff Taylor Be Buried Today

PENDLETON, July 27.—All of the funeral in mourning, the funeral of the late T. H. Taylor, who was killed Sunday by a shot from an escaped prisoner's gun, was held this afternoon at 3 o'clock from the Episcopal Church. The services were in charge of the Masons and the Elks, the deceased having been a member of both orders.

Mr. Taylor was 54 years of age and was born at Howell's Prairie, nine miles from Salem. Two years later he came with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Taylor, to Athena, Umattilla county. He attended school in Athena and Walla Walla and later went to business college in Portland.

In 1889 he married Miss Sadie Smith of Athena. He was at that time employed as book keeper in Athena. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor were the parents of one son, Sheldon Taylor, of this city, 29 years of age. Mrs. Taylor died in 1896 and soon afterward Mr. Taylor came here and was employed in a hardware store.

In 1898 he became deputy sheriff for William Hakeley and served until 1902, when he was elected sheriff. He has been sheriff continuously since that time. He remarried in 1909, his wife being Miss Claire Nossou of Pendleton.

He is survived by a wife, the son by the former marriage, his mother, who is 79 years of age, and a brother, W. R. Taylor of Athena, who has been made sheriff since the death of his brother. There are many distant relatives.

Salem Preachers Pass Resolutions

SALEM, July 27.—Demanding that the city council thoroughly investigate with the object of placing the blame for the failure of the city county and state to enforce the laws during the state convention of Elks last week, the Salem Ministerial association this morning passed resolutions condemning the intolerable wave of disorder, disloyalty, un-Americanism, crime, drunkenness and insult, which they allege existed during the convention "in direct violation of all laws and ordinances of the city, state and nation."

Pastors of many Salem churches expressed themselves very emphatically at the morning session. Reports concerning the activities of police and city officers are considered and a general tendency to bring about a more rigid enforcement of state and national laws exhibited.

Saturday a special committee called Governor Olcott's attention to certain charges made by the Chautauqua speakers and others who had characterized the convention as a disgrace. Governor Olcott, who wears the Elks insignia, joined in with the Elks' committee and with various state and county officials in asserting what the stand of the B. P. O. E. would be in regard to the matter. As a result of the conference Sheriff W. I. Needham and Chief of Police Welsh led a raid upon various stands on Liberty street in accordance with reports that contraband liquor was sold there. No liquor was found.

Advertisement for Governor Butler's reprieve. Text: 'Governor Refuses Extend Reprieve. SALEM, July 27.—William E. Butler, sentenced to a term of from one to fifteen years in the state prison, for the murder of McDonald Steward, Jackson county rancher, must serve his sentence. The thirty-day reprieve granted by Governor Olcott is which to produce additional evidence bearing on Butler's innocence and which expired Sunday, will not be extended nor will a pardon be granted. Governor Olcott has informed Sheriff Terrill of Jackson county who is instructed to execute the writ committing Butler to the penitentiary. A month ago Butler was brought to Salem on his way to prison when the governor's reprieve granting a thirty days stay of execution was received on the officer who had him in custody. The crime for which Butler was convicted was committed more than three years ago and has been the source of a strenuous legal battle in Butler's behalf since that time. Mrs. M. E. (Nashart) of Ashland, who has been helping with her brother, F. R. Dunlap, who has been ill, left for her home this morning.'
