Small Gasoline Consumption

The present gasoline situation is not so seriously affecting owners of DORT cars because the DORT averages from 20 to 25 miles to the gallon of gasoline.

For many other reasons, too, the DORT is the most desirable car. For example, its economy on oil and tires and its very low cost of operation.

Each DORT is as good as the best one ever made.

MINING FIGHT IS STEADILY GROWING

Unions Protest Against Employment of Private Detectives to Watch Mines.

SEVERAL LIVES LOST

Salary Matters Although in Question Are Not Causing as Much Disturbance as the Demand for Recognition of Union.

WILLIAMSON, W. Va., July 27.—The campaign of the United Mine Workers to organize the 5,000 miners in the Mingo county bituminous coal field has precipitated a situation which each side declares can only end when it has won complete victory. In the conflicts growing out of this move 12 or more persons have lost their lives. Wages, apparently, form a secondary consideration, the battle being waged around recognition of the union and the right of mine owners to employ private detectives in and around the mines.

"The men and operators could get together and settle this thing were it not for the question of the mine guards," said Charles F. Keeney, president of District No. 17, United Mine Workers, who is in command of the union forces. "But in their present temper these men are not to be fooled with. Right now this situation is a powder mill."

"There is not a mine guard in Mingo county, and there has not been for years," said George Hausewine, secretary of the Coal Operators' association, of Williamson. "Private detectives are employed as other corporations employ detectives for intelligence work in and around their properties. They are not used for guarding the mines."

The question of wages hinges on the scale paid in the Kanawha field. The union leaders declare that adoption of this scale would increase the earnings of the miners in Mingo, while the operators insist that their miners, under the scale now in force, are being paid more than it is possible for the Kanawha miners to earn. However, little attention is being paid to that phase of the controversy. Recognition of the union is the big issue.

The Mingo field includes all of Mingo county and the mines along the Kentucky side of Tug river, a shallow, narrow stream which for miles in this region forms the boundary between Kentucky and West Virginia. High mountains rise abruptly on each side of the river, their sides being covered with a heavy growth of bushes. Along the mountain sides are the drift mines from which comes the coal, and nesting in the narrow valley are the little towns where live the miners and their families.

Fully 75 per cent of the miners in the region are native born, many of them the descendants of pioneers who entered the county more than 100 years ago, and who are proud of their lineage. Some foreign-born miners can be found in the camps, while numbers of negroes are employed. Often the miner owns a small acreage, for which in the planting and harvesting he will abandon the mines.

In some places the miners live in brick cottages, each having its garden plot and front porch. Such a village is Bordertown, where early this month miners were fired upon from the mountainside while going to work. In other villages the houses are of frame construction, each set in its own garden plot, and for which the miners pay at the rate of two dollars per month per room of the region, is pleasantly placed in the valley, with substantial buildings and good stores. The Mingo county courthouse is one of the best structures, but the city hall also is a complete office building, while there is in course of construction a theater which will cost $250,000. The 8000 residents of the town very generally enjoy the prosperity which has come to the coal trade in the past few years.

Early in the year the movement to organize the United Mine Workers was inaugurated by President Keeney from district headquarters in Charleston, and organizers were sent into Mingo county. They met with such success that a demand was made upon the operators for the enforcement of the Kanawha scale and recognition of the union. This demand the operators refused, and the union called a strike. The order, mine operators say, was answered by from 1500 to 1800 miners, but the union officials put the figure higher. The companies, through their lawyers, took the position that the houses built for the miners who had gone on strike reverted at once to the owners. The miners, in some instances, held that if the companies wanted the house of a man they must obtain possession of it by due process of law. Numbers of miners were evicted from company houses, and it was for that purpose private detectives, "mine guards" the miners term them, were sent to Mewan, June 19, and where in the night which followed the eviction of five families, ten persons were killed. Many miners, however, moved from company houses without protest, and the United Mine Workers established for such persons tent colonies along the Tug river near the places of their former employment. There the strikers and their families live in army tents, and there they declare they will stay until the strike has been settled and they have returned to work.

Street Signs Needed To Pilot Tourists

A number of local people believe that some action should be taken to mark the streets leading out of the city. At the present time, strangers, and especially tourists, are finding it a difficult matter to get out of Roseburg after once getting in. The Pacific Highway sign at the corner of Cass and Jackson streets is not sufficiently prominent and it is suggested that a sign be put on the traffic monument at the intersection. Many tourists following up the sign at the main corner follow up West Cass street believing that they are taking the road out of Roseburg. Local residents asked by tourists to furnish information should direct the strangers to take the Mill street road out of town, to the south, as the Main street entrance is not being used. Some action should be taken to put the proper markings at street corners to direct the strangers travelling by auto.

L. M. Emerson, of Tiller, who has been in the city for the past two weeks recovering from a crushed foot, caused by a log rolling against him, has almost fully recovered and expects to return to Tiller Friday. He will soon be able to resume his regular duties.
