BILLY AND MOTHER.

Billy Sunday has been writing a sermon, just printed in the Country Gentleman. The text on which it is based are three: 1. Corinthians, 13: 1; 2. Let the husband render unto the wife due benevolence; 3. Proverbs 1: 18: "Rejoice with the wife of thy youth."

Billy says there are scores of other passages in the Bible which he might have taken, urging the husband to give his wife a square deal. And the whole body of the sermon is taken up with the purchase of labor-saving devices for women on the farm.

"Why don't you plow with a fagged stick? Why don't you haul your stuff to market with a two-wheeled cart drawn by oxen? Now look here, you might just as well use those old-fashioned devices as to ask your wife to be manhandling her fingers on a washboard while you are riding a sulky plow."

"If you only knew it, many a woman's heart is so near the breaking point that when you least suspect it she's up in the attic on her knees, her face buried in her arms, crying as if her heart would break sure enough, and those scolding tears are the only thing that keeps it from going to smash. And while you're at it you might just as well tell her that she can have one of those electric lighting machines and can chuck the old coal-oil lamp out over the back fence."

"And whatever you do, be sure to put running water in the house for her. A man has no right to ask or expect a woman to draw water up hand over hand from a well forty feet deep. Give her water from a faucet in the kitchen sink, and a bathroom and lavatory and a lot of other labor-saving devices."

Billy wants the farmers to buy their wives pianos and give them at lowances and vacations and Sunday off and such things. He has generously added these to the other "labor-saving devices" as the women's due. But if Billy were as good at house budgeting as he is at preaching, he would realize that with the first links of the chain installed—the electric current and the washing machine—the farmer would find that they not only pay for themselves in an incredibly short time, but they earn and install the others, which in turn pay for themselves and their successors.

There is no better investment anywhere than labor-savers for the home. And according to Billy and his texts, they lay up treasure in the other world for the husbands as well as comfort and happiness in this world for the wives.

CONGRESSMEN.

Why multiply congressmen? The present body of 435 members is already too large and unwieldy to function properly. Why add to the number? The census of 1920 gives an excuse for increasing the number by something like 65. Unless this is done, the population basis in congressional districts must be enlarged. Alexander Hamilton believed that in representative assemblies, if they became too large, the individual members no longer functioned, but were ruled by a few. "The larger the number, the greater will be the proportion of members of limited information and weak capacities. Now, it is precisely on characters of this description that the eloquence and address of the few who are known to act with all their force." No congressman wishes to lose his seat, of course, and all the pressure of individuals and their supporters will be used to increase the number rather than to decrease it. But is the increase sensible? A few people who could really get together and accomplish things, instead of a large number basing their claims to re-election on time-wasting speeches and pork-barrel hand-outs and free garden seeds, would seem much more desirable for the wise transaction of the country's business.

BUSINESS ETHICS.

Yes, Oscar, in this business life the competition's keen, and there are times of stress and strife, with little rest between; but that's no reason you should shock each customer you greet by taking up your mail to knock the man across the street. It's good to talk about your wares, to show your cakes and pies, to boost your tables and your chairs, your prunes to advertise, to put your finest eight-day clock and blanket on display; but it's no sense for you to knock the man across the way. There's nothing wrong in branching out with big and handsome trade, in climbing ever with a shout along the upward grade; but you'll build no department store, work no colossal plan if you do little else but roar, and knock the other man. You'll find the chance to strive and win, to reap a fair reward, to put provisions in the bin and save a goodly hoard; you'll have a chance to live in style and wear the latest mode; but not by knocking all the while your neighbor down the road.—Clem Bradshaw.

Multnomah Man Supports Ritner

PORTLAND, August 7.—W. W. Banks, state senator for Multnomah, Clackamas and Columbia counties, has withdrawn as a candidate for president of the senate for the 1921 session of the legislature. Senator Banks is eliminating himself and is supporting Roy W. Ritner, senator for Multnomah county. Announcement of Senator Banks' action will change the complexion of the organization contest. The fight is now between Senator Ritner and B. L. Eddy, senator from Douglas county and both have been making an active canvass for support among their colleagues. Senator Banks had the support of several senators who are now released from their solitary promise to him. An intensive drive may now be started by both Ritner and Eddy for the presidency inasmuch as they appear to be the only ones left in the field. Senator Banks thinks it wise to end the contest as quickly as possible and probably immediately after the November election this will be done. There are a number of candidates for the senate who will undoubtedly be elected, yet they feel that they have no right to presume that they already possess a vote in the senate and for this reason they will not commit themselves to Ritner, Eddy or any other person until they have their certificates of election.

Barkness Stops Twilight Game

The Baptist and Presbyterians put up a snappy ball game last night and same had to be called on account of darkness. The Baptist lead in the sixth. In the seventh the Presbyterians made two runs, when the game was called. The two runs put over by the Presbyterians tied up the score, but the Baptists had a right to a closing half inning, which they did not get. By all the rules of the game, when it is called on account of darkness or any hindering cause, it should revert to the preceding inning, which really would have given the Baptists the game, but it was decided to call it a draw, and play off the tie at a later date. The Presbyterians scored first blood in the initial inning, on Campbell's hit, a miss of a thrown ball, and Finley's hit. The Baptists scored three in the second on hits by Cecil Black, Leon McClintock, Stephenson, Crocker and Carl Black. The Presbyterians came back strong in the third, and drove over four, driving Akeley from the box. After one had been retired, Campbell made a hit, went to second and beat out a throw to catch him on Finley's effort, Finley getting first on the fielder's choice. Street hit safely, and another fielder's choice which failed to catch any one, put the bases full. Then Randolph plunked a beauty, and scores rolled over the pan. When the smoke cleared away the Presbyterians had put four over, and held the lead five to three. The Baptists were fighting hard, and in the fifth put over three more. A base on balls, hits by Leon McClintock and Ritzmann and Stephenson put over the runs, and gave the Baptists the lead again. To this they added another in the sixth, on a base on balls and Akeley's hit. In the seventh it was so dark, Ritzmann lost sight of the plate, and walked three men. Throne made a hit, two runs came over and two were on. It was too dark for any one to see the ball, and the game was called at this stage. The decision will probably be, to call the game a tie, and replay it at some future date. More interest is being manifested in the games now than at any time during the season, as the teams are all so closely bunched and seem very evenly matched.

PLANNING THE HOUSE.

"Are you going over to the house?" I called to him just before he reached the elevator. "I am not sure yet." "John never wants to be asked to go anywhere or to do anything that he considers would be a favor to those about him. He is generous, however, in doing things for every one in his own way and at his own way and at his own time, but it never seems to enter his head that there are times when it would be a greater favor and much more generous of him to do the things that his wife or his mother wanted at that moment." "I told you I was very busy," he said, "why don't you go over and see to the houses if you want anything done?" "I shall go later," I said, "but I have to nurse and bathe the baby and get her settled for the day." "I can't understand what we pay trained nurse prices for a woman to take care of Mary if you bathe her and dress her yourself. I should think some young girl could take care of her just as well as Miss Parker if you are going to do all the important things."

Never Would Be Happy.

"A young girl would assume no responsibility. I would never be happy a moment while I was away. Besides, there are complications which even I would know nothing about. Two or three times I am sure Miss Parker has saved Mary from the croup by noting symptoms that meant nothing to me." "Never mind your long-winded explanations, Katherine, I have told you two or three times I am in a hurry. What do you want me to do over at the house. You have already given me enough to do all morning in looking up this freight and getting it over to the house. Now what else have you on your mind?" "I had forgotten about telling him that my furniture from home had

BRIDGE TO BE CLOSED.

The approach at the north end of the Winston bridge will be closed Tuesday, Wednesday and possibly Thursday on account of construction work. The old approach will be changed to the new grade and the work will no doubt consume two or three days time. During the time the bridge is closed, a detour will be necessary by way of Brockway and through Happy Valley or by Looking Glass. Resident Engineer Wright has requested that those residing in the district affected to take notice of this announcement.
