HUMANITY'S VICTORY.
 Over in destitute Central Europe the American Friends Service Committee has just announced that it must continue its merciful work for another year. During the past eight months the committee has clothed and fed over 500,000 children in 87 cities of Austria and Germany, and has established 3,200 feeding stations. When the friends took up this special work at the request of Herbert Hoover, it was thought that it would be completed by July 1. But the suffering and poverty are so severe that relief will be needed and given for another year.

At this same time comes news from South Africa that students of the University of Cape Town are raising funds for the relief of students in Vienna. In making an appeal to the Cape Town students in behalf of their fellows in Austria, General Smuts emphasized the fact that the more fortunate young men and women had a real responsibility toward the destitute students in Europe. The fact that they were formerly enemies made no difference, and if they did not get together on a basis of mutual sympathy and helpfulness there would be something on their consciences. He added: "Humanity is one. We are all members of one another. I hope this meeting will make us realize that barriers vanish when we come to the great things of life. We can judge less harshly and cultivate more friendly feelings; eradicate hatreds from our hearts, and in that way try to build up a new world."

This attitude is not an indication of weakness or "softness" toward a cruel foe. It is the only attitude for a righteous victor—the binding up of his enemy's wounds, healing them as quickly and wholly as possible so that the scars may be less enduring and the constructive possibilities of a new friendly relationship may be realized.

TOY SAILBOATS.
 With all due regard for yacht racing, as exemplified by the Resolute-Shamrock race and other races of recent years, it must be admitted that it leaves something to be desired. These yachts are pretty and speedy, but they are only playthings with little more actual serviceability than a boy's toy boat in a duck pond. It has become a moco game played for the sake of the game itself. This is all right as far as amusement is concerned, but it has little connection with practical sailing. These fast, light models, growing ever more freakish, have brought out no new principle of seamanship or ship construction that can be turned to account in building sailing vessels for useful service. They are only the mechanism of a glorious sport. Why, in such contests, should not sport and utility be combined, as they were at first?

The America, the original cup winner, was a staunch schooner big enough to sail any sea in any weather. The contestants in 1885 went out unhesitatingly and raced in a 20-mile blow; the Resolute and Shamrock were afraid to venture out in a 25-mile wind. The challenger of 1871 was in use nearly 40 years after the race, carrying cargoes of fish from Labrador to Boston. These racing models, with their light spars and low decks, cannot carry anything but a small crew, and cannot do that any too safely.

Why doesn't somebody offer a fine trophy for the fastest sailing craft of given dimensions fitted to carry passengers or freight in any kind of weather? That would stimulate genuine progress in the fine old arts of ship construction and seamanship, and provide sport at the same time.

ORDINARY INCOMES.
 Current notions as to the size of American incomes are given a jolt by the latest income tax report from the treasury department. It is estimated that there are a little more than 105,000,000 people in the United States, and about 40,000,000 of them made income tax reports last year. The millionaires, or those with "millionaire" incomes, are 250,000 individuals. Nearly all of the $3,410,000,000 taxes collected by the government was paid by 2,500,000 people. On the basis of the tax returns, it is figured that there are 193,000,000 Americans living on for less than $3,750 a year. It is less. The labor department has declared that an average family cannot be maintained in decency and comfort under present living conditions, for less than $2,250 a year. It is possible that a large number of families whose incomes during the past year rose for the first time over the taxation mark failed to make a return. But even when a liberal allowance is made for such delinquencies, it is evident that prosperity is not so widely diffused in this country as many people imagine. The average family, as usual, is hard put to make both ends meet. The extravagance so often referred to is rather superficial and indulged in by a comparatively small part of the population.

Now that they no longer teach German in the schools, what would be the chance to get them to teach English?

Then there is the man whose chief aim in life is to be named on as many committees as possible.

We are now enjoying some real summer weather—with all the necessary "trimmings."

SUTHERLIN LADY DIES.
 After an illness extending over a period of a year, Mrs. M. E. Lee passed away at her home here Monday afternoon at 3:30, death being due to tuberculosis, says the Sutherland Sun. The deceased was born in Oakland 21 years ago and was married to E. M. Lee, of this city, three years ago. The husband and a little daughter two years old are left to mourn. Mrs. Lee was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Moses, who formerly resided in Oakland. Her mother died about 18 years ago and the father, two brothers and a sister reside in Eureka, Cal. Funeral services were held from the residence Wednesday morning, followed by burial in Valley View cemetery.

LEASES DRAIN CANNERY.
 Frank J. Norton, the well known local fruit grower, has leased the cannery at Drain for the present season and expects to have the plant in full operation by Saturday of this week. The berry crop is quite heavy in the vicinity of Drain and Mr. Norton has enjoyed an extensive experience in the canning business, and no doubt will make a success of his venture at Drain.—Sutherland Sun.

DAIRYMEN ATTENTION.

To Our Customers:—

The only way to paint economically is to FORGET GALLON SWP and figure cost by area, cover and years of life.

SWP covers one-third more area than paints which are cheaper per gallon. It lasts twice as long without re-painting, so requires half the material and labor costs.

On that basis, SWP is the cheapest-per-gallon outside paint you could buy.

SWP is the best prepared house paint. That is why we sell it. Now is the time to consult us about your house painting.

Prepare to do it this fall before the rains fill the wood with moisture. Oil and water do not mix well and it will be better to do cracks, crevices and exposed pores of wood with linseed oil and pigment now, while water is absent.

When Run-Down

ANACORTES, WASH.—"I had organic trouble for a long time. I suffered from backache and those heavy bearing pains, and my blood was in bad condition. I had no appetite and was generally run-down. I used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in connection with the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, and was completely cured. I always recommend Dr. Pierce's medicines to all my friends."—MRS. A. KESE, General Delivery.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE
 by the noted author
 Idah McGlone Gibson

ELIZABETH'S OTHER NATURE.
 As I read this little poem, the same thought came over me that had come to Alice when I read her Karl's letter. No one, at least, I could not possibly have dreamed that the girl I had known as Elizabeth Moreland—cold, hard and brilliantly faceted as a diamond, I here saw the other side of her; the side that love had made soft, transparent and as lovely as a pearl.

No wonder that John could not understand my appraisal and opinion of her. And he never could have made me realize that she had this side, which she probably was showing constantly to him.

Some way I am beginning to feel that John is not worthy of her, for he has taken of her, as all men take, without one thought beyond the moment and she has given gladly, unreservedly, for Eternity, knowing all the time that the consequences might mean death in life to her. She devoted into the holy of holies of her soul in her poem to John and told him that the thought that "She was one little hour of radiance best" was enough for her to feed on memory for evermore.

I don't think that I shall ever tell Elizabeth what I know. This morning I thought I would, it seemed to me that she deserved to know that I was cognizant of her episode with John. But now I know that she does not need this knowledge to make her punishment almost greater than she could bear.

My baby had gone to sleep in my arms when I found that I had made at least one decision. I would not tell Elizabeth Moreland that I knew. And this was followed quickly by another: If John went back to her again, I would go out of his life, taking with me this memento of our love—our child.

Quickly there came to me a feeling that perhaps that was the trouble that Karl Shepard had mentioned as coming. And then I put it aside, for I knew that if this was to be the heated plowshare over which I was to walk, I could not share it with any man—least of all with Karl Shepard.

Putting Mary in her bassonette, I called the chauffeur and told him that I would be at the door directly to go to the new house. I wanted to see how the decorators were getting on putting on the new paper in the living room.

When I arrived, I found both John and Elizabeth Moreland standing uncomfortably in the middle of the room, while the workmen were tearing off the expensive paper that Elizabeth had ordered on.

"Oh, I'm sorry," she began. "I was so sure, Katherine, that you were going to carry out this room in the Colonial period, that when I saw some of that lovely old paper down at the shop, I thought it would be doing you a great favor to have it put on the room before you arrived."

"It was beautiful paper, Elizabeth," I said, "but you see my taste has always craved the color and magnificence of Oriental decoration. Just where I got the idea, I do not know. But it has been implanted in my soul and I determined that if ever I had the chance I would have a Chinese living room. Of course, you and John and everyone else, seeing me in the Colonial environment of my mother's home and among the furniture which she sent me a wedding present, took it for granted that I was exercising my own taste in the way of household decoration."

I had almost come to the conclusion," said Elizabeth, "that one must never take anything for granted." She looked at John as she spoke and I could see that her words had a different meaning for him than for me.

"It is certain that I shall never take anything for granted again," said John gruffly, "at least where a woman is concerned."

"I think, my dear John," said Elizabeth softly, "that you, as well as most other men would be happier if you did take more things for granted, as far as a woman is concerned. I am quite sure that Katherine will bear me out, when I say that I believe that if a man took the trouble to study a woman as he does his business, or any other of the material affairs of his life, he could always take her for granted. Most women I know run true to form."
