Drive be Made to Round up Slackers

Further delay in publishing lists of draft deserters so that the men whose records are technically wrong, but who actually served, will not be wrongfully listed as slackers, and the withdrawal of the usual $50 reward for deserters are latest developments of the War Department campaign to round up the deserters.

The lists, with 173,000 names, are ready for distribution to draft boards, but will be held at Washington another week, while newspapers everywhere urge the men who fought, but whose records may be incomplete, to communicate with the Adjutant General, Washington, D. C.

When the list are finally given out they will be published in newspapers, posted in Federal courts, police stations and elsewhere, and every effort will be made to round up the deserters.

The American Legion is all ready to jump into the draft-dodger hunt the minute the War Department releases its lists. The Legion will place its services at the disposal of the War Department to aid in publishing the lists and in running down the slackers. The Legion policy will be determined by what the Adjutant General thinks will be most effective.

So, if you have any doubt about the status of your record, it will be well to write, giving details of your date of enlistment, outfit rank, etc., to the Adjutant General, War Department, Washington, D. C. I would be embarrassing to be listed as a deserter when you have in fact been discharged in the family safe-deposit box.

Delay Caused By Wartime Measure

That the settlement of the freight rate on mixed livestock shipments in favor of the shipper was delayed so long was because the matter had to go before the interstate commerce commission, is perhaps not generally understood. During war time the Federal railroad board made the ruling which worked a hardship on shippers who did not have straight car loads of stock.

Highway Work Is Progressing Fine

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idaho M. Glone Gibson

RUTH AND CHARLES SURPRISE US.

I wonder if anyone will ever see what I have written down here in this diary. I wonder if before Mary is married, I shall let her read what is in this little book.

Sometimes I think it will be a good thing for her to read it, because I am sure she would understand that all this I have written here is not a mere lack of adjustment—lack of the proper education of John and me.

I think if any other woman were to read what I am writing here, unless she had had very nearly the same experience that I have had, she would think that I was a variable and capricious sort of a person. And yet I expect I was just about the average girl who married.

Today, I felt as if I was riding home, that I was going to be happy in the future. When John is sweet to me, I have that little hint of "paradise" that marriage might be. And when he is not—I sometimes come to the point where I wish—no, no, I am sure I really never wished that it must have been my subconscious self that spoke.

All the way back to the hotel hope was singing a wonderful song in my heart. As I passed Helen's door, she waved at me frantically.

REMARKABLE RECOVERY

Extraordinary Curative Power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I want to let you know what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me."

I had organic troubles and am going through the Change of Life. I was taken with a pain in my side and a bad headache. I could not lie down, could not eat or sleep. I suffered something terrible and the doctor's medicine did me no good at all—my pains got worse instead of better.

and I had my chauffeur stop the motor.

Helen came to me with her face alight with joy. "Katherine," she said, "I have the most wonderful news for you. I've had a letter from Ruth."

"You have had a letter from Ruth," I repeated stupidly. "Yes, dear," she said. "Ruth has written me a long letter. She said that she thought that Bobby and I should be told first that she is going to marry your cousin, Charles Goodwin."

I felt a little icy grip at the heart and then I knew that it was wicked of me to feel unhappy because Charles was going to be happy with another woman.

"Oh, I'm so glad," I said, and truly, as I said it, I was glad. "You know, Helen, that Ruth and Charles are very well suited to each other. Ruth needs a quiet, gentle, domestic man, but one who has a firm idea of justice and right to help her bring up her children. Charles loves them all."

"Yes, Ruth wrote me," said Helen, smiling, "that she believed the fact of her ready-made family was one of the things that appealed to him. She said the children all adore him."

"I am sure that is true, for I have seen them together."

"Katherine, Ruth told me that Charles had told her that you were his first love, but that now that old passion had become a brotherly affection which he would always feel for you and yours. Then Ruth continued," said Helen, reading from Ruth's letter. "Do you know I am glad that Charles told me that, for in my heart I knew it and his telling it to me made me realize more than anything else that he would never have any secrets from me—I knew he had taken me into the innermost place in his heart."

"Have you told Bobby, yet?" I asked. "No, I was just reading the letter as I saw you driving by. Don't you think he will be pleased?" she asked wistfully.

"Why, of course he will be pleased, my dear. I think the only blot on Bobby's happiness with you has been that sometimes he has been afraid that Ruth might be unhappy and now he'll know that she cannot be."

"Here he comes, my dear," I said looking down the road and catching sight of Bobby's runabout. "And I'll leave you to talk it over together."

When I reached the hotel, Miss Parker met me at the door with a worried face. "The baby isn't so well," she said. "I'm sending for the doctor."

I rushed into the room from which I had heard the labored breathing of my child. As I came in, she began to choke.

"Hurry, hurry, she is dying!" I said.

Hit on Head by A Falling Brick

Jess Hodges, formerly night officer here, was struck on the head by a half of a brick that fell from the top of the L. O. P. building, late yesterday afternoon, and suffered a bad cut of the scalp. Mr. Hodges was practically in the middle of the street at the time. The piece of brick was dislodged by the workmen who are repairing the structure, struck a scaffold a few feet below the top and rebounded into the street, striking the gentleman squarely on top of the head. It was found necessary to shave the scalp around the wound in order to properly dress the cut, and Hodges is nursing a very sore head just at this time.

"Are Those Snow Flakes?"

"I thought so—they look so crisp and dainty. Snow Flakes—with their fresh from the oven flavor—their dash of salt—always delicious. Order them by name from your grocer."
