Second and Third Prize Essays

The airplane, our newest form of transportation will be a benefit commercially and a pleasant form of recreation for Douglas county and city of Roseburg in numerous ways, among which may be mentioned:

It is the greatest boon to forestry fire patrol and protection, ever developed, which in turn by saving our forests from destruction and whose retention means the retaining of our water sheds which again means conservation of our water powers by keeping up stream supply of water for present and future irrigation systems and supply of water for range stock on our range lands; also moisture for range grass and growing forests as well as our full grown forests the value of which is our greatest asset in Douglas county meaning the immediate future manufacturing into commercial lumber of 65 billion board feet of lumber and by-products.

The airplane will furnish rapid transportation of mails light and heavy express emergency calls to some life and limb saving assets by doctors; to survey from above our lands; to study air currents and air strata which in turn will enable our local observer to quickly predict weather conditions, storms, etc., which will save vineyards and orchards from frost and the saving of our horticultural wealth.

For hunters and miners a boon and pleasure to go anywhere in their vacation. For all the employment of many in the manufacturing of airplanes, airplane drivers and mechanics. A means of transportation to all remote parts of our vast empire which have no roads, or poor ones, saving money to all tax payers in road construction.

Last, but not least, for everyone it is educational to observe the rich and beautiful country and cities of ours from above and see its beauty never to be forgotten.

JAMES R. WHEELER.

Will Roseburg and Douglas County Benefit from the Airplanes?

I am a little boy and very much interested in airplanes. Ever since they have been flying over our town, I've wanted so much to take a ride. I read in the News-Review of the generous offer the publishers of this paper have made. So I concluded to give some of my ideas as to the benefits to Roseburg from an airplane point of view. So very many auto tourists stop in our camp here and are much pleased with our lovely surroundings, that very naturally they would want to see more of our country, outside of the town. What better way to advertise our scenic beauties than a ride in cloudland over the country. It is done so quickly and covers so much territory in such a short space of time, that in a few hours at longest, they would see more and better than a weeks travel by auto or by stage. It surely would make them want to come to our country to live, where there is so much that is beautiful in a natural way. Our forests and rivers, our fast orchard tracts, ranches, etc., would be shown to such a great advantage, that we would soon have a thickly settled community. Then, again, an aerial mail service would greatly benefit our town, but what would appeal most to people, is that there is no upkeep to the stial road and therefore no taxes on the people. The road is there today and forever.

ADRIAN BOWEN, Age 9 years.

MURDER IS ADMITTED.

PENDLETON, Ore., August 20.—"Guilty," answered Emmett Hancock alias Neil Hart, when Arraigned to plead before Circuit Judge Phelps here this afternoon for the killing of Sheriff T. J. Taylor following the sensational jailbreak here July 25. Hart refused legal aid and seemed unshaken over the ordeal which is likely to land him upon the gallows. The courtroom was almost filled, with many women and children sprinkled through the large crowd. The five prisoners appeared in court wearing "Oregon boots" and wore new blue overalls and jumpers. Hart's four companions pleaded not guilty. Joseph D. Lanvin, Spokane lawyer, represented Ervin Steop alias Lewis Anderson, and Floyd Henderson alias Dick Patterson. It was through the efforts of Henderson's parents that Lanvin came to Pendleton for the trial.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idaho McGlone Gibson

KATHERINE BANISHES THE GLOOMS.

I went back into the baby's nursery and found that she was sleeping quite calmly. I said to myself: "Now I'm going to make myself miserable again, because I know that John is out with Elizabeth Moreland. He, of course, does not dream that the baby is so ill and he told me this afternoon that this was the last time he would leave me alone and I know that he meant it. I was sorry I had inquired of Henrietta about Elizabeth. I knew that she would tell her I had done so when she came in. Henrietta did not like Elizabeth and she did like me and she had shown in many ways since I had returned that she did not approve of John's attention to Elizabeth.

Madam Gordon, too, was leaving Elizabeth more to herself than she had at first. I could see that they were not going to be good friends long if they lived together. I knew that Elizabeth was not particularly happy with John's mother and that I would only be a question of time when she would leave her.

Someway, I could not get Karl Shepard's peculiar letter out of my head. I asked myself, was my baby going to die, and was that the trouble that was coming to me, and was that why he was hurrying home? I dismissed this quickly, however, because I knew that for his kind of trouble Karl Shepard could bring no solace. He, as well as I, knew that for the loss of my child, if he should be that I had to look for no one could give me any real sympathetic consolation, unless it would be my husband.

And yet, I seemed to be waiting, sitting, waiting, for—I knew not what.

It could not be wholly my nerves that made me sit there by the window with bated breath, as though I expected every moment some sort of a shock.

I heard the water come to the room and Miss Parker glided in where I was sitting with a tray. "It is long after dinner time," she said. "Mrs. Gordon, you a rest be 'amished."

"I cannot eat; food would choke me."

"I ordered you some hot chocolate. That at least will be strengthening," she said, pouring me out a cupful. As she handed it to me, she buttered a piece of toast, but although I did manage to drink the chocolate, the one mouthful that I took of the toast seemed to sicken my throat.

"It's awfully foolish of me, isn't it?" I said to her, "to allow my nerves to go to pieces in this way?" "I've always thought I had more stamina. I can hear any kind of vain, mental or physical, but oh, Miss Parker, it just seemed to tear my heart out of me when I saw that little helpless creature suffer as she must have suffered in that 'baking spell'."

"As I thought of it again, I grew cold. Quickly I put down the empty cup on the table and rushed back into the room where my baby was sleeping. For a moment I was 'sanky. Miss Parker had left her alone. What if something terrible had happened while she was in with me?"

"Feeling over the little bed, tears of gratitude came into my eyes and I gazed on the tiny white face, for I saw that a faint color had come into her cheeks and that peculiar rayish blue had gone away from her lips.

"You see, she's getting better very minute. Mrs. Gordon, I was quite sure she would be all right. You never saw a case of the croup 'eff' on."

"No," I answered, "what a terrible disease it is."

"Yes, it is terrible," she answered.

OPPORTUNITY IS WORKING OVERTIME

"Opportunity hasn't missed a working day since the Garden of Eden was laid out in building lots." So wrote a popular writer six years ago. But that was before the war. Today—opportunity is not only putting in a full day's work, between sun-up and sun-down, but it is working overtime. The country has never been so prosperous. Take advertising, for instance. There's opportunity right here in these pages—for the men who sell. Don't miss the advertisements. They are guide posts to better buying. They will save you money.
