Entered as second-class matter May 17, 1920, at the post office at Roseburg, Oregon, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Roseburg, Oregon, Sept. 25, 1920.

UNCLE SAM AS MIDDLEMAN.

The post office department in conjunction with the department of labor, has been working out a new scheme for bringing food to market. On the basis of a plan prepared in detail for the District of Columbia, it is stated that the costs of distribution can be lowered as much as two-thirds on potatoes and many other bulky vegetables and fruits, and as much as nine-tenths on butter and eggs.

There is a controversy among the physical culturists as to whether man can live by meat alone. For years we have been told that most of the diseases of civilization come from eating too much meat.

One good thing about those canned political speeches is that the candidates have to make 'em short to get 'em on the record.

Federal officers raided 60 saloons in the New York theater district recently and seized $100,000 worth of liquor.

They say coal costs as much as a pound in Italy as sugar does here.

Is it going to be league or no league? Or is it going to be, after all, a contest between parties as to which is going to put over the league?

Secretary Baker's right in telling army officers to "keep scrupulously out of politics." We don't want the army contaminated.

Those Bolsheviks ought to have been represented at the Olympic games. They're good runners.

Official Democratic Statement

By Douglas County Democratic Central Committee.

JAMES M. COX

The courteous and generous action of the News-Review in opening its columns, "gratis," to the Republican and Democratic County Central Committees is especially appreciated by the executive committee of the local Democratic organization.

In terms of legal parlance, "the record is the best evidence." To this end we shall endeavor to show the record of the candidates of the opposing parties.

The Democratic party leaders of Douglas county welcome such a discussion made possible by the generous offer of the News-Review.

Edgar B. Piper, editor of the Oregonian, "covered" the republican convention at Chicago last June, furnishing the Oregonian with a number of feature articles describing the work of the convention.

Harding did not have the unanimous support of the Ohio delegation in the convention. He had won the majority vote by a very scant margin over General Wood, and the district delegates were divided between the two candidates.

Warren Gamaliel Harding, who now aspires to be president at the most critical moment of American history has been a United States senator since March 4, 1915.

meeting of the inner circle who manipulated the convention.

In the issue of the Oregonian of June 12th Mr. Piper, in discussing the situation in the Ohio delegation, as to the tendency of the 39 Harding delegates to get out of line, says: "Had feeling there—if Ohio does not really believe in Harding what about the rest of the country?"

He favored the appointment of Louis D. Brandeis to the supreme court.

In his first session he voted against river and harbor "pork," but thereafter was for these appropriations, even during the war.

He opposed a tax upon campaign contributions.

He opposed adequate appropriations for the federal trade commission.

He opposed the European food relief bill.

He opposed Philippine independence and was against self-determination wherever else that issue appeared.

He voted and spoke for conscription as a permanent policy.

He opposed disarmament for all nations.

He supported the league of nations covenant, with the Lodge reservations.

He voted for the present "political" adjournment of the senate.

This summary may require explanation in one particular. The every other senator in initiative, activity and accomplishment. Neither his friends nor his enemies can connect his name with a single outstanding issue, good or bad.

He neither introduced nor championed even one big constructive measure.

He was absent or dodged 1170 roll calls and quorum calls.

All the bills and resolutions he introduced were local or private in character, except eight.

In all matters of politics, economics and spoils he was a follower of the old guard bosses—Peatross, Smoot and Lodge.

On issues at all important, he voted with the progressive group only nine times in six years.

He has voted for the liquor interests 36 times, and against them only twice.

He favored woman suffrage after much reluctance and indecision.

He voted for the Cummings railroad bill, with its anti-strike provision.

He stood consistently against conservation, voting for the vicious Shields water power bill several times.

On every important test between capital and labor he voted with capital.

He opposed public ownership in every form.

He voted against a government armor-plate factory at the beginning of the war.

He opposed the wire control bill as a war measure.

On revenue measures he voted against every amendment to increase the tax upon profiteering and large incomes.

He opposed publicly on large profiteering figures.

He opposed the abolition of secret sessions of the senate.

He favored the appointment of Louis D. Brandeis to the supreme court.

In his first session he voted against river and harbor "pork," but thereafter was for these appropriations, even during the war.

He opposed a tax upon campaign contributions.

He opposed adequate appropriations for the federal trade commission.

He opposed the European food relief bill.

He opposed Philippine independence and was against self-determination wherever else that issue appeared.

He voted and spoke for conscription as a permanent policy.

He opposed disarmament for all nations.

He supported the league of nations covenant, with the Lodge reservations.

He voted for the present "political" adjournment of the senate.

This summary may require explanation in one particular. The length of it and the number of subjects included might suggest a contradiction as Harding's inactivity and colorlessness. But these conclusions are drawn from the most part from his votes. A senator may vote occasionally, and do little else, which was Harding's way.

ABOUT PRICE REDUCTIONS.

The price reductions as made by the mail order houses were on no goods carried by Carr's store, but we can say their prices on goods we do carry are high right now.
