Airplane Thief Makes His Getaway

PAU, France, Sept. 28.—A Polish gentleman wearing the full regalia of an aviator and presenting a pilot's certificate, entered the shops of an airplane works here a few days ago and expressed a desire to purchase an airplane. Accompanied by a representative of the firm he evolted over the Pau field in various machines, showing great virtuosity in aerial gymnastics, doing the falling leaf, looping the loop, sliding on the wing and other stunts until he decided to purchase a biplane for which he gave a certified check as payment. He then flew away.

In a field near San Sebastian, Spain, yesterday, there was found an abandoned airplane in which there was a satchel containing several thousand francs in French silver and gold pieces.

A polished gentleman wearing the full regalia of an aviator was seen to leave the plane a few minutes after it landed carrying heavy grips of the same type as the one left in the plane. No one returned for the third grip and it has been notified by the Spanish authorities.

The Pau airplane club has notified the Aero club of England as well as the Service of European Aerial navigation to be on the lookout for an aerial smuggler.

AROUND THE TOWN

House Being Rebuilt.—The A. C. Marsters house on Ella street which burned some time ago and was nearly totally destroyed, is being rebuilt this week by the owner.

Left This Morning.—Mrs. J. H. Booth and son, Tod, left this morning for Palo Alto where the latter will enter his second year at Stanford University. Mrs. Booth will remain with her son for about a month.

Engaged in Mint Business.—James M. Watkins, Jr., a former resident of Roseburg, is at the present time engaged in the mint business at Klamath Falls and is a member of a concern known as the Pacific Coast Mint Co., which is developing the industry in that section.

Beltows Sale Progresses.—The big silk sale being held this week by the Beltows store is attracting large crowds and the extraordinary bargains as advertised by this establishment have proved a drawing card. Several new bargains are listed by Beltows today.

Prupe Plants are Busy.—The aroma of "prune juice" now greets the visitor to the north Roseburg district, as all three of the packing plants located there are all in operation. At all times of the day large trucks are driving up to the plants and unloading quantities of the Douglas County product.

Receiving Large Sign.—The county democratic headquarters on lower Cass street today made arrangements to erect a large sign in front of the office in order that Roseburg and the world at large may know of their location. Roy Huffman has been engaged to paint the sign and it will be placed in position tomorrow.

Plan Novel Dance Stunts.—With the advent of the winter months, the week end dancing parties at the armory are gradually becoming more popular and every Saturday night large crowds dance to the Jazz-O-Four music. The management of these dances announced today that during the winter a number of feature stunts will be staged and on next Saturday night they plan to intersperse free dances during the evening's program. The armory floor has been placed in fine condition and the recognized Jazz-O-Four, with piano, saxophone, drums and xylophone, is putting out all of the latest dance strains.

Official Republican Statement

By Douglas County Republican Central Committee.

WARREN G. HARDING

The failures of the democratic administration in carrying on the war were so absurd and so tremendous that they now afford amusement for earth and heaven, had they not been so pathetic in their results. Many people remember how hard it was to get intelligent action out of that inefficiency office, known as the Bureau of War Risk Insurance. Many remember pathetic cases of women and children deprived of necessities because allotments from the pay of brave men fighting in France did not come. Here is an instance as related in the Literary Digest of May 10, 1919:

"Here is another case, the case of a man who fought with the Marines near Chateau-Thierry, for whom the Croix de Guerre, for heroism, and paid for it with wounds that left him a physical wreck. He was discovered penniless in a New York lodging house, with his wound not yet all healed—and all the while our government owed him $275 for back pay and allowances. By peddling which was that sort of work that his weakened bodily state permitted him to do, he was trying to make enough to live on until certain officials could be persuaded to forward his pay check. The New York Tribune described this second flagrant instance in which the government had not kept faith with a man who risked his life for it.

"Donald M. Douglas was a trumpeter in the 6th Marines. It was he, who on that never to be forgotten first day of June, 1918, sounded the trumpet which sent the Marines into battle at Chateau-Thierry. His bugle was "never to call retreat." The Marines with Douglas and other trumpeters in the lead, met the German horde, head on, and, as history has recorded it, saved the day and the war for the allies. Today Douglas is in this city, and, although he won the Croix de Guerre, he paid for it. He is a physical wreck and penniless."

His case probably one of the most pathetic on the records of the war department, was brought to light through the police and the Red Cross in investigating a note sent by a woman living at 271 Central Park West. The letter told of his plight and his dire need. He had been canvassing apartments along Central Park West during the last two weeks selling coupons for a down town photograph gallery.

His story aroused the sympathy of the woman, who, after purchasing coupons from him for $2.50, decided to write to the Red Cross. The Red Cross, fearing that the man might be an impostor, because there had been reports of a number of unfortunates men abusing their service, communicated with the military authorities. They in turn, got in touch with Detective Daly and Brady of the West Forty-seventh street station.

The detectives visited the house where Douglas was staying. They found him physically incapacitated with a fissure in his right thigh of a shrapnel wound large enough to lay ones hand in. From Douglas and from the Marine recruiting offices at 24 East Twenty third street, they learned that he was penniless, and a wreck, trying to eke out a living at each job, while awaiting his discharge and $247 the government owed him for back pay and allowances.

Douglas told Lieutenant Miller at the marine recruiting office that he had been soliciting orders along Central Park West, "trying to earn a living legitimately while awaiting my discharge from the Marine."

According to the lieutenant, Douglas' story reveals how he enlisted in the Marine corps on April 4, 1917, and went over in September 1917; how he was wounded at Chateau-Thierry when caught in a barrage; how he had gone through the worst kind of hardships during the first thirteen days of that memorable month of June; how he had shifted from one hospital to another and had finally landed in Philadelphia from Brest on December 30 last. The story elicited the sympathy of the officers at the recruiting office and they promised to do all they could to expedite his discharge and to help obtain his money for him.

The shame which good Americans feel on reading this indictment of criminal governmental incompetence becomes mingled with contempt when it is realized that a large part of the great army of inefficient is still on the payroll at Washington, nearly two years after the close of the war. Nothing but the avalanche of ballots which will fall on November 2nd, can "jar loose" the deadly incubus.

Franklin D. Roosevelt was taken to fill in the democratic national ticket because his name was Roosevelt. If it had been anything else he would not have been thought of. He was in Chicago recently and is on his way to other states carrying the name Roosevelt to people who admire it.

He says he is out after the progressive republicans who were Roosevelt republicans. That is his job in the campaign. He is to put the honey of a name on the trap of a ticket.

Franklin Roosevelt is a fifth cousin of Theodore Roosevelt, and his relationship is the closest degree of intimacy that he can claim. The last time that Theodore Roosevelt headed a national ticket, Franklin Roosevelt was working for one of his opponents, Woodrow Wilson, and within a week after he was inaugurated, Franklin Roosevelt was made Assistant Secretary of the Navy, a position he now holds.

Because Franklin's name is Roosevelt, because he was in the New York legislature, and because he is assistant secretary of the navy, he is put forward as another Theodore. If he is, then Billy Sunday is a Mormon, Theodore Roosevelt as assistant sec-

It is curious to note how the minds of many leading democrats "go along with" the "wet" sentiment of the country. Not only is the organized liquor traffic of the east raising money to help elect Cox, believing and asserting that he will help to undo national prohibition, but president Wilson himself has given much encouragement to the same people. He vetoed the Volstead act, which was to carry into effect the 18th amendment and make prohibition a reality, and which a republican congress passed over his veto. He also gave a concrete illustration of his views by the exercise of the pardoning power in Oregon. John M. Davis and E. R. Long were convicted in the federal court at Portland of operating whiskey stills and were sentenced—Davis to six months in jail and a fine of $500, and Long to thirty days and a fine of $100. Neither of them had started to serve their sentence when the president of the United States struck off the last sentence and reduced the fine of Davis to $150. If a bootlegger can always square himself by paying a fine prohibition is a dead letter, we all know. Are the liquor interests deceived in their belief that Governor Cox, as president, would help to undermine the law and bring about its repeal.

The wets have yet been unable to fool William Jennings Bryan. He has so far refused to open his mouth for Cox.

Let the voters of Douglas county who wish to maintain and enforce prohibition look carefully at the local situation. They will observe that the "wet" forces are lining up to beat at least two republican candidates on the local ticket for no other reason than that these men have consistent "dry" records. To carry out the plan they are supporting one man known to be "wet" and another known to be "dry."

They will support a nominal "dry" man to beat a man who has been aggressive for prohibition, because they thus hope to "split" the "dry" vote. Let good straight republicans and "dry" and honest democrats take note of what is going on. It is openly predicted that a certain democratic candidate will get half the church vote and "all the wets and church wenchies." Can the voters be so fooled?

Remember what happened to congressman Volstead in the primaries. He was chairman of the committee on judiciary in the house of representatives and took a leading part in repealing the Volstead act to make prohibition effective. When he came back home he found his enemies had induced a "dry man" a minister of the gospel to run against him. Volstead was apparently defeated, though the result may be overturned by the courts because the enemies of Volstead are charged with violating the corrupt practice act. When they cannot do better, the wets are perfectly willing to kill an aggressive "dry" candidate by inducing a "wet" man to run against him. They may be possibly able to bamboozle when they need his help. They want to man they know they can never use. A "dry" man who allows himself to be used as a cat's paw in this kind of a game shows his caliber. There are plenty of straight, upstanding "wet" men who would seem to be used as monkeys to rake chestnuts out of the fire.

Movie Closeups

An appealing story of thrilling action, self sacrifice and love, written by H. H. Van Loan, a prominent screen author, will be shown at the Antlers theatre tonight when Harry Carey is presented in his latest Universal feature, "Blue Streak McCoy." The story drifts into the border country of the southwest. The ranger service appeals to his adventurous spirit, so he joins and becomes active in protecting the mining interests. Marlowe, a prominent operator, has a son, who recalls to Job his own youth, and the two become great friends. Marlowe's niece, Diana, also strikes his fancy, and stirs him to better deeds. Unfortunately Marlowe's wife is attracted by her husband's manager, Ovis, who plans to steal his employer's gold and then elope with his wife. Job interrupts their plans, wins the admiration of Diana and the sincere gratitude of Marlowe, who offers Job any favor it is within his power to grant. How Job stifles his great desire and also masks his feelings in order to bring happiness to his "buddy" and the girl he loves are told in the concluding scenes of what has been called the year's best western story, "Blue Streak McCoy."

Reeves Eason, who directed the picture selected some notable players for the leading roles in support of Mr. Carey, among them being Ruth Royce, Ray Ripley, Bruce Eason, Chas. LeMay, Ruth Golden Lila Lealle and Charles Arling.

A genuine emerald valued at $27,000, is used in J. Warren Kerrigan's latest Brunton production, "The Green Flame," released by W. W. Hodkinson, and now showing at the Liberty theatre.

In this picture Kerrigan has the part of the private detective entrusted to the task of running down a dangerous gang of jewel thieves. With the aid of a clever girl colleague he forestalls a plan of the crooks to steal "The Green Flame" a priceless emerald, formerly one of Russia's crown jewels, and captures the leaders of the gang.

While searching for a stone of a suitable brilliance to represent "The Green Flame," the Brunton studio property man hit upon the idea of using a valuable emerald belonging to Jacob Holt, the well known California Oil magnate. Holt agreed to loan Kerrigan the jewel, provided that he put up $27,000 bond, its appraised value. This was done and the gem became a motion picture "prop" for a period of three weeks.

May Allison, who is the star in "The Cheater" which will be repeated at the Majestic tonight, has always been familiar in light comedy roles of the butterfly type, but it is said that she was not satisfied with these. At any rate "The Cheater" affords a chance for the beautiful blonde star, her part calling for an emotional power of the strongest kind, and a deep understanding of the psychology of a woman's soul. She has the splendid leading role of Lily Meany, the vulgar stunner who becomes all that she should be thru the regenerating influence of the one man she loves. "The Cheater" has been compared to "The Miracle Man" the picture that has a place in the hearts of all who saw it that will never be supplanted.

A new member has been added to the force of the Globe Theatre Co. in this city in the person of Mrs. Alice S. Gay, who will be the organist at the Antlers theatre. Mrs. Gay has just completed a year's contract in New York City, and came to this city from Los Angeles, where she has been visiting. Mrs. Gay will play at the Majestic theatre for a short time with Fred Durman, who is now playing at the Antlers, returns to Albany, at which time Mrs. Gay will be transferred to the Antlers permanently. Mrs. Gay began her duties at the Majestic theatre on Monday night.

The Symbol of Merit

In ancient Assyria, stone jars marked with certain seals were known to contain wine of the highest quality. In modern times articles stamped with certain trade marks are recognized as supreme in their field. The Bosch trade mark is a notable symbol of merit—a mark which for more than a score of years has designated supreme quality, and proved this meaning to more than 4,000,000 users of Bosch High Tension Magneto Ignition. Through the world it designates America's Supreme Ignition system—the highest of manufacturing ideals, zealously guarded and scrupulously maintained. To seek this "A-B" trade mark, to find it and to make use of the extensive electrical products it identifies, is to be positively satisfied.
