Luncheon for Two.

I don't know what I would have done all through the long dreary ride if it had not been for Jerry Hathaway. He was absolutely a new type of human being to me, and, of course, I was greatly interested in him.

When the time came for luncheon, I opened up the delicious sandwiches my mother had prepared for me.

"Say, kid, I was going to invite you to go in to dinner with me," he exclaimed, but all the while he was eyeing the box enviously.

"I am sure that there is enough for two here," I answered.

Jerry Hathaway looked around. Years afterward he told me that he wanted to see if anyone was laughing at him. Then his boyish instinct and love of a picnic got the better of him, and he said, "All right, we'll have the luncheon here, and I'll order some coffee and ice cream and cake to finish it."

He reached over and rang the bell. The porter came and I saw a dollar pass between his hand and the black one extended, and I supposed that he was paying for the ice cream and coffee. At this time I knew nothing about tips. In a few moments, the porter returned and set a table between us. I spread upon it my mother's luncheon which had been prepared with her usual exquisite culinary taste. It seemed like a play house to me, and I knew now that I took on the dignity as I assumed the duties of hostess.

Jerry ate with great relish and told me that it was better food than he could get at his father's restaurant.

"Although we have a French chef there," he added. During the meal Jerry forgot he was a man of the world, and we became just two children having an out of the ordinary feast.

Our laughter shocked some of the people in the car, and one woman, came right over and asked me if I had ever met Jerry before.

"Never," I said calmly.

"Why, don't you know child, that you shouldn't talk to strange men like that. What is your mother thinking of to let you travel alone?"

Her question angered me. "My mother knows I can take care of myself," I answered loftily. "Jerry has been very kind to me!"

"Jerry? Jerry? Do you mean to tell me you are calling that young man by his first name? My dear child, he looks to me like someone you had not ought to know at all. You won't reach the city until after ten tonight. Is someone going to meet you?"

"Yes, madam, my Aunt Clara."

"Well, land knows, I hope she will. It is very evident your mother has not brought you up properly. Don't you know that little girls should not speak to strange men?"

"But, madam, he spoke to me first."

"That's different. Young men speak only to young women they think will respond, and no young woman while travelling should allow herself to enter into conversation with a young man who is a perfect stranger."

Just then Jerry returned from the smoking of a cigarette and evidently heard the last part of her remark. Not knowing that I had told the truth, he said, "Why Ann and I have known each other since we were babies. She's not talking to a stranger. I am going to take care of her until her friends meet her, madam."

The woman sniffed. "Oh, if there is some understanding between you, that's all right," she said in a very nasty tone.

"No understanding whatever," said Jerry sturdily. "Ann is just unhappy because she is leaving her mother, and I am going to take care of her all right, all right. You need not worry. I know when I see a good girl the same as you do."

Beauty Secrets for Women

A woman's fondest hope is to stay young. She often resorts to paints, powders and cosmetics to hide her years. Some women pay large sums to so-called "Beauty Doctors" in the belief that money will buy youth. Others wear girlish dresses, thinking they can fool the world about their age. But no one is deceived. The more you try to hide your age, the more it shows.

There is but one thing that holds old age back, and that is health. Sickness and weakness bring old age early in life. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a building-up medicine for women. It makes them healthy and strong when they suffer from women's troubles. It keeps them looking young by keeping them well. It is a woman's tonic for the frail, the delicate and those who are nervous, dizzy and who have headache and dragging pains. Favorite Prescription is altogether vegetable and without a particle of alcohol. It is safe to take. Try it now. In tablet or liquid form at all druggists, or send 10c for trial package of the tablets to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y.
