Engineer Martin Says He Was About To Give Up From Stomach Trouble Before He Got Tanlac.—Eats Anything Now.

W. L. Martin, of 458 1-2 South street, Los Angeles, Cal., a local engineer in the yards of Southern Pacific company, is an engineer who has followed him for fifteen years. "I was about to give up from stomach trouble before I got Tanlac," says Martin. "I followed me for fifteen years. I had a dull heavy feeling in the pit of my stomach and I often had awful spells of gas would blow me up as if I was a drum, almost cutting off my breath. Sharp pains went all over my chest that were so bad at times that I could hardly breathe. I couldn't get a good night's sleep and just felt no good and with all the medicine I took, I didn't get any better. I then got Tanlac and in a few days I was all right. I just kept on having them

U. of O. and O. A. C. To Clash Nov. 20

CORVALLIS, Oct. 1.—The annual alumni home coming will be held in the week of the Oregon game, November 20, the greater O. A. C. committee has announced. The biggest and jolliest celebration ever held in the history of the O. A. C. is also the plan of those in charge.

The annual rush between the sophomores and freshmen, the big "pop" rally and freshman bonfire are part of the schedule of events. The alumni will be entertained at the various fraternities and will be given an alumni luncheon. The Variety "O" dance in the evening after the game is being planned. It is to be an elaborate affair this year, although the plans are not yet complete.

All fraternities and clubs will be asked to co-operate with the greater O. A. C. committee and announce the event to their own alumni. Fifteen hundred of the old grads are expected to wend their way back to the campus for a few days, to renew acquaintances, take part in the celebrations and look over the new crop of students. University of Oregon is going to send at least 2,000 as an escort to their football team, according to the estimate this year.

SONGS THAT ARE IMMORTAL

Greatest Minds of All the Ages Bestowed Their Labors on the Poems of Homer.

The Illiad and Odyssey were probably sung by Homer about a century and a half after the destruction of the town of Troy following the ten years of war that was waged in the cause of Menelaus, king of Lacedaemon, whose consort had been carried away by the son of the Trojan monarch. The two poems are as old as David's psalms. Originally the Illiad would appear not to have been a single connected poem, but to have attained at a later period its present complete state.

About one hundred years after Homer, Lycurgus, the lawgiver of Lacedaemon, brought these poems into Greece, and two centuries and a half later Pindarus is supposed to have given them their perfect form. His son Hipparchus introduced the custom of reciting rhapsodies at the Panathenaea, or festival of the tutelary goddess. A more complete edition of the Homeric poems, from which the modern ones are taken, was prepared for Alexander the Great by Aristotle, which the former used to keep under his pillow in a golden case. Also Aratus, the astronomer, Aristarchus of Samos, and Aristophanes, librarian at Alexandria, bestowed their labor on these immortal songs. Because of the fine moral sentiment, Homer became the pattern of Thucydides, the favorite author of the greatest and noblest men, and one of the best teachers of the wisdom of human life.—Detroit News.

MAKE THE MOST OF TODAY

All That Has Gone Before Is Past and the Future Is Clouded With Uncertainty.

Today is what you have. It is also what you are. And again, Today is what you do. And if you haven't anything, and aren't anybody, and do nothing—why, then, for you there is no Today.

For Today is music. Today is art. Today is literature. Today is joy. Today is work. Today is play. Today is life.

Yesterday is no problem—for it is past. Tomorrow is no problem—for it isn't here. Today is supremacy. Today is the world. Today is—Opportunity!

Crowd in upon it then. Today—take hold upon its faintest chance. Spend your smiles—Today. Be game—Today. Be glad and great—Today.

Today is the day—your day. Today is Time and Change doing its job. Are you a vital part of the play? Today you may start out all anew. Today you may put to use what you learned a day ago. The center of your entire life may revolve about—Today.

But, above all things, do not fear—Today. And let all worry slide. All things that do not count—let them go too. Work and help and love—Today.

For this Today will never dawn again!—George Matthew Adams in Good Housekeeping.

Snake's Menace Mere Bluff.

A really accomplished reptile recently arrived in London in the shape of the American "hog-nosed snake." When approached by man, it acts in a most disturbing way, flattening part of its body and inflating an awesome hood like a cobra. If ever anything said: "I am death," it is the hog-nosed snake receiving a caller. As you get nearer, its rage and menace increase, but, one more step, and there is an anti-climax. The hood collapses, the snake "cops" to the ground, turns on its back and appears perfectly lifeless. Strike it with a stick, and it remains as limp as a piece of garden hose, but turn your back and it will crawl away. The two specimens now in the Zoological gardens, Regent's park, have gone through their "act" so often that they are too bored to repeat it for the present. The point of the joke is that the hog-nosed snake is perfectly harmless.

Cleaning Watches With Bread.

Perhaps the most novel use to which bread is put may be seen in some of the great watch factories, where more than forty loaves of fresh bread are sometimes used each day.

From earliest times in the history of watchmaking it has been the custom to reduce fresh bread to the form of dough. This dough is used for removing oil and chips that naturally adhere in course of manufacture to pieces as small as the parts of a watch that are so small as to be barely visible to the naked eye. The oil is absorbed by the dough, and the chips stick to it, and there is no other known substance which can be used as a wiper without leaving some of its particles attached to the thing wiped.

Enormous Sharks.

Sharks grow to a tremendous size. Roudole's shark, for instance, which is an inhabitant of tropical seas, attains a length of 40 feet. The great basking shark is even longer. A young fish of this species, brought to England and set up, is 17 feet in length. Full grown, this shark may measure 50 feet and rival the whales in girth and weight.

Saw-fish have been killed 20 feet in length and it is not for a moment to be supposed that we have secured the largest. The fact is that the natural history of the seas is still very largely a sealed book, and that surprises are still to store for future generations.

Woe unto the world because of occasions of stumbling! For it must needs be that the occasions come; but woe to that man through whom the occasion cometh!—Matthew 17-7.

Prune Rolls and Sandwiches Latest

The idea of Ray W. Clark of the Umpqua Hotel for new ways of preparing the lovely prune, has brought the response which will perhaps give a hint to housewives who are in search of a new dish which to brighten the daily menu. Yesterday's daily, I read a recipe from the Umpqua Hotel for ways of cooking prunes and just finished making a prune pie, and I would write a few of my recipes. In the first place, prunes are used in any place where raisins are required, and are very good in the meat or marmalade. Another dish is made using any good brand of rolls, cut the dough into round pieces, place a large prune that has been stewed and well washed with sugar in the center, the dough around the prune and prune sandwiches can be made as follows: Chop and pit one half of prunes, and one fourth of a pound of walnuts. These must be mixed fine and mixed with mayonnaise and spread on thinly sliced bread with a leaf of lettuce. The ways I have written prove satisfactory, and I think anyone desirous of ways to prepare prunes will find that the dried fruit will take the place of raisins. Vera, Detroit.

INTEREST IN OLD MANSES

Traveler Finds Atmosphere of Romance Surrounds Picturesque Abodes of Eastern States.

Vacation pilgrims traveling by automobile or trolley or pursuing the less exhilarating but more tranquil joy of exploring country highways and byways on foot or drawn by some faithful old Dobbin have singled out about every structure or locality famous in song, story and history. Wayside inns, taverns, military headquarters, churches and the birthplaces of celebrities have all come in for their share of worship.

There is, however, one species of landmark which seems to have escaped the special attention of those interested in relics of our pious forefathers—the old manses of New England and the middle states. The reactor or parsonage of today was known in the time of our ancestors by the old Scotch title of manse.

At first thought it might seem that no more particular interest would hover about these ancient manses than about any of the picturesque homes of an earlier century. Indeed it is not so much in outward appearance that they are to be set apart, but because of an intangible atmosphere of sacred romance surrounding them—invisible "clouds of glory" trailing back to the days when the manse played a most important part in the life of the community. Furthermore each of these old ministerial dwellings has a story all of its own. It was by accident I discovered this, and now whenever happy chance takes me to a new locality the first place I hunt up is the manse.—Chicago Daily News.

Visitors to the flower show held recently in the Royal Horticultural hall at Westminster, England, were surprised to find a number of rare orchids confined, like so many wild animals in the zoo, within a heavy wire cage. It was explained that as the flowers represented a new addition to the orchid family, the grower was naturally anxious that his fellow dealers should not share his triumph. Had it not been for the cage, an unscrupulous competitor might have stolen some of the powdery pollen from the blooms, and used it to fertilize plants of his own. Normally adhering to the bodies of visiting insects, the pollen might easily have adhered to the tip of the thief's finger.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

BUILT IN HONOR OF BUDDHA

Temple of Borobudur in Java is One of the Marvels of the World Today.

The temple of Borobudur in Java is one of the most gigantic and ancient works ever reared by the human hand. It represents more human art and artistic skill than the great temple of Karnak. Said Alfred R. Wallace, the scientist: "The human mind and skill expended on Borobudur is so great that that expended on the great pyramids sinks into insignificance." The temple was built about the ninth century of our era. It stands on a hillside in Java, originally a mountain of Buddha. The robes of Buddha were originally divided into eight parts, which were placed in eight different places, and re-divided into 100 parts, which were placed in 100 different places. When Buddhist missionaries went to Java in the seventh century they brought with them one of these vases, a golden receptacle for the vase of Borobudur temple, the finest piece of sculpture in the then known world, one which has never been rivaled.
