Movie Closeups

The admirers of William Farnum and that includes everyone who has ever seen his superb acting—will have another opportunity to see him here—and in a role that throws his genius into strong relief—at the Antlers theatre, where William Fox is to present Victor Hugo's immortal story, "Les Miserables." The first performance will take place on Monday.

The story of this remarkable book is sufficiently strong and colorful to draw fully upon Farnum's versatility as an actor. In the role of Jean Valjean, he portrays the long and varied career of a son of toil, driven by poverty to theft, and imprisoned for many years in atonement. Upon leaving his dungeon he is forced to cope with a world he has learned to hate. But fortune plays him many pranks. Above all, it brings back the milk of human kindness to his nature, and brings love into his life in the form of Cosette, to whose happiness he dedicates his life. However the shadow of his old life is behind him as persistent as fate.

William Farnum is said to have surpassed all of his previous triumphs in "Les Miserables."

Violet Schramm, she of the "million dollar eyes" lends the blinding effect of those beautiful optics to "Riders of the Dawn." Benjamin B. Hampton's second big Zane Gray production. She appears as a semi-vamp but in a part different to any other in which her eyes have ever wrought destruction, for she is the French girl, who as a part of the intrigue against the wheat rancher, Kurt Dorn, pretends to be his wife, claiming that he married her in old France during the war.

Thereby Roy Stewart, as Kurt Dorn, and Claire Adams as Lenore Anderson are forced to part; more damage wrought by the famous Schramm eye. Miss Schramm handles her role with a combined fire and repression that marks her as the coming emotional actress of the shadow stage. "Riders of the Dawn," a W-

W. Hodgkinson release appears at the Liberty theatre tonight.

Dorothy Dalton has been surrounded by a remarkably strong supporting cast in her latest Paramount-Arterart Ince picture, "The Market of Souls," which will be on the boards at the Majestic theatre tonight. Her leading man is H. E. Herbert, who, on the speaking stage supported Billie Burke, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Blanche Bates, and other stellar lights. Others in the cast are Philo McCullough, Donald McDonald and Dorcas Matthews, all well known to screen lovers. In addition to these famous players, there are scores of other entertainers who will delight audiences. These are the toe dancers, Egyptian girls, and the ballet dancers who appear in a most wonderful cabaret scene.

Manager Hill, of the Antlers and Majestic theaters, has secured for the first showing in this city, Babe Ruth in his famous picture, "Over the Fence," which has just recently been filmed. The picture shows his wonderful scenes with the action

Official Democratic Statement

By Douglas County Democratic Central Committee.

By Ward A. Irvine.

Branding assertions by Harding followers that Governor Cox is opposed to salesmanship as a profession as a "misrepresentation even greater than that practiced against the League of Nations." Edwin A. Taft, a member of the United Commercial Travelers of America, made a fiery attack on those responsible for the spreading of the misleading report in a statement issued today. With other local traveling salesmen he expressed his indignation at such political tactics, and brands them as "insulting to the intelligence of the traveling men of America." Mr. Taft agrees that an editorial appeared in one of Governor Cox's newspapers in 1914, referring to the profession as a "nuisance" while the governor was in Columbus, but he submits an order dispatched by Cox immediately insisting that the article be repudiated as "evidence of the governor's views on the editorial."

Governor Cox is not opposed to salesmanship and never was" is the statement of Taft. "For the Harding followers to spread such a report is a deliberate attempt to mislead the salesmen of the country. A pamphlet has been sent broadcast by the republican committee, and Stanhope Pier, of Portland, took occasion to write a letter to a local newspaper referring to the editorial, but leaving out, either through ignorance of the facts or in a deliberate attempt to misrepresent them, the repudiation of the editorial by the popular Ohio Governor."

"As soon as the editorial appeared, Governor Cox sent the following telegram to D. L. Kumbler, managing editor of the Dayton News: "My attention has been called to an editorial which appeared in the Daily News in criticism of commercial travelers. This is an insult so gratuitous and uncalculated for an effort to an organization of men who have made the present development of the American market possible, and is so radically in conflict with the policy of the newspapers which I own and control, that I request you to insist at once upon the editorial writer responsible for it publishing an apology addressed to the commercial travelers over his signature, and without unnecessary delay."

"That message the Harding supporters have deliberately ignored," Taft continued. "And that is not all. They ignored the retraction published in the Daily News at Cox's request. They forgot to tell about Governor Cox accepting the resignation of the editorial writer after the apology had been published. They didn't talk about the message sent to Governor Cox's secretary by the editorial writer on July 23rd last, in which he said:

"If my old editorial which was used six years ago is brought up, I wish it known that I was solely responsible for it, and any attempt to connect Governor Cox with it, would be as unjust and deplorable as it was in 1914."

"Nor did they mention the letter written by Governor Cox to Mr. Sol Wolestein, of the National Council of Traveling Salesmen's Associations, in it he said:

"I recognize the fact that consideration in proper measure has not been given the commercial travelers in either legislative or economic programs commensurate with the service they have rendered the government."

HARDING'S OFFICIAL RECORD

Harding Against Brandeis
When President Wilson appointed this D. Brandeis to the supreme court, the old school reactionaries opposed his confirmation. There is in all the foregoing evidence of sensioned so that all the scientific notes may be noted. With the pleasure will be shown a 1929 baseball game between the New York Giants and the Cleveland Indians. This picture will be shown at the Majestic heater tonight and at the Antlers tomorrow night.

By order of the General Council, dated October 4, 1938. R. L. WHIPPLE, Recorder of the City of Roseburg, Oregon.

JAMES M. COX

for Hardings attitude, no more clear cut and conclusive proof of what he stood for politically and economically than his vote against Brandeis on this occasion. (June 1, 1916, C. R. 9032)

Harding Helps Suppress Facts.
An important means of preventing the people from changing present conditions, is to keep them in ignorance of what those conditions are.

The publication of senate document No. 259, showing profits made by corporations in 1917, proved a great shock to public opinion. Early in the second session of the present congress Senator Harris of Georgia, introduced a joint resolution calling for the publication of similar figures in 1918.

The resolution was referred to the finance committee, where it was quietly but firmly suppressed. During the last hour of the session, a dramatic fight was waged to discharge the committee from further consideration of the resolution and thus get action on it. The test vote (June 5) was on the motion to discharge the committee. Harding voted nay. (C. R. 9281.) thus voting to withhold from the people information about the profits made during the year 1918.

Harding Summed Up.
The senate today stands at the lowest ebb of statesmanship ever known. The average ability of its membership is below that of any other period. Yet, undoubtedly, Harding is at the very bottom of the list.

He is a reactionary through and through. He is not himself a leader in that old school. Penrose, Lodge and Smoot typify the leadership to which he responds. He depends upon himself for no big decisions. Obviously if he were elected such politicians would control his administration.

He has shown no comprehension of any vital problem now demanding solution. The sum total of his rostrative constructive ideas is limited to a protective tariff. His comprehension of that issue can be expressed by the saying what he himself said in arguing for a high tariff.

"You know, there is no more fallacious thing in the world than the assumption that a duty is added to the cost of an article, and is therefore a burden on the American consumer."

HAVE FINE SCENERY

Roy "Hiram" Clair, who is widely known as a comedian of quaint manner and engaging talent will be the star in the "Review of Reviews" which will be presented at the Antlers on Thursday night, Oct. 14. Clair brings to the stage a "different" sort of rube character, and his impersonation is said to be one of the genuine delights of the musical comedy season.

The company bringing the "Review of Reviews" is said to be exceptionally large and well equipped. A carload of special scenery and effects is carried and is used in adding color and charm to the many variety numbers which make up the program.

The DE LAVAL MILKER solves the milking problem

One man can milk three times as many cows in an hour with a De Laval Milker outfit as by hand. It is the fastest Milker known, and it is always uniform in action and speed. It is on the job weekdays, Sundays and holidays. The cows like its uniform, pleasing action and give down their milk freely. The ownership of a De Laval Milker is a permanent insurance that the cows will be milked in the same manner every day.

PETEY, LISTEN HARD!

When it's your good luck to butt into Buffalo, go to that store on Ellicott Square where the dark haired clerk slips out Camels with both hands—paired a tank of talk on the side!

The thing that tickled me most was his sureness that I was after Camels! As soon as I had my coin on the counter and before I could say a word, he flashed me a package of Camels! When I asked him how he knew I wanted Camels, he took a pull on his laugh stock and soaked me with this:—"Can't tell you, old mayonnaise—I'm dressing!"

After he had waited on several other men who drew their Camels like I did, this salesman said:—"For a fact, most men here smoke Camels. They hit the popular taste! Camels have the right body and the right mildness and the right flavor! They're ALL right!"

And, Pete—he added this without a stutter! The more I see of the world and the more I learn about cigarettes, the more respect I have for Camels and Camels quality! I don't believe a better cigarette could be made at any price!" And Pete—oh, Pete—listen to this gem:—"And it's an odds on bet I'm a good judge. I've tried 'em all—and my taste is the jury box!"

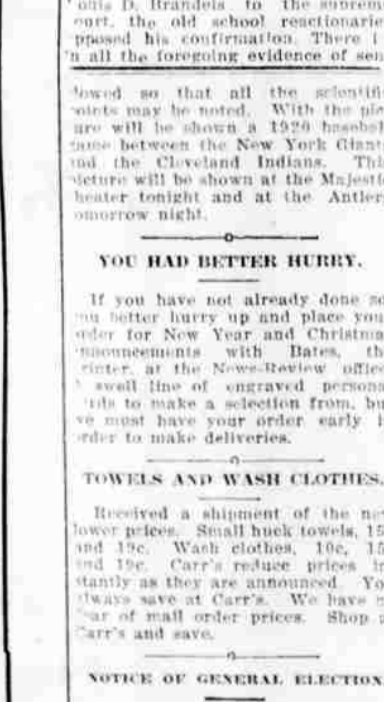

If that isn't a swell line of Camel talk, I'll sell my shoes! But, Peter, that salesman is right! It's my belief that no cigarette in the world can be favorably compared with Camels—they're so smooth and mellow and delightful!

I'm herewith slipping between the sheets, old book. So, you tell 'em the rest—you're so full of knowledge!

Sincerely

Buffalo, N. Y. —on a Saturday!
