Announcing a Special Exhibition and Sale of Highest Grade Furs

ONE DAY ONLY, MONDAY, OCTOBER 18th

We have been fortunate in being able to make arrangements with one of the best known Fur Manufacturers in an Eastern city to ship to us for a Special One Day's Exhibition and Sale $75,000.00 worth of the best Style Furs, Coats, Scarfs, Caps and Muffs. These furs will be offered to you at about 25 per cent less than the regular prices.

We are confident that this will be the most important fur event held in Roseburg for many seasons. There is really an immense stock that we have to offer for your selection. Along with the specially consigned stock we will add our own high-grade assortment, thus giving you a choice of an unusually great number of popular style garments from which to choose at prices that you can afford to pay.

Byron F. LeMaitre, a well-known fur expert, will be in charge of the exhibition ready to talk to our customers regarding the style changes and to explain to them the merits of the different skins used in the production of the finished garments.

The assortment will include COATS, COATEES, CAPES, NOVELTY SCARFS AND BODY SCARFS.

COATS

made of Hudson seal, trimmed in Persian, skunk, beaver, fitch, squirrel, raccoon, Australian opossum and plain. We will have a large line of AUSTRALIAN seal, French seal, Japanese mink, Russian wolf and coney coats, plain and trimmed, all of which have been designed to meet the most exacting customer's requirements.

COATEES

will be shown in squirrel, mole, Jap mink and Hudson seal.

CAPES

are strong in demand and will be shown in mink, Jap mink, squirrel, mole, Hudson seal and other rare furs.

BODY SCARFS

will be the strongest in foxes and we will show them in battleship gray, dove, gunmetal, Loretta, Maurice, liberty blue, georgette, taupe, baum, marten, black, Jap cross, red foxes, lynx, Canadian wolf, raccoon, skunk, Russian wolf and other varieties.

All Furs In This Stock Will Sell at a Reduction of

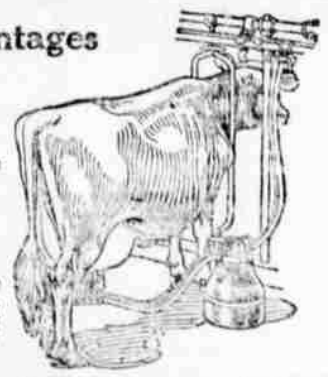
OF THE

DE LAVAL MILKER



Udder Pulsator, close to cow's udder—insuring uniform, snappy action of teat-cups.

Pulsation speed cannot be adjusted or tampered with—always uniform and pleasing to the cows.

No pulsator springs, washers or regulating screws—pulsator has only one moving part.

Alternating action at fixed speed—the two front and the two rear teats milked alternately and uniformly.

Pulso-Pump—especially designed rotary machine providing the vacuum and the mechanical control of Udder Pulsators.

Self-adjusting teat-cups—fit both large and small teats.

The De Laval is the fastest method of milking cows successfully. The name De Laval is ample guarantee of satisfaction.

HER DAUGHTER AND HIS SON.

BY IDAH McGLONE GIBSON

Mr. Halsey's Plan.

"Ann, Ann," called Kenneth's voice, "do you wish to come down right away or shall Dad and I go over to the house and come back in a little while?"

I had forgotten that Kenneth and his father were down stairs while I was talking to the nurse. "I will come down right away," I said, and telling the nurse that we would talk another time, I descended the stairs.

"Ann, will you come over and have some tea with us?" asked Mr. Halsey.

I knew it would be ungrateful to refuse, and besides I did not want to have my last visit with my mother until the house was still and I was alone, so I silently nodded and followed them down to the gate.

All along the little short street from our cottage up to the big house I knew that I was the object of curious eyes. When I reached the gate of the big house and turned to look back at something Kenneth had remarked about, I saw Mrs. Cameron hurriedly coming across the lawn of her home on the other side of the street.

"Kenneth," she called, "I did not know you were here. Did Grace send me any message."

A slight frown crossed Mr. Halsey's face, and it seemed to me that there was a little reluctance in Kenneth's step as he went across the street. Mr. Halsey and I went into the house and in a few minutes Kenneth followed with Mrs. Cameron.

"I had to come, my child," she said, stooping over me, "to tell you how sorry I am because of your mother's death. Although I have not seen much of her in late years, yet Grace has had much to say about her. And Kenneth has always spoken of her as one of his own family."

Mr. Halsey was almost discourteous to Mrs. Cameron, but she did not seem to notice it. She seated herself and, looking up with her usual honeyed smile, said: "Kenneth tells me that my sweet child is looking very well. You can understand what it means to me to hear of her from one who has seen her so recently. I have never gotten used to being without her, and, my dear Ann, it has been one of my compensations to know that she has been at school with you and that she had near her in you and Kenneth some of her childhood friends."

"But, Mrs. Cameron," I could not help saying, "Grace and I have not been particular friends since we have been in school. She never has seemed to care for me, and lately we have grown more apart. I have always been a student and Grace has been much in the society of the school."

"Don't say that, my child. Grace has always spoken of you to me with the greatest affection. Of course, I suppose as children grow into young ladyhood, their different walks of life become more apparent. Grace has always known that a social life was what I had designed for her, while you—" she stopped suggestively, but I would not help her out.

She colored and drew her breath sharply, and seemed so uncomfortable that Mr. Halsey interposed.

"Ann, just what had your mother intended for you to be?"

"I do not know," I answered honestly, "in fact, I do not think my mother knew. She was having me educated in the way that the ordinary young woman is educated and because that seemed to be the right thing. And now, while I am fairly cultured and, perhaps, have more than average intelligence, I have specialized in nothing. I do not know what I will do—what I can do."

"Isn't it too bad, my dear," said Mrs. Cameron, "that you are not as popular with men as Grace. I have always told my daughter that if she makes a suitable marriage, I will consider that anything I have ever done for her education has not been in vain." As she said this she looked at Mr. Halsey rather meaningly, but I could see from his blank face that he hadn't the slightest idea that there was any engagement between Grace and Kenneth.

"I hope that Ann will not feel that it is necessary for her to marry," he said abruptly, "for the mere sake of having someone to provide for her."

"I could never do that, Mr. Halsey," I said, "not with the example of my mother before me."

Mrs. Cameron looked slightly horrified and she moved uneasily as though I had introduced something that I should not into the conversation.

Mr. Halsey immediately interposed with: "Ann, your mother was one of the finest women I have ever known. She gave up a great love for principle and the only mistake that she ever made, I think, was in not giving you your father's name."

"I think I must be going," said Mrs. Cameron abruptly.

"No, stay for a moment," said Mr. Halsey. "I want you to hear what I have to say. Ann, your father was my closest friend, and some day I will tell you how much I loved your mother and why she could not love me. Because of this, Ann, I want you to come here to live and to be my daughter."
