Aerial Acrobatic Were Not In Vain

CHICAGO, Oct. 22—The reckless aerial acrobatics with which Omer Locklear startled the world, until he resulted in his death recently, in California, have not been in vain, according to air mail officials here. Further report that Locklears stunts have opened the way for important improvements in commercial aviation.

Locklear's stunt of changing from one plane to another several thousand feet above the earth will be copied in the air mail service and by dropping sacks of mail, packages, or parts from one ship to another, thus making aerial liners to make long journeys without landing, the officials say. Some believe that within a short time airplanes may even take on fuel and supplies in the air.

When one of the mammoth air-liners, which aviators believe soon will be common, flies over the destination a smaller plane will go up to meet it, the officials explain, and by means of a rope, mail sacks and other packages will be lowered from the large to the small plane. By means of a long hook, the larger plane will take on baggage from the other ship and speed on to its destination.

Eventually it is expected that this will be perfected so that fuel may be transferred from one plane to another, making a non-stop, coast to coast trip possible.

Pilots will change machines in mid air by means of a rope ladder lowered from one machine to another, just as Locklear did, it is explained. The government has been conducting tests along this line for some time past, the officials here state, and one of the big commercial aviation companies is reported to be planning to put the scheme into effect within a few months in transferring mail.

Medford Tribune: Arriving autoists report that the infamous Smith hill between here and Roseburg has been rendered almost impassable by the recent hard rains, and say that the old grade is the best to travel but can be negotiated only with much difficulty. The new grade is impossible for cars to get through, they say, and several cars are mired there and can not be extricated because no truck can get through to pull them out. Several men who arrived in the city today got stalled on the old grade, left their cars there and walked out, finding their way to the nearest railroad station where they took a train for Medford. The Ford car of Mr. Hubbard, a traveling salesman from Portland, got mired there night before last and he was compelled to sleep in his car all night.

HOW SHALL WOMEN VOTE?

Women are being urged to enter politics, to join one party or the other. As a would-be voter who is open to conviction and who would like to vote for the best man, irrespective of party, I am bewildered and disgusted, for it would seem there are no good men in politics, and that the two great political parties are rotten to the core.

Very few women, I think, want to see the country in the hands of socialists. Voting for the prohibition candidate would be throwing away a vote—and why should a woman leave the comforts of her home on election day tot cast a vote that she knows perfectly well would be worthless?

From the time I used to scrap with my small seat-mate at school over the relative merits of Hayes and Tilden, up to the present time, I have never known a presidential campaign carried on with the amount of virulence, hatred and low, vulgar abuse as has this one been. Is it any wonder foreign nations look down on us?

Recently I was asked by a foreigner if it were true that one of our candidates was a brewer and a divorced man, and the other a friend of the saloon men, and the husband of a divorced woman. This foreigner had been so informed—by different Americans—while making an extended trip across our country. I could only answer, "I don't know." From the great litter of lies concerning the two parties and their candidates, who can pick out the tiny grains of truth? Or, if all the things we hear in regard to the matter are true, then what is the nation coming to, that it should choose such wicked men to fill the highest office in the land—or for that matter, in the world? On the other hand, if they are untrue, then we are a nation of liars and mud-slingers.

Perhaps the entrance of women into politics may help to purify the political methods now in use by the old parties. Let us hope so, for I, and doubtless unnumbered others, are sick of these methods.
