William Farnum will again be seen in a beautiful William Fox production, "Heart Strings," which opens at the Antlers theatre for a run. It is said that "Heart Strings" surpasses in some ways all the plays in which this noted star has appeared. It tells the story of a girl's sacrifice for a sister, whom she loves. The early scenes are laid in the beautiful Laurentian valley of Quebec. Then the action goes to New York's famous Greenwich village, the abode of artists, musicians, near and near genius. Then to the home of a millionaire and again back to the peaceful village of the French Canadians.

The story is one in which laughter is commingled with tears. Big scenes that stir the consciousness and play upon the heart strings of humanity are said.

Supporting Mr. Farnum in the play are Gladys Coburn, Betty Hill, Robert Cain and Rowland G. Edwards. Henry Albert Phillips is the author; the scenario was written by E. Lloyd Sheldon and the play was directed by J. Gordon Edwards.

One of the biggest screen productions of the year will be seen at the Liberty Theatre, when Maurice Tourneur's super special, "The great Redeemer," will be the feature picture for two days beginning today. "The Great Redeemer," it is declared, is a tremendous drama of absorbing human interest. According to the expectations of the producers, it is destined to be hailed as one of the really impressive photoplays of the year.

Critics who reports on "The Great Redeemer" dwell with unusual force upon the unusual beauty of the production from a pictorial standpoint as well as from its intensely dramatic theme and the tremendous moral message it carries to all who view it. Maurice H. Van Loan, who wrote the story of Stjamboul," and any number of other tremendous screen successes, is the author of "The Great Redeemer." Maurice Tournier personally supervised the entire production, which was directed by Clarence Brown from the scenario by Jules Furthman and Jack Gilbert.

An all star cast interprets the exacting roles of "The Great Redeemer." Most prominent in the ensemble are House Peters, who has the role of Dan Malley, and Marjorie Daw, who appears as the girl.

Among the men who give us here some of the finest characterizations ever has ever seen. Samuel De Grasse, as Warren Goodwright—and Clyde Fillmore, as Captain Strong—completely fill the eye. You will say after you have seen de Grasse prominent in a few scenes, that here is an actor who mentally and physically lives his part in its every polished detail—a performance whose artistic finish has seldom been bettered on stage or screen. Likewise the inherent manliness of Max Strong, for all his wild oats so debonairly sown, is instantly appreciated in the clean cut characterization given us by Clyde Fillmore. And, to say this of these two is to say as much for every other player down to the smallest part. "The Devil's Passkey" at the Majestic tonight, gives you cinema acting in its absolute perfection.

School Pupils To Be Examined

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—School teachers will examine every pupil in New York November 9 to determine their physical fitness. The department of health set aside the day to stimulate interest of the teachers in their work, expecting them to more quickly detect physical defectives and report them promptly to the school physician.

For 23 years a department of health doctor or nurse has visited each public and parochial school in New York daily. The teachers report to them any child exhibiting signs of illness. Nurses examine all pupils monthly for contagious eye and skin diseases and pronounced physical shortcomings. Those having symptoms of contagious diseases are immediately sent home.

In this way contagious diseases have been held under control here. This is shown in the influenze epidemics which were checked in the schools so forcibly that attendance was proportionately as great as during the same period in other years, and the sickness and death rate was lower in the five to fifteen-year-old group than for any other period of life.

The health department expects to make vigorous search for unhealthy pupils in the future. Most of the men rejected for war service, it has been noted, had defects which could easily have been prevented or corrected during childhood.

X.—Does the League Endanger the Monroe Doctrine.

Q. Is it true that the British empire has six votes in the assembly to our one?

A. That is true. But in the council the British empire has only one vote.

Q. Does not the six votes in the assembly give the British empire an undue influence?

A. No. They give no such influence at all.

Q. Why?

A. The assembly, like the council, has no actual power. Both can only propose, advise, and recommend. The assembly cannot even exercise this advisory power unless the states represented on the council unanimously concur. The assembly exists primarily as a free forum of international discussion, wherein all causes of friction or dispute may be aired. In this forum self-governing colonies are represented equally with the mother country. The British empire has five such colonies—Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and India. That, with England, gives the British empire six votes. In any matters affecting English interests, it is likely, although not certain, that the British colonies would vote with England. With almost equal certainty, we might expect Cuba, Panama, Guatemala, and Haiti to vote with us. On most matters, our position would probably have the support of the South and Central American republics, whose interests in world affairs are usually identical with our own.

Q. Why were six votes in the assembly assigned to the British empire?

A. The admission of self-governing colonies to the assembly came as the result of a compromise. The British colonies, reluctant to surrender their world interests to the mother country, demanded some means of expressing their views. By this same compromise, the assembly was shorn of even the power to advise or recommend without the unanimous concurrence of the states represented on the council. France, now the dominant nation on the European continent, has one vote. So has the insignificant negro republic of Liberia. The empire of Japan has equal voting power with the small kingdom of Siam; and Brazil with Panama. The other great nations would not have signed the covenant had they not understood the voting power in the assembly could not bind them to any course of action.

Q. Would membership in the league of nations force us to renounce or modify the Monroe doctrine?

A. It would not in the least. The spirit of the covenant, as originally drawn, was in harmony with the Monroe doctrine. To make the matter clear and to answer the opposition of our hostile senators, the revised covenant plainly stated that its provisions should in no wise affect the Monroe doctrine.

Q. Can we make the league's attitude to the Monroe doctrine even more definite?

A. Yes, by an interpretative reservation.

Q. Would the other members of the league accept such a reservation?

A. Without doubt. They have already fully agreed to the principle.

XI.—Our Alternative to the League.

Q. What is our alternative to the league?

A. Heavy armament in peace as well as in war.

Q. Can we not afford that armament?

A. We can, but it would be very expensive. For proper naval defense alone, according to estimates by the secretary of the navy, we should have to expend at once nearly a half billion dollars, aside from the increased cost of upkeep. An adequate standing army, with universal military training, would cost much more. A great part of our war-time taxation would have to be maintained as a permanent tax.

Q. Will the league of nations reduce armament?

A. That is one of its primary objects.

Q. Do the European peoples and powers want to reduce armaments?

A. Yes, if they can do so with security. For thirty years before 1914, and under the old system of balance of power, the European nations expended on armies and navies as much money as though they had been perpetually at war. In the great war, most of them mortgaged every dollar of their resources. If they now keep up their great armaments, they must either go into bankruptcy or exploit by conquest such distant countries with undeveloped resources as South America.

Q. Why have the European nations not moved to reduce armaments?

A. (1) Because, as a result of the war and the enormous political changes it has brought about, the nations find themselves confronted with new complications against which they feel they must stand guard.

(2) Because they are waiting to see what the United States will do.

Q. Why should they wait for us?

A. Because we are the most powerful and richest nation on earth and the most secure in respect to our geographical situation. If there is any nation that can make an experiment in the reduction of armaments without danger to itself it is the United States.

Q. With regard to the war between Poland and Russia, if it not likely that the league, if we were a member, would have forced us to send American soldiers to fight on Polish or Russian soil?

A. It is absurdly unlikely that any soldier would have been sent to Russia or to Poland. But in case the other members of the league had desired to do this, American soldiers could not have been sent without the approval of the American representative in the council and the authorization of congress. Contrary to a widely circulated misunderstanding, congress in case we should enter the league, would retain unimpaired its power to decide for peace or war.

Several Daily Grins For You

In these days of women in politics and their privileges of the ballot, some of the prosy pessimists predict the end of married life and home-making—with race suicide as a result. But, our film friend, the Literary Digest "Topics of the Day" has shown many humorous refutations of this theory on the motion picture screen all over the U. S. A. Even the pessimistic predictors of race suicide will be forced to smile at the following newspaper wit screened in "Topics:"

News item: Our postmaster is improving after a severe illness. He recently became the father of his eighteenth child.—Nutley (N. J.) Sun.

"Is your wife a good mathematician?" "Yes, she keeps adding to the family every year."—Town Topics.

"I've got some news for you this morning, Bobby. You've got a brand-new baby sister." "Oh, daddy, may I be the first to tell mama?"—London (Eng.) Tit-Bits.

News item: A man in Hodar, Neb., is the father of ten children. For the past 20 years he has used Honey and Tar Compound.—Chicago Tribune.

News item in St. Louis paper: "Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Van are receiving congratulations on the arrival of twins yesterday, a boy and a girl. Mr. Van is an artist."—The Tatler.

Everything adjusts itself: the rich have their ice in summer, the poor in winter; the rich have their twin sixes, the poor their six twins. —New York Evening Mail.

"If you want a baby sister so badly," said Eddie's mother, "why don't you pray for one?" "I have prayed, and every time I pray God leaves it at the Smith's."—St. Louis Republic.

"Has Twelve Sons on His Farm," says a headline. Raising your own food and your own help seems to be the only hope these days.—Kansas City Star.

"Have ye seen my last baby, Maggie?" "Faith, an' I never expect to." Harvard Lampoon.

"We've got another baby at our house." "Pooh! That's nothing. We've got another new papa at ours."—St. Paul News.

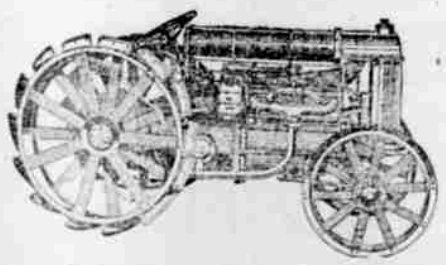
Fordson
TRADE MARK

Farm Tractor

The Fordson cuts the cost of preparing land almost to half of what it costs with horses. But even more important is the fact that the Fordson saves from thirty to fifty percent of the farmer's time. And time saved—getting fields in shape to plant in the proper season; getting things done when they should be done—means money to the farmer. Besides it helps greatly in solving the labor problem.

As ever, the machine way is proving more efficient, faster, easier than the old hand way. In the factory, the machine increases production, saves labor—produces more at less cost. And that is what the Fordson does on the farm. The Fordson way is the machine way of farming. Besides it helps the labor problem.

The Fordson's first cost is low; and the after or operating cost is low. It is a compact, easily handled tractor, backed by the greatest tractor service organization in the world.



We are Fordson dealers. Not only do we sell Fordson tractors, but we carry a stock of Fordson parts and employ Fordson mechanics to help the farmers get the best results from the Fordson. Let us demonstrate the Fordson on your own farm.
