The new Paramount-Arterati pic-ture, "Told in the Hills," which will be shown at the Majestic theatre tonight, features Major Robert War-wick, who recently returned to America, after several months ser-vice on General Pershing's staff in Figure.

Major Warwick was among the flies to volunteer when Atherica took part in the war, and served overseas as Captain. He was actively engaged on several fronts. His first picture upon resuming his stage career was "Secret Service," a Paramount-Arteraft production of William Gillette's tamous play. In it Major Warwick proved decisively that he possessed the same fire and sincerity that has charactorized his work in the past. Told in the Hills," presents him in a heroic western role that is expected to further enhance his reputation as a dramatic actor of the first rank.

An unusually powerful cast has been assembled to support Major Warwick, inclinding Ann Little, Tom Forman, Wanda Hawley, Elleen Persy and Monte Blue George Melford directed the picture. Major Warwick was among the

DOGS ONCE CALLED VERMIN

Only in Comparatively Recent Years Have They Received Recognition Under English Laws.

Our laws regarding dog bites, which Judge Ciner declares to be full of anomalies, are all of modern date. says Tit-Bits.

There seems to be no reference to dogs in any law *passed before the accession of Queen Victoria. In a case heard by Mr. Justice Eliot in 1535 it was ruled that dogs were vermin, and for that reason the church would not degrade itself by taking tithes of them. Nor was a dog the subject of larceny at common law, the ruling being that "a man shall not hang for a dog."
Parliament first began to notice dogs in 1838, by passing a statute increasing "the resources of civilization" against the lawless doings of Irish

Ten years later, dog fighting, bull baiting and bear baiting were prohib ited by parliament. Hetween 1854 and 1882 no fewer than eight statutes were passed regulating the condition and social status of the dog, one of which placed him in a position of a tax-payer. In addition to these which applied throughout the United King--a special act was framed to curb the sheep-worrying propensities of dogs in Scotland,

A Friend from Home

One evening at the restaurant, had stepped away from the rack for a few moments and as it was returning I heard someone shout:

"Why, Ann Whitson, where did you come from?"

I hardly knew the tall chap that rushed toward me with outstretched hand, but as he came nearer, I rec-ognized the Irish eyes, red hair, and even the freckles of Jimmy Calla-han.

I almost kissed him right then and there, I was so eager for the sight of someone from home.

of someone from home.

"Ann, Ann! Where have you been? When I went home from school two months ago, they told me you had gone away and left no address. Mr. Halsey and Kenneth have tried to find you everywhere. I don't think it was fair of you to act like that. Mr. Halsey was so good to you. What are you doing here? May I eat at your table?"

"I have no table, but you may hang your hat on my rack."

"What"

"Yes, Jimmy. Times have changed since you used to bring the groceries to mother. I'm earning my own living now."

ies to mother. I'm earning my own living now."

"Can you shake the hat rack long enough to go out and eat with me?"

"I'll try to Jimmier Come on over to the rack, and I'll ask Mamle."

"There, I've caught you at it my girlie, said a gutural voice close to my ear. "I knew you were just pretending to be so nice. It's easy enough for you to make a date if it's the right man."

"What do you mean, you cur 'snaped Jimmy turning around.

"What's it to you? Does she belong to you?"

For an answer Jimmy's arm shot out and the man measured his own length on the floor.

In moment all was confusion. The manager, Johnson, and Seliers, the house detective, were instantly on the spot. Horton had cut his mouth in the fall and was a gruesome sight as the detective helped him up. The manager attempted to rush Jimmy's fighting blood was up, and he would have none of it.

"Young man, you can't make a roughhouse in here. Get out at once. And you too, young lady, go with him. I've had enough trouble with you. You remember don't you, that i took you in when you were en your uppers?"

"I'll be glad to get out of here. Let's go, Ann," said Jimmy.

"Hold on there," chimed in Sellers. "I want your name and address as it is probable that Horton will sue you for assault and didn't I hear you call this woman by some other name than she gave us?"

"Come on now, speak up. I want

"Let him ake you to our house after you've had your dinner and I'll come home as quickly as I can. It's likely Johnson will keep me as long as he can tonight because he knows I'm your friend. He will want to mix me up in the rumpus.

"She's a dandy girl, Ann." said Jimmy, as we started out.

"Yes, she's the best friend I have in the world.

"No, she isn't Ann. I'm the best friend you have in the world.

I looked up at the stars as we waited for a taxl, and my heart grew warm, as I thought of Jimmy Callahan and Mamie Riley.
