It has been shown by the testimony of Mr. Cox's own cam-paign managers that the $4,000,000 which the Republican managers hope to raise for all political purposes this year is not more than can legitimately be expended for this purpose, and that these frank Democratic managers would also like to have a similar amount, but don't see any way of get-

SENATOR HARDING GUARANTEES FAIR DEAL FOR FARMER

WOULD PUT END TO PRICE FIXING OF FARM PRODUCTS

In Address Before Minnesota State Fair Republican Numinee Shows Profound Understanding of Farming and Its Problems.

Minneapolis, (Special),-"The time has come when, as a nation, we must determine upon a definite agricultural policy. We must decide whether we States a self-sustaining nation-which means that we shall grow within our own boundaries all of the staple food products needed to maintain the highest type of civilization-or whether we shall continue to exploit our agricultural resources for the benefit our industrial and commerical life, and to leave to posterity the task of finding food enough, by strong-arm methods, if necessary, to support the coming hundreds of millions.

"I believe in the celf-sustaining, in dependent, self-relian) nation, agricul-turally, industrially end politically. We are then the guaranters of our own security and are equal to the task." So declared Senator Farding in a masterly address before the Minnesota State Fair here, in which be revealed a most profound understanding of agriculture, its problems and its rela-tion to the farmer and the consumer in the cities. This speech has been described as the greatest speech on agri-culture which has ever been made by a Presidential candidate.

Among other things he said: "A good many years ago a Chines philosopher uttered a profound truth when he said: The well-being of a people is like a tree; agriculture is its root, manufacture and commerce are its branches and its life; if the root is injured the leaves fall, the branches break and the tree dies,"

Cause for Concern.

Cause for Concern.

"It may seem strange to many good people that at this particular time any one should quote this saying of a wise cid Chinese. Never in all our history have prices of farm products ruled so high, measured in dollars, as during the past four years. Farm land in the great surplus-producing states has advanced to unheard of prices, with every indication that, but for the tight money conditions, it would go still money conditions, it would go still money conditions, it would go still higher. Apparently the farmers of the higher. Apparently the farmers of the land are enjoying unprecedented prosperity. Why then, even by implication, suggest that something may be wrong with our agriculture, and that the trouble may be communicated to our manufactures and commerce? People in the cities are disposed to think that if there is anything wrong it is in the cities where food is selling at such high prices, and not in the course. in the cities where food is selling at such high prices, and not in the compared high prices, and not in the compared high problems see in the present agricultural situation certain conditions which give cause for real concern to every lover of his country."

He then referred in a most interesting way to the development of the great central west and sketched briefly the settlement of the great central valleys, as follows:

"Through the homestend law the government gave a farm of the richest bys, as follows;

"Through the homestend law the government gave a farm of the richest land in the world to every man who wanted one. Railroads were built, the prairies were plowed up, and almost overolight the agricultural production of the United States increased by 50 per cent. Grains were produced and sold at the bare cost of utilizing the soil, and the farmers of the older states to the east were smothered by this flood of cheap grain. The only thing that could be done with this describing that could be done with this describing and the could be done with the states to the cast were smothered by this flood of cheap grain. The only thing that could be done with this describing that the state of the farmers of the central west as a result of their over production, and then of the gradual indexectment which began about 1005 when the increased population in the class began to catch up with farm productions.

dieties, and how this increased dedentally it required, the candidacy of Governor Cox to introduce into a national campaign the doctrine that it is possible for the people of the United States to buy their own government, unless Mr. Cox unconsciously means to convey the idea that in this campaign the people are to buy back their government from the autocracy which has selined it and refuses to let go.

Finally it has been conclusively demonstrated that if the Democratic party is to secure any money to waste in a vain effort to achieve a Democratic victory that manay must come exclusively from men of the Colonel Deeds' type and the Dayton aircraft Fundershand, and from the Wall street interpartonal financiers, who alone will profit through the participation of the United States in Wilson's League of Nations.

All of these conclusions have been Nations.

All of these conclusions have been demonstrated by sworn testimony before the Senate Committee with a mathematical precision which would have met the eathusiastic approbation of the late Mr Euclid. Governor Cox's great expose has petered out. It was a false alarm.

Let's get back to the issues of the campaign.

fortunate results in agriculture, grow-og out of war conditions, especially the premium put on grain growing at the expense of livestock production. the expense of livestock production. He referred to the heavy losses suffered by many livestock producers and feeders, and pointed out the urgent need of restoring the balance between livestock and grain production as quickly as possible. On this subject he said:

quickly as possible. On this subject he said:

"For two outstinding reasons the maintenance of a normal balance between livestock and grain production is a matter of antional concern. One is that we are a meat-eating people, and should have a fairly uniform supply at a reasonable price. Conditions which either greatly stimulate or greatly discourage livestock production result in prices altogether too high for the average consuming public or altogether too low for the producer. The other is that the over-stimulation of grain production depletes the fertility of our land, which is our greatest national asset, and results in a greater supply than can be consumed at a price profitable to the producer, and finally to widespread agricultural distress from which all of our people saffer."

Speaking of the trend of prices of Speaking of the trend of prices of farm products during the next two or three years, he said that no one could forecast them with any accuracy. That is a nation we are undergoing the same experience that the individual undergoes when recovering from a long and dangerous illness. And then he made this significant statement:

"It must be evident, however, to any one who has given the matter even superficial consideration that we have now come to the end of the long period of agricultural exploitation in the United States. No longer are there creat and easy and awalting areas of fertile land awalting the land hungry. We have now under the plow practically all of our easily-tillable land, though tile areas await reclamation and development by that genius and determination which ever have made nature respond to human needs. Additions of consequence, which we may make to our forming area, from this nature respond to human needs. Additions of consequence, which we may make to our farming area, from this time on, must come by putting water on the dry lands of the arid and semi-arid country, or by taking water off of the swamp lands, of which we have large areas in some sections, or by digging the stumps out of the cut-over timber lands of the north and south.

Other Alternative an Unbarne One.

Other Alternative an Unhappy One.
"If we should unhappily choose the course of industrial and commercial promotion at the expense of agricul-ture, cities will continue to grow at the expense of the rural community, ag-riculture will inevitably break down and finally destroy the finest rural civilization, with the greatest possibili-ties the world has ever seen. Decreased farm production will make dear food and we shall be obliged to send our ships to far away nations in search of cheap foodstuffs, the importation of which is sure to intensify agricultural discouragement and distress at home.

If, on the other hand, we shall determine to build up here a self-sus-taining nation—and what lover of his country can make a different choice? country can make a different choice?

—then we must at once set about the development of a system of agriculture which will enable us to feed our people abundantly, with some spare for export in years of plenty, and at prices export in years of plenty, and at prices which will insure to the farmer and his family both financial rewards and educational, social and religious living conditions fairly comparable to those offered by the cities. A sound system of agriculture can not be maintained on any other basis. Anything short of a fair return upon invested capital, and a fair wage for the labor which goes into the crops, and enough in addition to enable the farmer to maintain the fertility of his soil, and insure against natural inzards will drive large numbers of farmers to the cities."

serve large numbers of farmers to the cities."

Senator Harding made it perfectly clear that this is a problem in which city people have just as much interest as the farmer. That unless we can work out a rational and fair agricultural policy, the citit to the city will continue and our trouble will grow constantly worse.
