Umpqua Staff Is Organized

At a meeting of the student council of the Student Body Association of the High School held last night, the Umpqua staff for 1921 was organized, and plans discussed to make this years annual book, the best one that has yet been published. The various editors will commence the work of gathering the material at once. The staff selected is as follows: Managing Editor, Glenn Britt; Editor, Dorothy Orcutt; Assistant editor, James Pickens; Business manager Burton Hutton; Society editor, Faye Geddes; Literary editor, Clarence Church; Joke editor, Gladys Raffety; Sporting editor, Lorraine Conlee; Subscription manager, James McClintock; Senior class reporter, Adele Bemis; Junior class reporter, Dorothy Eddy; Sophomore class reporter, Ethel Marks; Freshman class reporter, Paul Trueblood; Cartoonist, Bob Chilson; Faculty manager of athletics, C. J. Everett; Student manager of boys basket ball, Sam Campbell; Student manager of girls basket ball, Ruth Burnett; Girls athletic advisor, Miss Ruth Ann Wilson.

Other matters which the student body council took up for discussion was the adoption of soccer football as a high school sport this winter for those who do not play basket ball. They also discussed the working out of a schedule of inter-class basket ball games. The question of soccer football will be placed before the student body for their vote at a future meeting. In the future, according to the basket ball schedule, each class will have an opportunity to play the other three classes, and the winners will be decided on a percentage basis. The first game is to played on the 12th of November. A dramatic reading contest will also be held before the assembly on that date. Much interest is being shown in these inter class activities, and, although they are new this year, future success is well assured.

Receives Book From Author

Forest Supervisor W. F. Ramsdell today received a copy of Frederick Trevor Hill's latest book, "Tales Out of Court," which is dedicated to a number of officers with whom Mr. Hill was associated in France, and Mr. Ramsdell's name is one of those contained in the dedication.

The book was sent to Mr. Ramsdell by the author and contains a short pencilled notation on the flyleaf recalling an event which occurred in France, when Mr. Hill, then a Lieut. Colonel, was trying to make a gang of Spaniards understand his desires, but only confusing them the more, when Mr. Ramsdell, then a First Lieutenant, came along and succeeded in getting the Spaniards at work. The author is one of the leading attorneys of New York City, and has published some of the best known novels, as well as being the writer of several historical volumes and short stories.

HER DAUGHTER AND HIS SON.

BY IDAH McGLONE GIBSON

A Scene in a Restaurant.

"Do you mean to tell me," I asked, "that Kenneth is drinking? Why, I didn't suppose anyone drank since prohibition came."

"Why, foolish child," answered Jerry, "didn't you know that almost every rich man in the country laid in a large stock of liquor? I suppose Kenneth Halsey's father has thousands of dollars' worth in his cellar. Can't you see that Kenneth is not strictly sober at this moment?"

As he spoke, we looked across to the table where the gay party had seated itself. Kenneth's arm was resting across the back of Grace Cameron's chair, almost touching that little golden curl that always intrigued him, and it seemed that someone had made a hilarious remark, for there was much loud laughter, above which I distinguished Kenneth's voice saying:

"It's a shame, boys, that we cannot have a glass of wine at the restaurants with dinner. After this I think I will entertain all my parties at home. But you see, father likes to be alone once in a while and he told me yesterday that he would consider it a great favor if I would entertain my friends at a restaurant after this, instead of at his house."

Jimmy and Jerry exchanged glances, for they, too, had heard Kenneth's speech, and they understood why Mr. Halsey had asked his son to entertain his guests where it was impossible for them to get liquor.

Whether it was because we three had focused our gaze upon the back of Kenneth Halsey's head or whether it was because of some premonition of something going on behind him that made him the center of interest I do not know. But at that moment Kenneth turned so quickly that he overturned his own chair and most rudely brushed Grace Cameron away from him in his rush to our table.

"Why, Ann," he almost shouted, "is it really, truly you? Dad will be beside himself with joy now that we have found you," and without ceremony he kissed me full on the lips.

"Where did you find her, Jimmy?" he asked, utterly unconscious of the sensation we were making in the room. "I don't think it was fair of you not to at least let dad know when you found her."

"Sit down, Ken," said Jimmy. "You are making Ann very conspicuous. The whole room is buzzing and Grace Cameron and her mother are looking very angry."

"I don't care what anybody says or how anybody looks," said Kenneth, again clasping both my hands. "Dad and I have been looking for Ann for years, it seems, and only for dad's old-fashioned notions, I'd have had a private detective on your track long ago, my girl. Come on, Jim! Come on, Jerry! All of you come over to my table. I want to introduce Ann to my party."

"But I can't go, Kenneth," I whispered, "I am not fit—I have been working all day—to go among ladies and gentlemen in evening dress."

"My dear child, you are fit to go any place with me, no matter what kind of a frock you have on. Do you remember the bathing suit you used to wear—the one that everybody used to make such a fuss about?" he asked with a laugh.

"Hush, Ken, you are talking too loud," I said with a very deep blush, for I clearly perceived he had been drinking altogether too much. "You will excuse me though, won't you?" I continued. "Is your father in town?"

"No, but I'm going to wire him tonight and he'll be in on the first train in the morning. We will both come to see you directly."

"All right, dear boy," I answered, "come about four o'clock in the afternoon."

"What's the matter with us coming to take you to luncheon? I think dad will be in by that time."

Jerry Hathaway moved uneasily, and I answered: "I shall be engaged until after lunch."

"An engagement which you cannot break for dad and me after all these years? Why, Ann, I'd break any engagement in the world for you."

"Miss Cameron is beckoning for you," said Jim, softly, and as Kenneth turned to go back Jim said: "There's one engagement he wouldn't break for you, Ann," and alas, I knew it too well.

TIBETAN DEAD NOT BURIED

After Slicing Away the Flesh the Bones Are Pulverized and Then Fed to the Vultures.

To bury bodies in the earth is to contaminate them, is the Tibetan view, according to Rev. D. F. McGillicuddy, pastor of St. Stephen's church, of Worcester, Mass., who penetrated this forbidden country in 1890.

Instead of burying their dead they slice the flesh from all bodies and feed it to the birds. After skillfully cutting away the flesh they pulverize the bones and feed them to the vultures.

The temples used by these people for centuries are still standing. In front of many of them are stumps of trees covered with butter, in which devotees stick their offerings of coins.

Tibet is peopled by a branch of the Mongolian race. The 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 population are a mixture of Chinese and Tibetans, as the races intermarried. They believe in both polyandry and polygamy.

It is the most extensive elevated country in the world, containing 750,000 square miles, with an elevation varying from 8,000 to 14,000 feet. Its climate is principally bleak and cold, although the summers in the southern part are mild and pleasant.

The first white man to enter Lhasa, the capital, was Sir Francis Younghusband, who fought his way there in 1904.

Dalai Lama, religious head of the Buddhist faith, which is the national religion, was so overcome by the fact that infidels had trodden the streets of the forbidden city, that he fled the country, and was for many years a wanderer in northern China.

BOOK MANY CENTURIES OLD

New Testament in Manuscript, Marvelously Preserved, Was Brought to New York From Armenia.

One of the oldest New Testament manuscripts in the world, and the oldest, so far as is known, in the United States, was brought from Europe by John Hahn, a Hungarian. A dozen or more full-page colored illustrations of incidents in the life of Jesus begin the volume. These are followed by two pages of historical data and several more comprising a calendar.

Little is known of the history of this ancient Testament. A brief account of its later adventures is given in the center of the book, written in modern Armenian by Jezekiel Arshaguni, who, in 1895, wrote what he knew of its story. During the reign of Abdul Hamiam, when the Turks were persecuting the Armenian people, pillaging homes, demolishing chapels and carrying away all the books, this volume was saved because it was hidden in water, doubtless in a well, until the danger had passed. The book was equal to the test. The ink stayed fast and the parchment firm. Only the red leather cover was loosened from the canvas back, showing its wooden foundation and a scrap of silk lining.

Employed Two Parachutes.

Though the design and operation of parachutes have been the subject of practical experiments since the eighteenth century, the American air service is the first, it is believed, to test the action and interaction of parachutes used in pairs, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. In experiments performed at Mitchel field, Long Island, N. Y., a sergeant strapped one parachute on his back, as usual, and a second on his chest. Thus encumbered, he was carried, in a two-seater plane, to a height of approximately one mile. Here he walked out on a wing, pulled the release of the rearward chute, and stepped into space. The white bag opened nicely, and he drifted down to within less than 1,000 feet. Here he pulled the second release, and the second parachute opened above him without entangling or interfering with the first.

Grouchiness Destroys Friendship.

Nobody, of course, expects a man to be eternally radiant with cheerfulness and wreathed in smiles. But people will not tolerate urbanity one day and grouchiness the next in perpetual alternation. People will not tolerate it because they do not have to. Pleasant friends who are more reliable in their manner are not difficult to find. There is no need of putting up with a "grouch."

Consequently the moody, instead of blaming others for their unpopularity, extraordinary, would far better reproach themselves. They are the ones with whom the fault lies, and until they overcome their moodiness they may rest assured that solitude and unhappiness will be their portion. — H. Addington Bruce in Chicago Daily News.

Parrot a Brainy Bird.

We may question the veracity of some of the parrot stories that are told by admiring owners, but we cannot doubt that the parrot is endowed with remarkable brain power. A good bird will interpret the moods of those about it in a most uncanny way. A parrot known to the writer somehow seems to know instantly when his mistress is amused, and will join in the laughter after a dinner-table joke with such spontaneity that any stranger might credit him with an accurate appreciation of the humor of the moment.

The Main Question.

"Sir, I come to ask you for your daughter's hand."

"Well, young man, how much are you prepared to put into it each month if I give it to you?"
