

Good Baking

Sterling Quality

The name OLYMPIC on a sack of flour has a like meaning to the "Sterling" mark on silverware. The same quality throughout. Your new sack of OLYMPIC Flour will prove equal to the last one. Rigid tests in milling assure it.

Wheat Hearts for Breakfast insure a good disposition all day.

For crisp, brown pancakes, use OLYMPIC Flour. Makes waffles too.

Your grocer knows this and sells it in 10, 24 and 49 pound sacks.

HER DAUGHTER AND HIS SON.

Mamie's Friendship.

"What do you mean, I don't need protection?" flashed Mamie with her eyes twinkling. "Surely that's not a compliment."

"Mamie," countered Jimmie, "I wasn't thinking of your beauty. I was just gently intimating that you could take care of yourself under any circumstances."

"Say, Ann, I can get you a job with the show," said Mamie irrelevantly, "if you want to come."

"No, dear, you know I cannot sing."

"But you can dance like a fairy and you're easy to look at," insisted Mamie.

"But I, too, have a new job," I informed her, somewhat triumphantly. "I'm going to help Jimmie write advertisements."

I wondered if a little shade passed over Mamie's face, or was it my imagination. It was gone so quickly I could not tell, and like the brick she was she exclaimed heartily, "Fine!"

"And, Mamie, I found my money."

"What?"

Then I told her the story. The only comment she made was: "I didn't know that you knew Jerry Hathaway." Then turning to Jim she said: "I hate to send you home, little boy, but can't you see that both Ann and I are at the point of death, we are so sleepy?"

Jim hurriedly made his exit, promising to bring over samples of the kind of advertising I was to write and to take me over to the store to get some new ideas for copy.

"Come day after tomorrow, Jimmie," I said.

"Why not tomorrow?" he asked quickly.

"Have you forgotten that Jerry Hathaway and Ken and his father are coming? And among other things I shall have to find a new place to live, if Mamie is going away."

"Well," said Mamie briskly, "all that will have to be done today instead of tomorrow, for the hands of the clock reached the meeting and passing hour a long time ago."

Whenever Mamie gets interested or excited, she always drops into a quaint Celtic way of expressing herself and as I heard her speak about the "meeting and passing hour," I looked, startled, at the clock and found that it was nearly two in the morning.

And just let me tell you, Mr. Jimmie Callahan, admonished Mamie, half in earnest and half jokingly, "that when Ann gets into her new home, without mother or chaperone, you will not be allowed to remain after ten, if I know what I am talking about."

"Well, just because of that," said Jim, audaciously, "and because it is the last time, and because I expect you girls will never let me do it again, I am going to do it now."

Before either of us realized what he was getting at he stooped and kissed me and then walked over to Mamie and kissed her too.

Before we had either recovered from our surprise he had gone.

For a moment after the front door in the lower hall had slammed we said nothing, and then Mamie's face broke into smiles as she exclaimed: "Will you look at that now? Both of us would have slapped a man's face for less, and yet when this young Irish cannibal kisses us, we grin like kittens. He certainly has a way with him."

"Mamie, you're as tired and sleepy as I am, but oh, my dear, my dear, what am I going to do without you? I should have died over and over again if you had not been here to comfort me. No one could have been kinder to me than you have been."

"I am gladder than I can tell to have you say that, Ann, dear. And do you know you've helped me a lot?"

I looked surprised even while I put my arms about her and kissed her warmly.

"You see, Ann, until you came, I never hoped to be anything more than the rough and ready Irish girl who checked the hats in some restaurant. I had some natural wit, and I was clever enough to see, when I watched the young women come in to dine with their sweethearts, what it might mean if I could only make some of my hopes and dreams come true. I always knew I could sing, and since I have been in the restaurant I know I can act—and some day the world is going to know it, too. Just watching you, Ann, so different from me, has been an inspiration."

BEST FATTENING LAMBS BLOCKY, 60-POUND TYPE.

CORVALLIS, Nov. 9.—Ideal feeder lambs to fatten for the meat trade are thrifty, smooth, blocky, black-faced animals weighing about 60 pounds when put on feed, says the agricultural college experiment station report, "Fattening Lambs," just published as station bulletin 175.

Lambs weighing less than 50 pounds are usually held over and marketed as yearlings. Those weighing 50 or more should be ready for market without further feeding.

The good feeder lambs have not been stunted. An early lamb that has had good feed all summer and is still only a feeder in the fall most likely has something wrong with him.

Late lambs and those from scanty feed districts usually make good feeders.

Methods of feeding, both under sheds and in open lots, have a great deal to do with the success and profits of the feeding. Those things are fully explained in the bulletin, which can be had on application to the college at Corvallis.

THE USE OF A PLATFORM.

Sam and Rastus were seated in a Jim Crow car on a southern railway, enroute to a plantation for the cotton-picking season. They were discussing politics, with particular reference to a coming election. Rastus was a rabid partisan of the incumbent representative.

"Well," said Sam, "Ah likes him all right, Ah guess; but his platform ain't no good."

"Platfo'm!" snorted Rastus. "Platfo'm! Say, nigger, doan' you know dat a political platfo'm is jes' like a platfo'm on one o' dese yere railroad cars—hit ain't meant to stan' on; hit's jes' meant to get in on!"

And get more genuine chewing satisfaction, when you use this class of tobacco.

This is because the full, rich, real tobacco taste lasts so long, you don't need a fresh chew nearly as often.

And a small chew gives more real satisfaction than a big chew of the ordinary kind ever did.

Any man who uses the Real Tobacco Chew will tell you that.
