

Facts for Sick Women

Reliable Information

All American women know of the great success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in restoring to health women who suffered from ailments peculiar to their sex, yet there are some who are skeptical and do not realize that all that is claimed for it is absolutely true—if they did, our laboratory would not be half large enough to supply the demand, though today it is the largest in the country used for the manufacture of one particular medicine.

The Facts contained in the following two letters should prove of benefit to many women:

Buffalo, N. Y.—"I suffered with organic inflammation and displacement. When lifting I had such pain and bearing down that I was not able to stand up, and it hurt me to walk or go up or down stairs. I was going to a doctor without any result and he said the safest thing would be to have an operation. A lady who told me she had had three operations and was not well until she took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I kept on with it until I was cured. I always use Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills and they are fine. Everything used to turn sour on my stomach and the Liver Pills relieved that."—Mrs. A. ROOKES, 293 Fargo Avenue, Buffalo, N. Y.

Sacramento, Calif.—"I had organic trouble and had such terrible pain and swelling in the lower part of my side that I could not stand on my feet or even let the bed clothes touch my side. I gave up my work thinking I would not be able to go back for months. My mother advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as it had saved her life at one time, and it put me in a wonderful condition in a couple of weeks, so I can keep on working. I work in a department store, and have to stand on my feet all day and I do not have any more pains. I surely recommend your Vegetable Compound to all my friends and you may use these facts as a testimonial."—BERTHA J. PANKIN, 3220 M St., Sacramento, Calif.

HER DAUGHTER AND HIS SON.

BY IDAH MCGLONE GIBSON

Fearing the Worst.

I hung up the receiver and rasher back to Mr. Halsey. I found him slumped down in a chair looting the picture of despair.

"Was that for me," he asked quickly.

"Yes, it was Jimmy Callahan. He says the doctors think Kenneth is regaining consciousness and they want you there as he may be able to give you some explanation and as there is a possibility that he might sink into a stupor again."

"Well, I'll get a notary and go right over. I know my secretary is still there."

"Jimmy said that first you had better get in touch with the owners or managers of the newspapers if you have any influence with them. He says the waiting room at the hospital is full of reporters."

"Oh, I can't do that. I might be needed at the hospital. You do it for me, Ann."

"I don't know any of them and Jimmie says that I had better go on over to Cameron's. He says that Mrs. Cameron reports Grace to be very ill too."

"Let her die," he said vindictively.

"You telephone for a stenographer, immediately, and I'll give you some letters to take to my friends on the newspapers."

"I can do the letters if you'll dictate them straight to the machine. I don't know shorthand yet."

"You splendid child. Let's get at it, dear."

I stepped to the corner of the room and took the cover off the typewriter and he hurriedly dictated several letters. It was fortunate that he happened to know some influential persons on all of the newspapers. As he finished, the telephone rang again and Jimmie's voice said:

"Tell Mr. Halsey that Kenneth is conscious though very weak. He keeps calling for his father. Tell Mr. Halsey to come right over."

"Is that a good sign Jim?" I asked hastily.

"It seems to me that unless the doctors thought he was beyond all help they would not let him talk for fear of making him weaker."

"Well, they're going to let him talk in this case," said Jimmie and hung up the receiver.

I was hurriedly back to Mr. Halsey and he insisted on my taking a taxi which had been waiting at the door.

For the next two hours I was so busy interviewing the "higher ups" of the newspaper offices that I did not have time to telephone the hospital. I knew however, in my heart, that I was doing something of great importance for Ken, and I put aside all selfish desires of knowing his condition from hour to hour.

I found the newspaper men splendid when I got to them and I found that Mr. Halsey's name was the open sesame to the inner offices everywhere. Each promised that no word of scandal would get in the papers and I felt very much relieved when I was at last able to go to the hospital. On the way over the nervous tension became almost unbearable. I wondered if I would find all hope gone when I arrived and the thought gave me such despair that I was physically ill. Again came the great change from my mood of last night and this morning when all the world seemed beautiful, and I had said to myself that life was worth living after all. Now my breath came cold across my lips when I murmured Kenneth's name, and I almost felt, as did Mr. Halsey, that Grace Cameron had been his Nemesis. How great a Nemesis, however, I did not dream until later when I reached the hospital and Mr. Halsey told me all.

DIALECTS MANY AND VARIED

Genesis of the Traveling American May Be Pretty Well Recognized by His Speech.

A survey just completed shows that 33 languages are in daily use in New York, not including three or four kinds of English. There is highbrow English, lowbrow English and the R-less variety, besides the strange, inexplicable cockney kind, which gives all "er" sounds the sound of "or." We say inexplicable, for we have never seen explained why in certain New York vernacular third is "thold," bird is "bold" and curse is "coise."

Sometime, somewhere, that enunciation must have begun—whether on the Bowery or in Harlem or even in Broadway, nobody seems to know. Was it in existence in 1800? The New York literature of that era does not seem to so indicate. The converse of the foot-blacks and juvenile street sweepers of the mild and innocuous fiction of those days reveal almost a Sunday school diction. The "coise" has swept over Manhattan since then. It came with the melting pot and may be part of it, for all we know.

The United States is large enough to contain a number of dialects and already it does contain them, so that one's genesis is pretty well distinguished by his speech. We know New England by its "lofting" laugh and they know us by our "larding" one. "Ask" in some parts of the South is as flattened out almost as the "a" in "bake," while still remaining "ask" in Massachusetts.

Our e pluribus unum language is truly that kind, and likely to become more pluribus as the country grows older.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

TOMBS THAT ARE INDIVIDUAL

Resting Places of Chinese Rulers So Constructed as to Reveal Character of Occupants.

At the Tung Ling, or Eastern Tombs of the Manchus, nature has worked hand in hand with man to produce a harmonious whole, writes Roy Chapman Andrews in Asia Magazine. Most of the trees about the tombs have been planted, but they have been so cleverly chosen and placed that they look as if they had grown just where in nature's scheme of things, they ought to be. There is nothing glaringly artificial in the appearance of the park.

Although the tombs are alike in general plan, they are at the same time as individual as were the emperors themselves. Each is a subtle expression of the character of the one who sleeps beneath the yellow roof. The tomb of Ch'ien-Lung, the artist emperor, lies not far away from that of the empress dowager. Stately, beautiful in its simplicity, it is an indication of his life and deeds. In striking contrast is the palace built by the empress, for her eternal dwelling. Extravagantly decorated, valiantly declaring to the world the millions spent upon it, it represents admirably the personality of the iron-willed ruler who in life held her place by force and intrigue and lavish expenditures and who was determined to be known, even in death as the greatest of the great. But a hundred years from now when Ch'ien-Lung's mausoleum, like the painting of an old master, has been made even more beautiful by the touch of age, that of the empress will be worn and tarnished.

Young Author Falls Down.

A young author sends me the manuscript of a story. He claims he has a new idea. His "new idea" is this: A young man and woman are married in the usual way, and during their honeymoon, love each other with great devotion.

But in a year the young man finds he has tired of his wife, from seeing her so much; from too close association. He supposes, of course, that she has not tired of him; such a possibility does not enter his mind. However, he resolves to be a square man and confess to his wife just how he feels. She also talks frankly, and it develops that the wife is as tired of the husband as the husband is of the wife.

I am compelled to report to the young author that this is no development of a new fact in life.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

From Frying to Flying.

Aviation is occupying a great deal of attention in Canada these days. It is highly probable that the helium gas rising out of the ground in Alberta and other parts of the country for family cooking will one day be carrying English lighter-than-air flying machines, says Motor Life. It has been reported that there is enough of this gas to supply the entire British empire for many years. It lacks only 10 per cent of the weight-supporting ability of the highly inflammable hydrogen and is equally satisfactory.

Sweets Losing Popularity in France.

France has lost its sweet tooth. Recent official statistics show that, because sugar was unobtainable during the war, children born between 1914 and 1919 have been educated by their parents not to require sugar in their drinks and food.

As a result the consumption of sugar in France has fallen to one-eighth the pre-war mark.

France has become such an unprofitable market for fine chocolates that nearly all the big manufacturers are sending nine-tenths of their output to the United States and South America.
